Higher Officials May be Involved

Eighteen Affidavits Disclose Corrupt Practices in Montreal Civic Service.

MONTREAL, July 31.—The men "higher up" will be involved in the charges of tolls and extortion laid against foremen in the city roads department, in connection with which one arrest has already been made and others are expected to follow, was the declaration of Ald. Blumenthal. With affidavits from nearly twenty more laborers in the employ of the roads department, all declaring that they were forced to pay heavy tolls in order to retain their positions, to add to the declarations he has already placed in the hands of the Board of Control, Ald. Blumenthal believes that the web he is weaving around the graft suspects is now almost complete.

The police and detective departments are active, and the warrents calling for the arrest of two more foremen were said to have been sworn out this morning. The names of the additional employees implicated in the alleged graft are contained in another affidavit which, signed by eighteen or twenty more laborers, was presented to the Board of Control through Mr. Godfrey this morning. Pierto Cielli was the first man arrested, being taken yesterday afternoon.

The Board of Control members are completely nonplussed that such a condition of affairs as that even already revealed should exist and the opinion is expressed that the flood of affidavits obtained by Ald. Blumenthal would seem to indicate that a regular system of extortion has been practiced in the employment of laborers for doing city work.

Seal Caught in Montreal Harbor

MONTREAL, July 31.—After several exciting days fully occupied in dodging its pursuers a seal which had wandered up the St. Lawrence for two thousand miles finally fell a victim last night to an oar in the hands of John Craig, a foreman employed on Bickerdike Pier. Craig was coming home from work in a boat rowed by Pat Nolan, one of his workmen, when they saw the animal floating on a plank near Windmill Point. According to Craig, the men whistled until they got close to the seal, which seemed to enjoy the harmony and showed no fear. "I heard," said Craig, "that if you whistled the seal would stay still and listen and bob its head up to hear better. So we did. I just hit it a little tap on the ear and we nabbed it. It was hardly hurt at all."

Craig and Nolan now have the seal, which, in Craig's words, is "alive and kicking in captivity. When asked what they intended to do with it, he said they would keep it until they could get a good price for it. The animal is nearly five feet long and weighs about a hundred and fifty pounds. Its coloring is unusual being a silver grey.

Daughter of Millionaire Seeks a Divorce

PARIS, July 31.—The Countess Laszio Szechenyi formerly Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, youngest daughter of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York, is on the point of demanding a divorce from her husband, according to a telegram from Budapest last night to the Petit Parisien.

The Countess's reason for this step it is stated, is that the Count lost most of his wife's dowry on the Bourse and other gambling speculations. It is alleged that he spent $7,000,000 since his marriage in New York on January 27, 1908.

Last February the Count received a deputation of Albanian chiefs, who offered the throne of the New Albania to him, but the Countess absolutely refused to entertain the idea.

PRESIDENT TO SOLVE ALONE VEXED MEXICAN PROBLEM

Opinions of Colleagues will not be Allowed to Influence Him in Arriving at Decision-- Believed That There will not be Even a Partial Recognition of the Huerta Government.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—While members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to-day were unanimous in declaring that Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson had made a most favorable impression in his discussion of the Mexican situation yesterday, positive statements of another character were being made by high authorities.

It was said authoritatively that Ambassador Wilson in his conference at the White House on Monday last had not in the slightest degree altered the President's analysis of the situation in Mexico or changed his judgment as to what is best to be done.

It was indicated to-day that a policy in regard to Mexico is rapidly taking shape in the mind of President Wilson. Announcement of this policy will be deferred, however, until the Administration has had an opportunity to see the results likely to be obtained by the efforts of certain Mexicans interested in bringing about a compromise arrangement in regard to the Presidency of Mexico.

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT AT ROSSMORE, ONT.

While Filling a Barrel of water in Bay James A, Rutter is Thrown from Wagon and Drowned in Sight of Wife and Niece.-Body Recovered

ROSSMORE, Aug 1.—Special—One of the saddest fatalities that has occurred in this vicinity in many a day, took place yesterday, when Mr. James A. Rutter, a respected resident of Rossmore, lost his life in the bay under most peculiar circumstances.

With his horse, waggon and a barrel, Mr. Rutter had gone to the bay for water, driving into the bay off Mr. D. Walker's field, east of his own home, about twenty feet out, and turning the waggon part way round, filled the barrel, and when about to replace the cover, the horse turned eastward, stepping off a ledge into deeper water. Beginning to plunge in an effort to recover its footing, Mr. Rutter sprang from the waggon in an endeavor to assist the animal, and finding himself beyond his own depth, attempted to struggle ashore, but being unable to swim, sank, and was drowned at the spot.

Mrs. Rutter, hearing her husband call whoa, to the horse, immediately, with her niece hastened to the scene, but her efforts in assistance were of no avail. Her screams brought several neighbors, but their presence was too late. The water had claimed its victim. After grappling, the body was recovered about ten o'clock last night.

Mr. Willoughby Anderson, J. P., summoned a coroner from Picton. The body was taken to the family home, and prepared for burial. Interment will be in Albury cemetery.

James A. Rutter, was about 59 years of age, born in Ameliasburg, and had resided in that district nearly all his life. He was a gardener and farmer's assistant, and possessed the respect of all who knew him. Besides his wife he leaves two sons, Charles, of Toronto; James M., of Lyons, N. Y., and two daughters, Mrs. W. Russell, of Toronto, and Miss May Rutter of the same city.

Masked Men Rob Summer Hotel

HAMILTON, Ont., July 31.—A sensational robbery occurred at the Hotel Brant, a summer hotel, on the beach, five miles from here, during the early hours of to-day.

While the night clerk was at his post, two masked men entered the front door of the hotel, which was left open owing to the extreme heat. They ordered him, at the point of a gun, to hold up his hands. After he had submitted the safe was rifled, and $2,500 in cash was taken, as well as some valuable jewelry belonging to guests.

He was not able to give any description of the men, but thinks he could identify them if they are apprehended. The city and provincial police are working on the case, but refuse to say what their suspicions are.

U. S. SUFFRAGISTS WANT CHANGE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Special—The suffragist supporters of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States visited the Senate today to plead their cause. They came, not in a solid phalanx, but two by two, each pair of exponents of the gentle doctrine of "votes for women" bent upon interviewing the Senators from their respective States. There are 96 Senators. There were 96 interviewers.

There are 48 States, so there were 48 pairs of special pleaders; but of course not all the petitioners saw their Senators.

HUERTA MAY STEP DOWN DIAZ HAS BEEN RECALLED

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 1.—Special—Felix Diaz has been ordered to forego his journey to Japan as special ambassador from the Mexican Government and to return to this capital as soon as possible.

This information comes from an absolutely reliable source. It was coupled with a statement that Diaz will leave Los Angeles for Mexico City within a day or two. The meaning of this can be surmised only, pending an official explanation as to the causes which decided Huerta to recall him after, it is generally believed, he had sent him from the country to eliminate him as a presidential possibility.

One belief is that, whatever aspirations Huerta may have entertained of succeeding to the constitutional presidency, they have been checked by his understanding that the United States Government will not countenance his remaining in politics, nor in the presidency, longer than is necessary to install another president who shall be chosen by popular vote.

It is thought probable that Huerta now desires Diaz to be in Mexico, so that he may be a candidate, and that Huerta will give him his support in preference to any other candidate.

The name of General Geronimo Trevino, who is now in Los Angeles, is being mentioned here as a candidate who would come nearer to commanding the support of all factions than any one. It is doubtful if Trevino would accept on account of his age and poor health.

Although local papers assert that recognition is assured within a few days, private despatches received here today from Washington state positively that there is no chance of the Huerta Government being recognized or of Ambassador Wilson returning to his post.

TWO COWS ON TRACK CAUSE FIVE DEATHS

Double-Headed Freight Train Strikes Sleeping Animals Near Parry Sound--Both Locomotives are Hurled Into Ditch and all But Three of Their Crews Are Instantly Killed.

PARRY SOUND, Aug 1.—Special—Two cows, asleep on the track at Beatty's Siding, were struck by an east bound freight of twenty two cars, drawn by two engines, late last evening. Both locomotives were derailed, five cars piled on top of them, and five of the eight men comprising the engine crews, were instantly killed. The other three men were thrown clear, only one being seriously hurt. The scene of the wreck is a sharp curve on the Ottawa division of the Grand Trunk Railway, about thirteen miles east of here.

MOTHER AND CHILDREN TO WALK 1,200 MILES.

New York, Aug. 1.—Special—Mrs. M. B. Chester of Middletown, N.Y., started from here today with two of her children to walk to Minneapolis. She carried a letter from Mayor Gaynor to the Mayor of Minneapolis, which she hopes to deliver some two months hence. The two children are boys, aged thirteen and fourteen. Mrs. Chester, who is costumed in the bonnet and gingham of a farmer's wife, said she had no other purpose in attempting the journey than the love of walking.

GOVERNMENT IN THE DARK

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—Special—Government officials here can give no information as to the steamer Acadia or her movements. So far as can be learned tonight the vessel was not one of the fleet chartered to carry supplies to Hudson Bay in connection with the Port Nelson terminal operations.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE LEVEL CROSSING

Welland, Aug. 1.—Special—At 6.15 this morning James Wilson was struck at the Muir street crossing by a fast eastbound passenger train. He was thrown fifty feet; his leg, arm and some ribs were broken and he sustained other injuries. He was taken to the hospital in an ambulance, but expired two hours later. Mr. Wilson was a carpenter, aged seventy-six, and was greatly respected. He leaves a son in Brantford and his wife and several other children in Chicago. He owned considerable real estate here and was on his way to repair a residence when he was killed. The crossing was a dangerous one and an inquest will be held.

MAKES GAS IT BURNS

Combined Generator and Burner Takes Place of Coal

An ingenious combination gas generator and burner is shown in the illustration. The gas takes the place of coal for the kitchen range. The apparatus sets in what would be the oven of the stove and on a wall bracket near the range is a reservoir of oil. Through a pipe this oil flows into the generator, which converts it into gas. The gas thus formed spreads through a burner pipe where it can be lighted and it heats up the top of the stove just as if there was a coal fire below. An advantage of this device in a house not provided with a regular gas stove is that it obviates the necessity of keeping a coal fire going all day, as it takes only a little while to heat a stove with it and there is no fuel wasted when no heat is needed, which is an item of economy.

No Alarm Over Premier's Health

After dealing with one or two matters awaiting his attention, Mr. Borden will likely spend a few days in the vicinity of Muskoka Lakes.

The Journal learns that reports sent out from Ottawa regarding the Premier's health are without foundation. The strenuousness of the Parliamentary session, the brunt of which was borne by Mr. Borden, made a long rest imperative, but it is understood that he is now in good health and with a few more weeks' rest will be well fitted to take up the task of preparing the legislative programme for next session and carrying out the programme of last session.

WAR SCARES READY MADE; GERMANOFFICERS ON TRIAL

Four Court-Martialed Following Sensational Disclosures Made in Parliament in April--Civilians Before Criminal Court in Near Future.

BERLIN, July 31.—The sensational disclosures of corruption in the German army made by Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist Deputy, in the Imperial Parliament on April 18, up today before a court martial convened to try the military officers charged with accepting bribes for information of pending Government contracts for arms and ammunition.

Widespread interest was aroused by the trial. Four officers of the ordnance department were brought before the judges. They were Lieutenants Tillan, Hinst, Hoge and Schleuder, to whom was entrusted the supervision of many of the ammunition and arms contracts at various arsenals and factories throughout Germany. Chief Clerk Pfeiffer and two non-commissioned officers of the ordnance corps also were in the prisoners' enclosure.

It has been charged by Dr. Liebknecht that not only were corruption and bribery on the part of the ammunition companies prevalent but that there was an organized scheme for raising war scares and thus causing the Government to spend more money on armaments.

The civilian offenders, who include the alleged briber on behalf of the ordnance companies and also the directors of these concerns, according to an official intimation will come before an ordinary criminal court for trial at a later date.

Who Trained These Intelligent Pups?

A pup is a very uncertain quantity. Above all things a pup is a very playful animal, and does not take life very seriously. In fact most pups seem to have the idea that things in general are created for their particular amusement. If they are fortunate enough to gain admission to your home, they will promptly lay hold of any article of wearing apparel within reach, and proceed to unravel or tear it to their heart's content. Now a certain citizen owns two pups which bear a striking resemblance to each other, and of course, are inseparable. Where one goes, the other goes also. One morning last week they started from the home kennel apparently on a foraging expedition, not that they needed to, because they are not of the lean and hungry kind, and bear every evidence of being well nurtured. However, as we said before, they started on a foraging expedition, and in the course of their perambulations they came across a can of milk that had evidently been left by the milkman at one of our Main street homes. They at once proceeded to empty the can, and having done this, one of them picked up the can by its handle and carried it to the front door of its owner's house. When the dog's owner opened the door there were the two pups, the one holding the can, while the other stood close beside him, ready to be admitted. The owner said the picture presented was worth many times the price of the milk, and afforded him a huge laugh. Of course the milk was replaced.—Deseronto Post.

Even senators may listen when money talks.

SELLS FLOTO—BERNI GIANT SERENADUM

Even if you do not care to visit the performance of the Sells-Floto circus when it comes here on Aug. 7, it is suggested by the management that you go down to the circus lot and listen to Berni's Giant Serenadum, which will give continuous concerts during the afternoon and evening.

This is the largest musical instrument that was ever made portable so but it could be carried on wheels. It was built at a cost of $20,000, and rivals in excellence the great organs of Salt Lake or St. Peter's. Its repertoire includes all the popular selections, operatic gems and classic renditions. You will find it near the main entrance of the Big Tent. The concert is free to all those who care to enjoy it.

Added to this, you might spend a profitable hour examining the mechanism of the huge wagon which convey circus paraphernalia from town to town. Ask some of the attendants to show you Curtis' Foolproof Wagon—it will demonstrate to you how modern ingenuity protects the laboring man against his own carelessness. After that, you might take a look at the Sells-Floto horses. They are considered the best of their kind.

The price of admission this year is still 25 cents. The seating capacity of the circus has been increased until there are now seats for ten thousand people, and there are three rings instead of two as formerly.

About the time an employee is convinced that the firm couldn't get along without him, it makes the attempt.

Honest labor is the gravedigger for most worries.

GREAT BRIDGES

Facts of Great Structures Across the Tay and Forth

Not the least of the extraordinary feats of the redoubtable bridge-builder, Sir William Arrol, was the fact that at one and the same time he carried on two such gigantic contracts as the Tay and the Forth Bridges. It was a striking tribute to his great powers of organization and to his genius for engineering on a mammoth scale. The construction of the Tay Bridge was only half-finished when he made a start with the gigantic undertaking which now spans the Firth of Forth, from the designs of Sir John Fowler and Sir Benjamin Baker. Over a year was spent in the preliminary preparations alone—the designing and making of special plant, the erection of workshops on shore, and the thousand and one things essential to the success of such a huge scheme. The cost of temporary plant ran to half-a-million sterling, and included thirty steam and other barges, tugs, launches, and boats, sixty steam cranes and winches, fifty hydraulic cranes, forty-eight steam-engines, and hydraulic jacks, hand-cranes, and drilling-machines almost innumerable; not to mention one million cubic feet of timber and sixty miles of wire. The enormous nature of this engineering wonder of the world may be gathered from the following figures: The total length is over a mile and a half, and consists of two main spans, each nearly a third of a mile long; two spans of six hundred and seventy-five feet each. In the piers there are about one hundred and twenty thousand cubic yards of masonry, and in the super-structure over forty thousand tons of steel and some fifteen thousand tons of iron.

The building of the Tay Bridge was an opportunity for a display of his engineering genius which the ambitious bridgemaker eagerly welcomed. A rigorous examination revealed the old foundations to be insecure, and it was decided to build an entirely new bridge a short distance farther up the river. Within five years from its commencement—1882 to 1887—a remarkable erection, over two miles long, and constructed at a cost of seven hundred and fifty thousand pounds, spanned the estuary, a structure strong enough to defy the fiercest gale that ever blew. It was the greatest engineering triumph of the age, until it was eclipsed by a greater—the Forth Bridge.

ATTEMPT TO BURN CHURCH

Believed to be the Work of the Suffragettes

A startling discovery was made at St. Luke's Church, Abercarn. When the church was opened a strong smell of paraffin oil became apparent, and it was found that the flooring boards and matting near the door had been soaked with oil, whilst a match had apparently been lighted and dropped, but had gone out. Outside, not far away a bottle, which had contained paraffin oil, was found. A few days previously some young ladies who were passing the church noticed smoke issuing from the building, and gave an alarm. It was then found that fire had broken out in the chancel floor, but it was quickly extinguished. There was nothing to show how the outbreak occurred, though many believed it was the work of suffragettes.

BOY'S TRAGIC DEATH

Might Have Been Saved With Prompt Action

A verdict of "Death from hanging, there being no evidence to show whether it was accidental or otherwise," was returned at an inquest in Dundalk on the body of a boy named Owen Hall, aged fifteen, who was found hanged in a straw shed. A lad named John Boyle found the deceased at the bottom of a ladder with a rope, which was hanging from the top of the ladder, round his neck. He went for an old man named James Fagan, and meantime got a knife to cut the rope, but Fagan would not allow him to cut it. Fagan said he had not interfered because he was afraid of getting into a "hobble" with the police, and the coroner said Fagan's action was, no doubt, due to ignorance, but there was a chance that the boy's life might have been saved if the rope had been cut down at once.

Aged Preacher Dead

The Rev. S. S. Allsop, the oldest active preacher in the Baptist ministry, died at Nottingham in his ninetieth year. Mr. Allsop was formerly at Burton-on-Trent, where, owing to a confusion of names, he received orders for beer while the noted brewery received orders for sermons.

Deputy Minister On Roll of Heroes

OTTAWA, July 31.—The bravery of Canada's Deputy Minister of Naval Service in saving the life of a boy at the swimming baths in Banff has just come to light from information received here in Government circles in the Capital.

Mr. Desbarats is acompanying the Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, on his present trip to the coast as the representative of the Government at the welcome extended to the New Zealand battleship. On their way through about ten days ago, the party stopped over at Banff, and in the morning the Minister, with Mr. Desbarats, and his private secretary, Miss Frances Hazen, and some others, decided upon an early morning swim. Mr. Desbarats arrived at the pool somewhat earlier than the others, and had not yet undressed, when he heard cries of distress coming from the pool. His attention was then directed to a boy struggling in the water, which is of graded depth. The boy had got into the pool eight feet deep, and, not being able to swim, was drowning. The Deputy Minister jumped into the pool with his clothes on and proceeded to save the boy, who was about 15 years old.

The boy became violent through fear and clasped Mr. Desbarats around the neck, pulling him down for a moment. According to accounts he almost choked his rescuer by pushing his hands in to his throat. Mr. Desbarats won out by beating the boy down, and got into the shallow water very much exhausted. The others had by this time arrived, and Mrs. Desbarats and the boy were helped out.

The following pronounced their vows and received the black veil: Sister M. Dolores, Miss E. McIntyre, London; Sister M. Constance, Miss L. Kane, Port Lampton; Sister M. Florence, Miss M. IN ANDABOUT THE CITY

SATCHEL RETURNED

The satchel picked up on a city street and left at the police station, has been returned to the owner.

VCTIM DOING NICELY

Mr. Alex McCauley, the unfortunate young man who yesterday had the misfortune to lose his right leg while braking upon the G. T. R. at Napanee, is reported to-day to be doing as well as could be expected at the local hospital.

ANOTHER MAIL CARRIER

D. M. Farrell, has been appointed a mail carrier. His appointment makes ten postmen in all, and will enable the local post office authorities to have two deliveries per day on the west side of the river, where up to the present there has been but one.

A TRIM YACHT

George Gooderham's pretty yacht, which is driven by sail or power, made its way into port last evening, after being down among the islands for the past ten days. The sails were furled and the motor power was sending her along at a spanking rate. The party was evidently on its way home.

A SUCCESSFUL LAWN PARTY

A very enjoyable and successful lawn social was held on the lawn of Dr. Faulkner at Foxboro, last evening under the auspices of the Methodist church, which proved most profitable to the society. Truly the young people of that thriving town know how to entertain, ice cream, cooling drinks, and sales-booths drawing in the shekels in a way that will materially help temporal matters along.

ST. THOMAS' S. S. OUTING

The proceeds from St. Thomas' church outing on Wednesday, were fully up to expections, about one hundred dollars being realized. It was a fine company of people, many from other denominations. The steamer Aletha gave the best of service.

THE LIGHTED WAY

For some reason or other the Victoria Park lights have been on full blaze until late at night, last evening's brilliancy being especially noticeably by those on the bay. While the bright rays were of material assistance to those rounding into the slip with their skiffs and launches, we were suprised that the city can afford such extravagance. It the expense can be continued, the lights will not be amiss on a dark night, to say nothing of increased safety to those who may be in the park.

BODY ARRIVED FROM TORONTO

The body of Fred Oram, aged 10 years, arrived from Toronto last evening, accompanied by the parents, and was laid in the family plot in Belleville cemetery. Rev. Duprau officiated at the grave.

LAUNCH BEING REPAIRED

The funeral of Edward James Fleming, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Nile Fleming, Ann street, took place from the family residence yesterday. Services were held at the house by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, rector of Christ Church. Many were in attendance, and the floral tributes were beautiful and numerous.

A DELIGHTFUL EXCURSION

The excursion under the auspices of the Sons of England to Kingston and the Thousand Islands on Wednesday, was one of the most pleasing events of the season, the steamer "Caspian" giving splendid opportunities for sighting seeing along the run. A large number took the trip, and all returned well pleased with the day's outing.

Another Canning Factory at Wellington

Another canning factory has been added to the four already in operation in Wellington. The new factory is owned by a company calling themselves the "Prince Edward Canners, Ltd." They intend canning tomatoes only this season, and their output will be known as the National Brand.

The new factory is situated just a few rods east of the C.O.R. station, and north and immediately alongside the track, on what is known as the Lane property. The main building is large and well equipped, and planned for the business. The sanitary can will be used. This style of can is becoming more popular each year, and is new being used for peas and corn to some extent as well as for fruits and tomatoes.

A goodly supply of water, which is so essential for successful canning, has been secured.

While out making a call on Wednesday night last, the reach of Dr. Embury's buggy broke, and the horse ran away with the front wheels, leaving the doctor sitting in the middle of the road. He was not very far from town at the time, and a hurried call from a nearby telephone brought the wrecking crew to his assistance, and he was able to continue on his journey.—Bancroft Times.

Life At Massassaga

(By Special Scribe).

Life at this popular summer resort has innumerable charms if one may judge from the many launches, skiffs and larger boats that are continually stopping at the wharf, and last evening was no exception to the rule.

Camping parties are numerous, and those who have been here for any length of time are as brown as so many wild Indians.

Among the campers who are holding on to their jobs of doing their own cooking—when none arrives from home on time—are Misses Vera Borbridge and Edna Wallace of Belleville, and to meet these two young ladies, a stranger would suppose they, like Topsy of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," just grew in the open, for they are the picture of health, and the exemplification of good spirits. They expect to remain until September 1st.

Miss Wallace confidentially informed the writer last evening that she had learned to swim—having already taken 19 strokes in the water.

Mrs. James A. Goodsell brought over a graphophone yesterday afternoon and last evening a number were dancing to its sweet strains in the pavilion. Jimmy stuck well to his job and didn't charge a cent.

Mr. Leavitt's steamer is being put in commission, and will soon be making trips between the Point and Belleville.

Lafalot camp, with its sumptuous entertainers is a popular resort, and the cooking is good. One partaker, we were informed, yesterday got away with seven full-fledged pancakes—thick ones, too—and five dishes of corn at one sitting. And that wasn't all—but we spare the enormous appetite.

It has become a chronic habit for young gentlemen callers to miss the home-bound boats in the evening. Is there a reason?

Bloomfield Man Had Close Call

What might have been a most serious accident occurred at the C.O.R. crossing, Bloomfield, Tuesday afternoon. Mr. R. Loveless was driving a team of horses across with a load, when the sudden sound of a whistle frightened one of the horses, causing them to spring, jerking the driver off in front, and as he fell one waggon wheel ground his leg pretty badly upon the steel rail. Drs. Cahoon and Currie attended the injured man, and it is hoped that he may soon be well again.—Picton Gazette.

Berlin Ethopian On Hunger Strike

BERLIN, Ont., Aug. 1.—Special—Joseph Wood, a negro who was sentenced here to six months for vagrancy, is on a hunger strike at the county jail. Even when Jailer Cook offered him chicken and a slice of water melon the prisoner stubbornly resisted this choice menu.

If he persists in starving himself the authorities will use forcible methods to make him eat. His strike has lasted for over two days, but being of a strong constitution, he has not weakened.

This is the second instance of this kind at the jail since the day's news has contained reports of the hunger strikes of the suffragettes.

The Berlin jailer evidently followed the advice of a New Jersey warder, who, according to a despatch published a few days ago, announced the complete success of an offering of fried chicken and water melon as a remedy for a darkey hunger striker in his jail.

WEARING A WATCH

Several Ways to Carry One But Never in a Pocket

You probably have noticed that the women who wear watches pinned on their breasts are in the minority. Madame Society Matron carries hers in her gold lorgnette. When she is shopping she may wear the watch bracelet. If she is very up-to-date, however, she has a watch set in her card case or vanity bag.

Milady Has Several Choices

Even the young men have decided that watches in the waistcoat pockets, as father used to wear his, are much too slow for them and they have adopted bracelet watches. They wear them, however, in leather bracelets. You can wear your watch any place provided that you make it conspicuously individual. But don't think of wearing it on a chain and tucked away in a watch pocket as grandmother did or even pinned to your breast as mother seemed to think was the right way to carry her timepiece.

Optimism Versus Pessimism

When I am tired I look on life and wearledly I sigh,
Through cloudy glass I view the game
with pessimistic eye;
On the scales 'gainst Life I weigh the exacting Price and smile,
For the count proclaims the effort not really worth the while.
With a retrospective eye, the hard,
traveled road I see,
The road untraveled, mirror-like, on-stretching endlessly.
With clanking chains, from out the Past come ghosts of yesterday,
In sorry robes of deepest black, with features grave and grey.
The future, dim and shadowy, has sky that holds no sun;
Fate grapples with Hope's vision bright, and strangles one by one.

When I, refreshed, take up the glass
I view the world anew
With optimistic eye, I see through glass of rosy hue
The world's all right, the game's all right, when played in the right way.
No horrid ghosts take hold of me, no haunt of yesterday.
The future's full of Faith and Hope,
and in the sky a sun
Keeps on forever shining until the day is done.
Should shadows lurk and lie concealed with which I have to strive,
God gave To-day, a bright To-day;
I'm glad to be alive.
Optimist or Pessimist, this my philosophy:
It all depends on circumstance just which way you see.

LABOR SITUATION IN SOUTH AFRICA

The cause of the recent labor trouble on the Rand grows more apparent from English exchanges. It is claimed that the whole root of the trouble lies in the contract system and the right of the mine-owner to dismiss men on twenty-four hours' notice. Since the Union Parliament has been at work it has devoted a very large part of its time to regulating work in mines, rules as to length of hours, measures for safeguarding health, and a thousand and one other regulations load up the statute-book. The miners ask, "Of what use is all this when the mine companies are permitted to give their underground work out to contract.

Superficially regarded, contract work should not be wrong; but the claim is made that in actual working it is absolutely and utterly bad; for it enables the mine owner to shift his responsibilities on to the miners' shoulders, while the solidarity of the mine companies has lowered the price for contract work, it is said, to the lowest level of the miners' endurance. Refusal to work in one mine means that the man who refuses is not given work in any other mine.

The grievances appear to lie with the underground men; but without them any work is impossible. The "big" money that a miner makes has to be heavily discounted. It is what the economist calls a "nominal" wage; his "real" wage is quite another story.

This is how one writer puts it: "A miner who contracts to get out a certain bit of reef has working under him, say, a couple of white assistants and a gang of native laborers. He has to pay the white men and pay the company for his native "boys"; but he has to pay the company, too, for the use of the mine machinery, buy his light, his dynamite, and, in fact, all the necessaries of his trade from the company, or he gets sacked on any pretext but the real one. If he has taken the contract at a "cut" price his balance at the end of the month looks foolish when the company's contra account is rendered against him. And if he should have made such a bad bargain, and it has happened that he has been left with a balance on the wrong side of the ledger, the company can follow him to his next contract and claim payment before he touches the money he has earned."

KNOCKING CANADIAN CREDIT

The Montreal Herald makes a strenuous protest against a certain press service that is eternally sending out despatches of a nature which are in no wise benefitting to Canada's financial standing. We agree with The Herald that these knockers should be run to shelter and made to cease their uncalled for habit of sending broadcast these 'notes of warning.' The Herald says:

"It is about time that the Canadian people and Canadian newspapers registered an emphatic protest against the systematic campaign of belittlement of Canadian credit now being carried on by the Canadian Associated Press from London. The service is well subsidized by the Canadian Parliament, that is to say by Canadians in general, yet it devotes a good deal of its time to collecting and spreading broadcast every "knock" at our business affairs which it can possiby discover. Yesterday, for example, it sent out another thirty line cable from London beginning with the threadbare "note of warning" as to the condition of the London money markets toward Canadian affairs.

During the last week two municipal issues, those of Winnipeg and Vancouver, have met with success on the London market, one being over-subscribed and the other, according to the Times, completely taken up. In the same issue of Canadian newspapers which printed the C.A.P.'s latest wail the same service reported, besides the success of the Vancouver flotation, yet another success, that of the Canadian Northern Pacific's four million dollar issue, fully subscribed before the time of closing. Yet, in spite of all this the Canadian Press cable solemnly warns us to beware lest we grow too optimistic. There is, it appears, a shrewd suspicion that these issues were not a success after all, only nominally so. The cable does not, of course, explain what a "nominal" success means. Canada has, we learn, on further perusal of this interesting if vague despatch, suffered a serious diminution of popularity on the London market which cannot be explained by the universally stringent money conditions—nor, apparently, by the C.A.P.

As is usually the case with the lugubrious despatches of the Canadian Press describing Canada's bad standing in the eyes of the London financiers, this particular "note of warning" has been sounded anonymously. Surely if the correspondent gets his information from reliable sources there is no need for all this mystery. It is beginning to look very much as though the Canadian Press were being used by disgruntled gentlemen of the Horne-Payne type, with axes to grind.

The Edmonton Daily Capital, Liberal parrot, hears that there will be no fall session of Parliament to comment: "When did the emergency cease to emerge?"

That's easy. It ceased to emerge when it hit British pockets again.—Ottawa Journal.

Toronto Globe: "On the question of the removal of food taxes and the securing of larger markets for Canada's natural products The Globe stands today where it stood in 1911. The statement of The Regina Leader that The Globe has repudiated that policy is an impudent fabrication." The Globe may be trusted to stand pat on any question of erratic opposition.

Ottawa Journal: "An extensive municipal improvement in London has left a vacant space of ground in the heart of the metropolis. Earl Grey, former Governor-General of Canada, who has a habit of thinking imperially, has conceived a scheme by which a great "Dominion House" should be erected on this ground, in which there should be concentrated the London offices of the several self-governing dominions of the British Empire." Why not transform it into a public park where the sweltering masses may have a breathing spot?

LEARNING TO SWIM

Most people have heard it told time and again, that the human body is lighter than the water it displaces when the lungs are functioning normally, and so will float, even motionless. Somehow, though, the non-swimmer is inclined to doubt the statement when he tries to keep himself up and only succeeds in sinking.

Therefore, it will profit the pupil to find for himself how much sustaining power water has. Let him enter a shallow spot, take a deep breath and try to lie down on the bottom. In a depth of a couple of feet there can be no danger in the experiment. But he will soon realize that his body is forcibly pushed upward. In other words, that he cannot possibly remain at the bottom. It is a convincing illustration.

This done, we come to the point of smoothing out the stroke so that the lesson may be ended by abandoning the water wings and taking untrammelled swimming.

The pupil should stand in shallow water and bend over until the chin is at the surface, but instead of throwing around the arms fully extended, bend them at the elbow on recovery, i. e., when moving from the end of the drive, at the hip, to full reach in front.

The arm is stretched comfortably forward, with elbow slightly raised, then dipped and pushed down and back, under the body, with an even, vigorous sweep. As the hand reaches the hip the elbow is lifted until the hand emerges from the water, and the bent arm is then carried above the surface to starting position. Care should be had to make the drive energetic, but the recovery slow and without jerk.

When the student finds that he can perform these movements with either arm he may preceed to practice them, afloat, with the legs also in action. He will discover at once that the bending of the arm makes the stroke both easier and smoother.

During the last few minutes of this the last lesson, the pupil should discard his water-wings and make his first real test, unaided. It is ten to one in favor of his being able to cover a few yards, at least, and after that it is merely a question of adding to the distance little by little and then putting on the finishing touches, such as learning to breathe, so that the head may be lowered on a line with the body, correcting the arm and leg movements, and perfecting the whole stroke. The principal aim, however—that of gaining the rudiments of watermanship—will have been attained.

THE THOUGHT WORLD

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Every mind has its own world. There are as many worlds as there are people.

What the universe really is no one knows; it is a vain question, for nobody will ever find out; the only matter of interest is what the universe is to me.

So many men, so many worlds. The worlds of the degenerate, slouching along the slums; of a monk in his old-world monastery, where the days slip by with no marking incidents by recurring matins and vespers; of a busy lawyer; of a newspaper reporter; and of a housewife, occupied with her sewing, and her baking, are as so many different planets.

It is idle to speculate about "the end of the world", and whether it will be burnt next Thursday in a grand Day of Judgment or be frozen to death a million years from now, or be knocked into pi some day by a loose comet; for when it's all over with me, when my consciousness ceases to record, it is all over with me, "the sum of things entire".

To be sure there is what William James called "a blooming confusion of consciousness", that is, there is a myriad-multitude of things in the outside world that crowd upon our attention, but after all we make our world what we will, "just as the architect is free to create his building" from all the material he finds.

The late Henri Poincare, who received the Bolyai prize from the Hungarian academy as the most eminent mathematician in the world, said:

"What is not thought is nought; since we can think only thoughts, and every word we use in talking about things stands for a thought, to assert there is anything else than thought is a senseless affirmation.

"Geologic history teaches us", he continues, "that life is only an episode between two eternities of death, and even in this episode thought endures but a moment. Thought is but a flash in the midst of a long night. But that flash is everything."

What a fool then am I to think that any outward event can overwhelm me?

What all men can do to me is nothing; it only matters what I do to myself.

To a soul that knows realities there can be no tragedy, no collapse, no failure. In that moment when the volcano spews upon him, the lightning sears him, or the rage of men burn him or crucify him, he inwardly laughs. They cannot reach his world.

My world is my secret. You cannot enter, you can only guess. I have my little hells and heavens, but they are not yours.

If I put the right value upon thoughts I need not fear things.

REST AS A BEAUTIFIER

Rest is just as essential as cosmetics. In fact, don't you see if you apply cosmetics to a face that is lined and shrunken from lack of rest and proper care, you are only rubbing in those lines. If going out in the evening, and you know it will be late before you get to bed, take a short nap during the day. Disrobe for this, and don a comfortable robe and stretch yourself out on a lounge. Clasp your hands above your head, and then relax and drowse away for at least an hour. Of course if you feel inclined to sleep yet cannot afford yourself this and constantly get excited and restless, it will do you little or no good, and you may as well remain up. A word about resting in a chair, if you cannot do more. Sit well back and put your feet up on a level with your waist, then throw back the head and close your eyes. Always remove the hairpins from your head and make it a practice to keep your mouth shut.

Breathing through the mouth, especially in sleep, causes the muscles of the lower part of the face to relax and take on ungainly lines. Start off always with a pleasant thought and allow yourself to drift into forgetfulness and the first thing you know you will have been asleep. Never fight sleep, for it is a woman's best friend.

WESTERN PAPER CONDEMNED

MOOSE JAW, Sask., July 31.—Canadian Press—The City Council has passed a resolution unanimously condemning a local paper, The Evening Times, for its front page editorial on the financial conditions of the city.

In part, the resolution reads as follows: "That this Council desires to place on record its strong disapproval on the article published recently, owing to its gross misstatements of local conditions, wherein the credit of the city and business men is impugned, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Board of Trade with the request that support be given this motion with a view to restoring confidence in the city which has been seriously impaired by the publication aforesaid."

MEN AND COURTING

Men from the beginning of time have liked to be the hunters; women are supposed to be the quarry. It is to the quarry's interest not to wish to do any hunting, not to care, till she is certain of the hunter, whether he pursues her or not. Such an attitude is not calculating; it is merely self-respecting and self-preservative. On such cautious advance towards love some of the happiest marriages are built. No romantic girl need fear that by crushing down a baseless emotion she will inhibit the real coming of love. If love is real, it makes a progress which is resistless, however slow. On the other hand, if the romantic girl yields without restraint to baseless emotions, she not only weakens her will-power, but she may injure her pride by showing herself too ready to receive love. A man is the happier for being sure he is well loved by his wife, but when love is just beginning its growth in his heart he values the girl the more if he is shown that her response is too rare and high a thing to be accorded without strong suing on his part.—Maude Radford Warren in Woman's World.

CLEAN FOOD CLUBS

They Save Doctor Bills and Everyone Is Eligible

Every woman in charge of a home should be the president of a family "clean-food" club. All the members of the family might easily become members of the club, aiding her in any way she suggests or they think wise. The purpose of the clean-food club is to keep tab on the stores, dairies and other produce places from which the table is supplied.

The home keeper should know that the milk being fed to her children and other members of her household comes from a dairy where sanitation is properly considered. Perhaps she will have to enlist the services of her son or her husband or even the board of health to carry this out. Why not? It's worth while.

The home keeper should know that eggs are good; that fruit is fresh; that baker's bread, if used, is handled in a sanitary way.

The home keeper shoud be sure, in the fly season—which includes a good share of the year—that vegetables and fruit are covered or properly protected by a strong draught of air.

Numbers of diseases can be traced back, indirectly at least, to a disorder of the stomach or other organs through which food passes. If the home keeper watched her table more closely and taught her children the wisdom of eating clean wholesome food more, there would be less need of the medicine chest and the hurry call to the physician.

Commission Governs City

St. John, N.B., is a progressive Canadian city where the commission form of government has been tried with success, so it is said. The civic administration is in the hands of a mayor and four commissioners, the mayor elected for two years and the commissioners for four years, two retiring at the end of each biennial period. Any official may be removed from office by the recall, and popular government is further assured by the initiative and referendum.

Punishment to Fit Crime

Among Chinese coolies a favored method of stealing rice is to lean up against a pile of sacks and stick a tin tube through the sacking, the rice, which is dry, naturally flowing through the tube into the coolie's clothing. Flour is also stolen in this manner, and a common punishment in this case is to let the thief obtain a large quantity and then pour water into his clothing, which makes matters rather uncomfortable for him.

Thirty Dairymaids Sing

Thirty dairymaids, dressed in royal blue, sang the National Anthem to greet the King and Queen when their Majesties visited the Worlestone Dairy Institute, in Cheshire. The dairymaids, many of whom are farmers' daughters, were grouped on the lawn when the King and Queen arrived and, after hearing them sing, the Royal visitors saw demonstrations of cheese and butter making by the students.

JOE KELLY DECLINES THE INVITATION TO WORLD'S TOUR

Toronto, July 31.—Manager Joe Kelly of the Toronto Ball Club and Mrs. Kelly, who received an invitation from John McGraw of the New York Nationals, to be his guests on the around-the-world baseball trip of the New York Giants and Chicago White Sox. The trip is scheduled to begin on October 19 and to end early next March.

Mr. Kelly said yesterday that it was not at all likely that he and Mrs. Kelly would be able to accept the invitation as they have a large and growing family and, besides, the Toronto manager is needed at home to strengthen up his team for next season.

In 1896, Ted Sullivan arranged for a world's tour of two American baseball clubs, but the games were subsequently cancelled. However, John McGraw, Hugh Jennings, Willie Keeler, and Joe Kelly, the then Big Four of baseball, made the trip around the world on their hook, but did not play any games.

In 1888-89 Spalding's Chicago team, and a picked team toured the world playing a regular schedule of games. That was in the days of Pop Anson, Mike Kelly, and other baseball celebraties of immortal memory.

INJECTING SPEED IN TORONTO'S

Toronto, July 31.—The cry of the Toronto baseball fan all season has been for more speed. Some of the veterans though good ball players as they are, have been slowing up this season, and many games have been lost by a fraction of a second on the run down to first base. The Leafs have scoured the country in search for young players, with the result that two promising prospects have been picked up by the Toronto Club. infielder Pick and Kroy who joined the club Tuesday have an abundance of the great requisite, and in practice looked to be all right in a fielding way.

It must be remembered that the present company is much clasier than in which Pick and Kroy have been travelling, and that too much should not be expected of them. If they hold there own in this league they are bound to be vauable additions to the Toronto team. It is not to be expeted that they will break into the game right away, but when the opportunity presents itself they will be given a chance to make good.

Detroit, Mich., July 30.—To repeat the weekly statement, Mr. Joe Boehling and Mr. Walter Johnson, both pitching for Washington are still on top. The averages show Boehling with his new record of 11 straight victories and one defeat, ahead of only Johnson who is now credited with 23 won and 5 lost for an .821 percentage.

Up among the elite are our old friends Plank and Bender of the Athletics, with Falkenberg of Nthe aps in fifth place. Carrol Brown, the wildest man in baseball, who established a base on balls record at Detroit, is sixth, with Joe Wood of the Red Sox next. After Joe Wood comes George Dauss of the Tigers tied with Ed Walsh, with 7 won and 8 lost.

But if Boehling is ahead in percentage there is one place where Walter Johnson is supreme. The "human cannon" has allowed but 30 runs to score in the 208 innings he has pitched. He has pitched more innings and has been scored on fewer times than any other man. Not that he hasn't been hit, only 141 safeties have been made off him, but all but 30 of 117 batsmen who got on bases either by the hit base on balls, or hit by the pitcher route, died beore they reached the fourth station

In this respect, the only man who can compare with him is Eddie Plank of the Athletcis. There are men who have given fewer runs than Plank, notably Boehling and Fritz Blanding, but not one has pitched nearly as many innings as Johnson. Plank however, has worked 171 1-3 innings and given 45 runs, showing a total of 132 hits, four batters hit and 98 bases on bals. The Gettsburg veteran thus figures to be a good pitcher in a pinch.

In two other places Johnson stands out aone. he has struck out 134 men, as against 118 for Joe Wood, 107 for Falkenberg, and 104 for Mitchell of Cleveland. This gives Walter an average of about six men fanned for a nine-inning game, and Wood about the same.

But if Johnson must divide the honors in strikeouts, at least for an average, he can claim control all for himself. In his 208 innings of ball he has walked 25 men an aferage of a shade over one a game. He has hit five. Nobody apprcaches him. Bender and Plank qualify as coming close, having walked 34 and 35 respectively.

The wild man championship is in dispute between those two young men of Mack. Carrol Brown, who has passed 74 on balls and 7 by hitting them, and Bryan Houck, who has given 89 men four bad ones and tunked five in the ribs. The honors seem Houck's who did his work in 111 innings to Brown's 158 1-3.

HIS OWN FAULT.

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 30.—President Herrmann of the Cincinnati baseball team said that Rube Benton, who was seriously injured when his motorcycle collided with a street car, would not be allowed one penny of his salary, and that the club would not stand any expense while he is at the hospital. Mr. Herrmann said that he had requested Benton not to ride his cycle.

"The whole affair is an injustice to the club," said Mr. Herrmann.

"The injury to Benton means that we will have to get a pitcher or two, and just now good pitchers are hard to get."

NATIONAL COMMISSION IGNORES FRATERNITY

New York, July, 31.—The unsuccessful attempt of Ty Cobb to have a spectator removed from the grandstand at Philadelphia on Tuesday will be made the subject of an investigation by the Baseball players fraternity. According to Cobb the spectator addressed an objectionable language to him. Mindful of the trouble he caused in this city a year ago, when he attempted to physically abuse a like offender, Cobb called upon the umpire to eject the man. This memission, according to Dave Fultz presithod was suggested by the national comdent of the fraternity. Evidently it did not work satisfactority in the Philadelphia test, for Mr. Fultz stated today in discussing the affair:

"According to reports from Philadelphia Cobb attempted to follow out the plan laid down by the national commission, appealed to the umpire to eject a spectator who had insulted him and was jeered out of the game by the crowd. The fact that the spectator was allowed to remain in the stand proves that the method suggested by organized baseball authorities for handling this evil is gross inadequate.

"A player should not be made to stultify in this manner. The magnate should make a sincere effort to put an end to this long-standing evil.

"The player's fraternity has repeatedly made suggestions which, if adopted, would prove of much benefit, but the national commission has so far disregarded them."

LONGBOAT DID GREAT WOK

Tom Longboat must be in suberb form these days. In Saturday's Brooklyn relay races he made a grand showing. He was teemed with Soxalexis, the U. S. Indian against Shrubb and Meadows at five miles. Soxalexis went into discard early and the Indian practically ran the last two and a half miles alone against the pair of them and was only beaten 220 yards. The crowd were crazy with delight at the Indian's performance He and Meadows team against Ted Wood and Shrubb this Saturday in New York, and he runs other races. Ted Wood who is persistently called "Abbie" Woods won the five mile race with Queal in 25.27, and looks good enough to reduce his fifteen-mile world's record 1.18.15, the present figure.

THE SPIT BALL DOES NOT SPIN

Goes Straight on Pushes Air Cushion Ahead of it Causing Freakish Motion

What do you know about the spit ball?

You may have seen it pitched a thousand times and know how effective it is when the pitcher has control. You have seen catchers stop the elusive ball with their shins and knee cap and have watched batters strike at it in vain. But can you say why the spit ball acts as it does?

Ed Walsh, greatest spit-baller, doesn't know why the ball acts so queerly. He practices and experiments and repeats the motions, which produce the effect. Princeton university scientists say it is a new phenomenon to them. The spit ball pitcher wets a small spot on the ball with saliva, carefully fitting two fingers over the wet spot. He throws the ball with all speed, straight toward the plate.

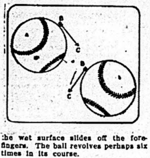
Christy Mathewson, Russell Ford, "Doc" White and other brainy pitchers have a theory, which Irwin believes, after months of investigation, deserves consideration, though it is not accepted by the scientists he consulted.

It is that the ball, because of the wet surface, does not spin.

A spinning ball bores into the air, edging the molecules aside. The spit ball, traveling "dead," accumulates an air-cushion ahead. When it "feels" this pressure it seeks the line of least resistance, jumping into free air, causing that curious break. The momentary pause lets gravitation draw the ball earthward.

The exalt direction of the downward break is determined by the position of the seam at the instant of the break, the ball shooting from the greatest smooth surface it presents to the air cushion. So much for the spit ball of the ordinary pitcher who does not know how the ball will break.

Walsh and Ford are different from the ordinary spit ballers. They control the break, by giving the ball a very slight spin with the thumb, as the wet surface slides off the forefingers. The ball revolves perhaps six times in its course.



The comparatively insignificant spin does not make the ball bore through the air cushion, but it is enough to give it a very slight pressure on one side.

As the ball swerves, it is in a state of very unstable equilibrium. The breeze of a butterfly's wing would determine the direction of its slide off the air cushion. That pressure, infinitesimal as it is, controls the direction of the break; hence, by the position of the thumb and the spin, they send the ball to left, right or down and Walsh makes it break upward.

Facing the ball as it breaks. Area A is the greatest smooth surface. The air cushion slides off this surface and the ball breaks toward B-C.

A NOVEL RACE

Two Regiments of British Soldiers in Running Competition

A fine cross-country race of seven miles, in which over 1,200 men of two battalions took part from the colonels to the last-joined recruit, was run at Aldershot.

The race was a sequel to one won by the Hampshire Regiment. The Munster Fusiliers, who were then third, still thought that they were the better running battalion, and the Hampshires promptly issued a challenge, which was as promptly taken up.

With the exception of the sick, the guards, and the men on duty, both battalions turned out in running kit. The conditions stipulated that every man who reached the winning post within twelve minutes of the first man home was to count one point.

The first past the post was Private Barry, of the Munsters. At the end of the twelve minutes 297 of the Munsters had passed the post to 194 of the Hampshires, the Munsters thus winning the race by 103 points. Only about a score of men failed to complete the course.

Big Oyster Beds

In Long Island Sound, Chesapeake Bay, and many of the large open bays and sounds of the Atlantic coast, oyster farming is carried on on a vast scale under from forty to sixty feet of water. Some of these farms are over 20,000 acres in extent. Here the spat (or spawn) is brought from the natural beds and planted, matured, and harvested by steam power, the immense steamers used being capable of catching 200 bushels of oysters per hour from these grounds.

It takes an oyster about three years to grow up, and some do not reach their full growth before the fifth or sixth year. The spawning season is in May, June, July and August, during which months they are not so good to eat as at other times, hence the saying that Oysters are unwholesome in all months that have not an "r" in their names.

Blessed be the man who is in a hurry; he never stops to tell his troubles.

FUN FOR LITTLE ONES

Some Little Tricks to Amuse the Children Indoors

Amongst all sorts of amusing experiments which can be made with tumblers, sticks, forks, and spoons, perhaps one of the most favorite ones with children is the penny and tumbler trick.

If you fill a tumbler with water—as full as it is possible without overflowing—and observe the line of the water you will find that in the middle of the tumbler the water is slightly concave—that is, forms a depressed line just as if it had been scooped out. This, which is caused by the natural weight of the water, is however, not apparent to the usual uninitiated, and although the water might, on the edge of the glass, be almost on the point of overflowing, any child can challenge a grown-up person to put in it many coppers without spilling a single drop of water.

To perform this little trick the coppers must be put exactly in the centre and dropped very gently, first inserting the edge in the water. Great will be the surprise of all concerned to see that, according to the size of the glass, five or six coppers can thus be put in until the water in the centre becomes level with the sides, when of course, the water will flow over.

Take a tumbler half full of very cold water and, having lighted the candle, hold it sideways over the tumbler. The hot wax will pour in drops into the water, when the coldness of the latter will congeal the melted wax immediately it touches the surface of the water, thus creating a rough-edged little ball strangely like the flower known as the "lily of the valley." After a good many of these flowers are produced in this way they are threaded one at the time on a long thin piece of wire, a small knot preventing the flower from slipping through.

The wires are then twisted lightly over each other to form the spray of lilies, wilch, when mixed with strips of green paper cut and twisted to imitate the long pointed leaves, makes a most charming and interesting ornament.

SAVED THIRTY-SIX LIVES

Tay Bridge Hero Won Admiration of Mr. Carnegie

The man of whom Andrew Carnegie said "You are the bravest man I have ever met," died at Sunderland, England. Mr. Harry Watt was a fearless diver, and one of the most unassuming of heroes.

Born at Sunderland in 1826, "Harry" took a leading part in diving operations throughout the kingdom for over half a century. He was summoned to Tay Bridge after the great disaster, and his services were frequently requisitioned abroad.

Altogether he saved thirty-six persons from drowning. On eight occasions he was presented with medals—three by the Board of Trade for exceptional gallantry in saving life.

His fellow-townsmen gave "Harry" a gold watch and other gifts at various times. Some three years ago, when Mr. Andrew Carnegie was spending a few days in Sunderland, he specially sent for "Harry," and confessed himself honored at meeting with the hardy old veteran.

Learning that the diver and his wife were in none too prosperous circumstances, Mr. Carnegie, the same day, directed the trustees of the Carnegie Hero Fund to allow Mr. Watt $25 per month for life, and to continue the allowance to his widow until her death.

The late General Booth and Watt were great friends, and "Harry" never tired of talking about the "great general."

Huge Price for Horse

M. Edmond Blanc bought the race horse The White Knight from W. R. Wyndham for the huge price of 40,000 guineas, the equivalent of $208,000 in our money. Some years back M. Blanc paid $189,500 for Flying Fox at public auction, which, until this later transaction, was the greatest sum ever paid for a thoroughbred. To secure a successor to the dead Flying Fox he set a new price record in paying this extraordinary sum for one of the greatest stayers of modern English turf history. The White Knight is a son of Desmond and Pella, representing the St. Simon line.

WESTERN CANADA

A BUMPER WHEAT CROP THOUSANDS OF MEN REQUIRED

This Year's Harvest promises to be be the largest in

THE HISTORY OF CANADA

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

Housewives Say That

It is a good plan to roll sausages in flour before frying them, as it prevents their bursting.

It is very convenient to have a board sprinkled with kitchen salt at hand when ironing. The salt cleans the irons.

This is a color fastening for printed fabrics. Dissolve about 2 cents worth of sugar of lead in a gallon of cold water. Plunge in the print articles for one hour. Wring out and wash in the usual way. Colors never wash out after.

This saves on the coal bill. A good handful of common washing soda dissolved in a half gallon of warm water and then thrown over the coal and allowed to dry will lengthen the life of the coal by twice and give out just as much heat.

To save herring-boning when making a flannel undergarment first run the seam, then turn down once, but instead of herring-boning it run the seam again. By doing this you will find the stitches will wash into the flannel, and not be seen. It is also much quicker than herring-boning.

FRENCH FASHIONS

Absurd Creations Thrust Before Public by Clever Advertisers

A woman's magaizne which is regarded as speaking with the authority of full knowledge of such matters, says that the so-called Paris fashions, which are aped on this side of the Atlantic, are only the extravagant and fantastic designs devised by certain dressmakers, who find it a good way of advertising.

No French lady, it says, would think of wearing such garb as women on this continent are told is the height of fashion. The women who wear these absurdities are the frequenters of race tracks whose social status is an unknown quantity.

The fact of the case seems to be that Paris dressmaking houses aim at keeping would-be fashionable womankind in a state of perennial excitement in regard to clothes. For this purpose they keep a staff of ingenious people at work designing something a little more absurd than something else, and there are always women who will wear them, especially when they have good figures to display and no particular reputation to lose. A neat trick of the trade is to employ a few people, who will stand in front of a window, in which some of the latest toggery is displayed, and make sketches of it, on the pretence that rival houses wish to have the designs.

There is perhaps nothing in the way of business that is worked up with more consummate skill or greater effrontery than the dissemination of so-called Paris fashions.

British Women Teachers

The rulers of the world owe much to British nurses and governesses. They have been beside the Royal youngsters of almost every European country. The Czar walked bareheaded behind the coffin of the English nurse who tended him so carefully in his childhood. An English governess had charge of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, an Irish lady was responsible for much of the earliest education of King Alfonso, the Kaiser is indebted to an English lady for his excellent English, the late King of the Belgians and the late King of Portugal had British governesses. Some of these ladies exercised an almost autocratic rule over their charges.

A French physician, who used to attend the Emperor and the Empress of the French at Biarritz, has related how his British nurse made the Prince Imperial eat spinach, "which he detested," in order to cool his blood. "But the child loved his nurse so devotedly that he always gave way to please her," he states.

"Tomboy" Makes Ideal Mother

The Crown Princess of Sweden, who is a daughter of the Duke of Connaught, is devoted to open-air amusements. She rides and cycles, swims and rows, plays golf, tennis and hockey; and can drive her own motor car.

But she was trained never to forget the first duties of a woman, and is skilled in the gentle pursuits of housewifery. She is able to give the most accomplished nurse or governess "tips" anent the nursery and schoolroom.

As Princess Margaret of Connaught her Royal Highness enjoyed the reputation of being the "tomboy" of the Royal Family, and when she first arrived at the somewhat stiff and formal Court of Sweden she was regarded as something of an enigma. The Princess has since those days found that the Swedes are kinder than their climate, and she is idolized by all sections of the community.

HAMPSHIRE TIGERS GREAT ATHLETES

Famous Sporting Regiment Whose Officers and Men Compete as Equals on the Field

That the love of sport, acknowledged as a strong characteristic of the British race, is not confined to any one class or caling, is shown in striking fashion by the records of the Hampshire Regiment. Drawn almost entirely from an agricultural population, the men, upon joining the colors, quickly develop a great liking for all kinds of sport, in which outdoor athletics take a prominent part. These are followed up with such zest that they form a by no means unimportant part in the scheme of physical training by which the soldier is brought to and maintained in a state of bodily fitness to enable him to endure with success considerable fatigue and prolonged exertion. It is in running and hurdling that the regiment has won its best victories in the athletic world, both battalions having produced a number of really good men. The 2nd Battalion representatives carried off the championships at the last South African Army Athletic meeting at which they competed before leaving for Mauritius, Corporal Beckett winning the 100 yards and quarter-mile, Color-Sergeant Arnell the half-mile, Private Ashford the hurdles, Lieut. Johnston the obstacles, and Private Thorpe the 100 yards open to privates; while the battalion team won the relay race, did well in the tug-of-war, and Private Simmonds won the shot putting—a by no means bad record in open competition against the rest of the Army in South Africa.

The 1st Battalion representatives also performed with credit at the Army athletic meetings at home, where the competition is most keen and the form required to win of the very highest. Corporal Eldridge, Lieut. Cecil, Lieut. Knocker, Color-Sergeant Gaun, Corporal Dunford, Sergeant Sprake, Private Bowman, and Lieut. Smith, all performing with credit in the sprints and other competitions. Running appears to be followed by the Hampshire men for much longer periods than the average, and several of the veterans have performed with credit at open meetings.

Football and Cricket

Association football brought the regiment renown, for some tip-top teams have been put in the field by both battalions. The 2nd Battalion particularly holds many cups won on the football field.

The regiment has been prolific in producing good cricketers, and many a good game has been put up at home and abroad. Burton, Bendey (who has quite a number of "centuries" to his credit), Major Barlow, Captain Baxter, Bowman, Lyne, Sque, Captain Perry, Colonel Nicholson, and Corporal Stroud are among the best known players, the latter having the remarkable record of twice performing the "hat trick" in a regimental match in South Africa.

The regiment follows very keenly the game of hockey, and some most capable teams have been turned out. Golf, too, has its followers among the officers, the 2nd Battalion winning the championship of South Africa.

In the pursuit of sport the more serious part of the soldier's education has not been lost to view, and in shooting the regiment has gained a very high degree of proficiency. Sergeant Giles twice won the gold jewel, which carries with it the shooting championship of South Africa; while the bronze jewel was won twice by Corporal Lintott and Private Wright. Sergeant Newman has also a fine record as a shot, while the 1st Battalion has figured with credit in the Evelyn Wood competition for marching and shooting. Colonel Nicholson, Captain Earle, and Captain Burton won renown for their skill in clay pigeon shooting.

In the Ring

Boxing is another favorite sport with all ranks, and some really excellent fighters have been turned out by the regimental boxing club. Among the best are Wally Davis, who left the regiment to become an instructor and Corporal Zimmer, who fought his way into the final of the middle-weights at the Army championship meeting. His brother is also a clever boxer, who figured with credit at the Navy and Army championship meeting.

The members of the sergeants' messes have fostered the game of billiards to some purpose, and any clever cueists are to be numbered among them. Sergeant Syer won the billiard championship of the Army in Ireland.

Reverting to the cross-country successes of the regiment, it is interesting to recall that the 2nd Battalion did well in South Africa, several of their runners being selected to represent Pretoria against Johannesburg in the race for the McLaren cup.

The cordial relationship which exists between all ranks is no doubt one of the secrets of the success which has attended the efforts of the "Hampshire Tigers," while another factor is the encouragement given by the officers, who, by precept and example, encourage their men to take a practical interest in manly sport. Captain Baxter may be mentioned as one of the prime movers in this direction, for he gives himself up whole-heartedly to promote the good name of the regiment in military efficiency as well as in sport.

A Little Heroine

A twelve-year-old girl, Doris Truman, of London, Ont., saved her ten-year-old brother, Alfred, from drowning when the boy fell off the dam at Blackfriars' bridge. The firemen were summoned, but before they arrived the little girl had the boy out of the water, and a companion had rolled the water out of him.

Cause and Effect

According to a Paris mathematician the adoption of Greenwich time as the standard for France has increased the lighting expenses of every French household about one per cent.

MARVELOUS BATTER WAS WEE WILLIE

Now He Only Has to Watch His Bank Account Not His Batting Average

Will baseball ever see another Willie Keeler?

"We Willie," the batting marvel of the game; one of the few to get into the .400 class and the only batter that ever played an entire season without fanning is now a real estate broker and apartment house owner in Brooklyn, and his heaviest work is collecing his rents and banking the money. Keeler vies with Fielder Jones, Cy Young and Bill Lang as the richest retired ball player. Any of the four can write his check for more than $100,000—and have it honored, too.

Willie Keeler was one of that wonderful Baltimore outfield of 1894, '95 and '96, with Walter Brodie and Kelly. Brilliant fielders, hard hitters and great base runners were they, and Keeler was the mightiest of the trio His last appearance in the big leagues was with the Giants, in 1910, as emergency hitter.

WILLIE KEELER

Keeler played 20 years, starting with Binghampton, in the Eastern league, in 1892, and winding up with Toronto in 1911.

Keeler holds the world's record for the greatest number of hits in a season. In 1897 he accumulated 243 singles for an average of .432. He was the most scientific batter that ever played ball. He invented "choking" the bat. Small and light, he realized he could do more effective hitting by merely tapping the ball "where they ain't" than by "swinging his head off" in an effort for long hits.

"Choking the Bat"

Always crowding the plate, Keeler grasped his bat near the middle and hit to any field at will; the fielders never knew where to play for him Right or left-handed pitchers looked alike, and, no matter how they pitched to him, "Wee Willie" placed the ball where he wanted to.

Pig Swallowed Insurance Card

A man named John Brown, of Peterborough, charged with begging at Boston, explained that he had been working for some months but he was unable to produce his insurance card owing to a remarkable misadventure He said that while on his way to Boston he secured an odd day's work. He laid down his coat and a pig which came by ate the garment, with the insurance card and an ounce of tobacco in the pockets. The Bench sentenced him to one day's imprisonment.

Insurance Act Fraud

For making a false declaration to obtain unemployed benefit under the Insurance Act, John Bryun, a painter, was sentenced to seven days' imprisonment at Bedford.

FAMOUS REFEREE

Corri Needed the Wisdom of a Solomon on One Occasion

Best known of all referees is Eugene Corri, the great English arbitrator of boxing, whose name is as familiar to followers of the game on this side of the Atlantic as it is across the water. Corri is the last word in the sport in England and referees all the bouts at the National Sporting club.

"I have had 'hot times' in the ring frequently," said Corri to a newspaper man when discussing ring affairs in general and the refereeing angle in particular. "Perhaps the most unpleasant moment and the one requiring the quickest action of mind was when two young fellows were fighting at the old club in London, some years ago. There was a great deal of betting on the outcome. I don't remember the names of the boxers, but they were called Jack and Bill. They had been fighting like two wildcats for 12 rounds and it was a toss-up as to which had the better of it.

EUGENE CORRI

First one would score a knockdown and then the other. The crowd was wild with excitement and the betting continued furious. In the thirteenth, Jack began to pile up points and had away the best of it. I did not see how the fight could go, another round.

"The climax came in the fourteenth. They rushed and let go rights at the same time. Both landed on the point of the jaw and both went to the floor for the count of 10.

"The excitement was of the wildest, the crowd demanding a draw, but when the men were brought to their senses, I gave the decision to the one who was leading on points at the time of the double knockout."

Water Baseball

Water baseball is a new game originated by E. C. Brennan, president of the American Life Saving Society. The rules are very similar to those governing regular baseball. The battery and batsmen are perched on floating islands, while the basemen and fielders support themselves by clinging to cork floats. The fielders are permitted to either throw or swim with the ball while attempting to catch a "runner."

LIQUOR IN BRITAIN

Licenses Show a Steady Decline in England and Wales

The latest statistics issued by the Home Office in regard to the operation and administration of the laws relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors in England and Wales provide some very instructive figures. Whether these figures go to prove Britishers are becoming a more sober nation or not readers can form their own opinions, with the plain, undiluted facts before them. At the beginning of the last fiscal year there were in England and Wales 91,247 premises licensed for the sale of alcoholic stimulants to be consumed on or off such premises, and which are known as on-licenses. In addition, there were 24,115 premises licensed for the sale of such stimulants to be consumed off the premises, and which are referred to as off-licences. These figures, it might be noted, give an average of about three licensed houses for each 1,000 of the population.

One outstanding feature revealed by these statistics is that the number of licensed houses has for some years been steadily decreasing. The year's figures show a decrease of 1,237 in the on-licenses and 323 in the off-licenses. Since 1895 the number of on-licenses has gone down from 103,341 to 91,217, and during the same period the off-licenses have been reduced from 25,405 to 24,115. In considering these reductions it is well to bear in mind the increase in the population, over 4,000,000 during the period in question.

The Courage-giver

All day her wistful face looks out
Through all December's gusty snows,
Through all the August heat,
A little captive of the slums,
Unenvious and sweet.

The other children run below,
On play or errand bent;
She watches them from dawn to dark
With great brown eyes intent,
Breaking all shackles of the flesh
In that high tenement.

Yet he who passes day by day,
And they who minister
Beside her to the few cheap wants,
Like some awed worshipper
Wonder, before that placid brow;
"What use is life to her?"

What use? The great and only use!
The chance to face her fate
With folded hands and cheerful heart
And stalwart soul elate;
To crush the world 'neath stricken heel;
To suffer and to wait.

O brave, sad smile that put to shame
My anguish of a day,
I owe you more than I can tell
And more than I can pay;
A lesson for the passing need,
And courage for alway!

Hatpin to Hasten Donkey

Mr. George Geraghty at a meeting of the Roscommon Town Commissioners referred to the ill-usage of donkeys. He instanced a case of a "nice young lady" in a hobble skirt whom he saw urging a poor animal up a hill by means of a hatpin. The clerk was directed to draw the attention of the police to the matter.

Col. W. N. Ponton Unknowingly Interviewed

The following interview with Col. W. N. Ponton of this city, quite unexpectedly sprung upon the genial Bellevillian, is copied from the Buckingham (Que.) Post of July 25th:

Col. W. N. Ponton, K. C., of Belleville, Ont., was in Buckingham this week, the guest of his son, Mr. Harry Ponton, of Haney, Quinley & Robertson, contractors of High Falls power plant. Col. Ponton was greatly impressed with the grandeur of the Lievre's wonder, the High Falls, which surpasses in beauty and potentiality any written description of its magnificence. His amazement was extreme when informed that very few of the townspeople considered it worth while going into raptures over, and was genuinely surprised that it was not the mecca periodically during the boating season of lovers of the beautiful and inspiring nature. He was very much struck with Buckingham, and said that the power generated at High Falls when being used to run additional industries in the place, assisting to develop mines of phosphate, graphite and mica in the Lievre, the possibilities of the town and district could only be guessed at; in his estimation there was a grand future ahead of Buckingham, instancing his own town of Belleville, which, under the impetus of a similar development, had gone ahead by leaps and bounds. Col. Ponton is president of the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario with a membership of eleven thousand business men. He spoke of the great benefit a Board of Trade would prove to Buckingham, and was astonished that one had not been organized here ere this time. He had a kind word to say of newspapers, not only of the metropolitan daily, of which his own city boasts a couple, but of the little weekly as well. He thinks the weekly newspaper does not get nearly the credit it is entitled to, where booming the home town is concerned. People expect too much for nothing. A well-supported newspaper is of incalcuable benefit to the place wherein it is published, and also to the districts surrounding it. For some years Colonel Ponton was lecturer in the Business College at Belleville, and it gave him great pleasure to meet some business men in Buckingham who had attended his talks among them Messrs. E. M. Lapierre, merchant, and G. N. Bothwell, of The Lievre River Navigation Company. This is Colonel Ponton's initial viit to our town, and The Post hopes it is but the prelude to many others.

Police Court Circles

There were five drunks before Magistrate Masson this morning which were disposed of as follows:

DRUNKS

George Wright was fined $1.00 and $2.50 cost. He paid the fine.

Ephraim Woodstock was fined $5.00 and $2.50 cost. Ephraim paid up.

Ernest Kout was fined $5 or 21 daysn. Not having the money he went up on the hill.

George Harwood was fined $1.00 and $2.50 cost. He also settled.

Hiram Barnhardt was fined $10 and $2.50 costs. He didn't have the money, so went to jail.

Two small purses were found on the street. One has been claimed.

Bancroft Hunter Treed a Cow

Christopher Olmtead of Bangor, went out hunting around his father's estate the other day. Game was scarce, and when he ran across a flock of cows belonging to John Vanallen, he treed one of them and brought it down with the first shot. All this was eminently satisfactory to Christopher, but Mr. Vanallen took an entirely different view of the matter, which explains why young Olmstead was here on Thursday last in charge of an officer of the law. He was given a preliminarry heacing before Mr. F. Mullett, J. P., pleaded guily, and was committed for trial at Belleville.—Bancroft Times.

A Champion Belleville Holstein Milker

Another member of the Belleville District Holstein Breeders' Club is the owner of a cow with a Canadian chamipon record. Mr. Archibald Parks of Napanee has recently completed a record of merit test on the cow Daisy Pauline Pietertje, aged 7 years 3 months. She produced 3,079.1 pounds of milk and 116.15 pounds of butter in 30 days, and 741.5 pounds of milk and 28.59 pounds of butter in 7 days. The highest amount of milk for one day was 110.7 pounds.

This is the first cow in Canada that gave over 3,000 pounds of milk in 30 days. She is also entered in the record of performance test for one year and is very much ahead of any other cow in Canada for the time she has been entered. She has been fresh 58 days and has given 5,432.1 pounds of milks. She was tested under very unfavorable conditions, as the weather was very warm. The test was made under the supervision of L. A. Reddick.

A Real Romance In Modern Life

Toronto Girl Quietly Wed to St. Louis Man Breaks the News to a Friend on way to Station—Now She is Home.

COBOURG, July 31.—Holiday seekers blame it on the having nothing-else-to-do condition, but bids fair to afford the towns people gossip for many weeks to come.

About five o'clock Friday afternoon the couple were married at the Methodist parsonage.

The clergyman deemed it a case where the two young people had become suddenly enamored of each other, but evidently considered it well to refrain from asking questions since the license certified that the man was 21 and the girl 19 years of age.

On coming out of the parsonage the pair re-entered a car, which was headed for Port Hope to catch the train there, but the light hearted bride, seeing a girl friend passing at the moment, could not resist the temptation to call out to her the excited words: "We are married!"

Feminine intuition directed the girl friend hurriedly to the nearest telephone and the lady with whom the bride had been staying was informed of the facts. A young friend was astride of his motor cycle in a trice and caught the couple at the Queen's Hotel, Port Hope, and was followed by friends of the girl in two autos.

Friends took possession of the bride and accompanied her back to Toronto to her family, who may have yet some share in the decision as to what shall be the outcome of ten days' romance by the lakeside.

WHY BURNS FOUGHT

Canadian Boxer Took a Beating to Satisfy Newspapers

Tommy Burns feared Jack Johnson and gave the big negro fighter his chance at the title only because the newspapers forced him to do so.

Tommy admits this freely in a letter to a friend in Chicago. Burns says he believed every boxer in the world has some man he is sidestepping and doesn't want to fight. He then goes on to say that Johnson always "had his goat," and that he never had any idea of fighting him.

Indeed, Tommy made the price for meeting Johnson so high, as he thought at the time, that no promoter in the world would have the courage to make a bid for the match.

Further, Tommy freely admits that he is sorry now that he ever did such a thing, and it will be a life-long regret to him. Still, as an afterthought, Burns expresses the opinion that he would have won from Johnson had the battle been permitted to go along to the finish, and not been stopped by the Sydney police.

"The press is to blame for the match," says Tommy, "as I was practically forced into it."

BASEBALL VS. GOLF BALL

Best of Batters Cannot Hit as Far as Good Golfer

The dispute between golfers and baseball players as to whether a golf ball could be driven from the home plate at the Polo Grounds, New York, over the centrefield bleachers, was decided in the affirmative. Accompanied by Manager McGraw of [illegible] who had affirmed the feat could not be accomplished Grantland Rice, golfer and baseball writer, and Oswald Kirby, widely known amateur golfer, went out on the field with golf equipment and both succeeded in making the drive. Rice put over one ball in four and Kirby two in four. The golfers drove against the wind, but the balls carried over the top of the fence, which is about 50 feet high at this point, by about 15 feet.

A brassy was used for the drives, and it is estimated that the carry was about 200 yards. The distance from the home plate to the fence is about 165 yards. No ball player has ever been able to drive a pitched ball even into the lower part of the central field stand, many yards nearer the home plate.

Romantic Wedding Of Burrows Sifton

Elopement Ends in Marriage in Tonneau of an Automobile--Met Bride in London.

MILBURN, N. J., August 1.— (Special) Mrs. Jean Donaldson Kirwan, daughter of the late Andrew Donaldson, who was a vice-president of the Erie Railroad, and Winfield Burrows Sifton, of Ottawa, Canada, were married in the tonneau of an automobile which was halted under an arc light in a quiet section of Springfield Avenue last evening. The wedding breakfast consisted of chocolate ice cream in a nearby drug store, and the bride carried a bouquet of roses which Sifton purchased while waiting for the minister.

It was an elopement, the second one for the bride, and the culmination of a chance meeting of the two at the International Horse Show in London a year ago when Sifton was captain of the Canadian military team.

Mrs Kirkwan slipped away from her mother two weeks ago while they were travelling in England, and came to this country to wed Sifton. Mrs. Kirwin is but 20 years of age, and Sifton is 23. He is the son of Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Dominion Conservation Commission, and former Minister of Interior. She eloped with John S. Kirwan in January, 1910.

Cost too Much To Ship Goods

LONDON, July 31.—J. M. Robertson, M.P., under-secretary of the Board of Trade, replying this evening to an inquiry as to the reason for the decision of the British Government to abstain from participating in the Panama-Pacific Exposition, said:

"The ultimate decision in this matter is really one for the traders and manufacturers. We found on investigation that we should have the most extreme difficulty in persuading them to send exhibits on any worthy or useful scale to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and should probably have failed entirely to persuade them to send anything. They will not agree to incur the cost of sending exhibits. They point to similar heavy burdens they have had to bear recently, and draw attention to the decision of the Berlin conference to have great international exhibitions only every three years.

"It is true that British firms are exhibiting this year at Ghent, where the up-to-date installation of cotton spinning and weaving machinery has proved valuable to British trade.

THINNING OUT SEA LIONS

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 1.—Special—Hunting sea lions is a thankless job, according to the evidence of M. Collinson, an old seal hunter, before the sealing commission now sitting here. The government is inquiring as to the possibilities of thinning out the herds of sea lions that have been raising Cain with the fish on the Island's west coast. Mr. Collinson states that he spent a season hunting the sea lion and gave it up as a bad job. He once shot twenty in Barkley Sound and did not secure one because they all sank almost immediately they were shot. A firm in Vancouver used their hides for making chauffeur's gauntlets and linemen's gloves. They contained very little oil, although some of the animals would weigh two tons. Their flesh was worh a little as fertilizer.

HOT SPRINGS FOUND IN WEST

VICTORA, B. C., Aug. 1.—Special—Confirmation from a government expert has been received of the existence of important hot springs near Refuge Harbor on Clayuquot Sound, Vancouver Island. The springs were inspected and tested by H. C. Clapp, a member of the Dominion Geological Survey, who says that the flow is at the rate of from three to four gallons a second. These springs are situated in the heart of one of the most wildly beautiful sections of Vancouver Island.

The Sable Lorcha

By Horace Hazeltine

COPYRIGHT 1912, A. C. McCLURG & CO.

"What steamer?" I cried, suddenly realizing that the one really vital piece of information we should have obtained, had all this while been delayed. "What steamer? Did he give you the name of it?"

"In just a moment, Mr. Clyde," she said, with a smile that I confess exasperated me.

"Pardon me," I returned, insistently, "but you do not realize, I fear, what minutes even may mean in this matter."

"No," still very calm, "I really don't. The steamer has been at sea now twenty-five days. It is bound for Hong Kong. If there was a chance of overtaking it, I—"

"There's every chance of overtaking it," I interrupted once again. "Tomorrow, or next day, or even today, it may put into Rio. We must telegraph the United States Consulate at every possible port."

And then, for the first time, apparently, Miss Clement seemed to appreciate there was a real urgency.

"The steamer is the Glamorganshire," she said, quickly: "A freighter; a tramp, I suppose; bound for Hong Kong. She sailed on Wednesday, the twenty-eighth of last month, and Mr. Cameron was put aboard, half-drugged, as one of the crew."

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Tortoise and the Hare.

Although Miss Clement's interesting chapter of disclosures was by no means ended with the name of the steamer and its date of sailing, it there came, so far as I was concerned, at least, to an abrupt intermission. For, as though the delay and inaction of the past month but served to swell the flood of my eager energy, the tide, so long checked but now set free, careering like an unleashed spring freshet, overrode all barriers. With scant apology, I sprang to the telephone, and if Miss Clement continued her conversation with Dr. Addison, I was deaf to what she said.

What I sought, first of all, was corroboration. Did a steamship, named the Glamorganshire, sail for Hong Kong on October 28th? In less than five minutes, the facts were mine. Such a steamer had sailed for the east on that date. Her agents were Bartlett Brothers. Their offices were in the Produce Exchange Building.

Another minute, and Bartlett Brothers were on the wire. No, the Glamorganshire did not take the South American route. Her course was through the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal. She carried no passengers. She was British. She was very slow. She had called at the Azores and then at Gibraltar, where she had been delayed in coaling. Yes, she would make several Mediterranean ports. If all went well, she would reach Port Said about December 6th. Certainly not before that. Probably a day or so later.

I dare say it was exceptional that I secured all this information with so little trouble, and without giving any hint as to why I desired it, but merely on the statement that I was Mr. Clyde, of The Week.

So far as I could judge, the Glamorganshire would call at Algiers in a few days; and for a while I considered the advisability of communicating with the United States Consul at that port, through the State Department at Washington. But a knowledge of the tortuous involutions of official red tape deterred me. After all, I believed that if Cameron was to be rescued from the gruelling slavery of servitude on this British freighter, the work must not be intrusted to the personally disinterested.

Thereupon I consulted calendars, steamer schedules, and Continental time-tables. By the fast transatlantic liner sailing on the morrow, I could make Paris in six days. Forty-eight hours later I could be in Brindisi. If good fortune followed, less than four days more would land me at Port Said. It was now Monday, November 23. Twelve days hence would be December 5th, and the Glamorganshire, her agents had told me, could not possibly reach there before December 6th. The margin was not wide, but it seemed to me sufficient, and the thought of further inaction, now that the trail lay bare, was nothing less than unendurable torment.

Wisdom, I suppose, would have dictated the advisability of securing some badge of authority from my own government before setting forth on a mission involving so delicate a point of international maritime law as that which was here embraced; but the saving of time was with me, just then, the paramount consideration. The loss of a day meant the possible missing not only of connections, but of the main object of my journey; and so, armed with nothing more potent than good health, strong determination, and a well-filled purse I boarded the Kronprinz Wilhelm and started on my diagonal race to head off a quarry which already had twenty-five days' start of me.

Speed being all-important, my wish was to travel alone and unencumbered, but at the last moment I was persuaded to consent to the company of both Evelyn Grayson and Dr. Addison. Realizing the brave, unfaltering assistance which the young woman had afforded me from the first, I could hardly refuse to gratify her wish to be present at what we both hoped would be the victorious end. Moreover, the thought of absence from her for a month at least, and probably much longer, was far from the most pleasant contemplation; my yielding, therefore, was not altogether unselfish.

Dr. Addison's case was different. At the last moment he decided to go abroad by the same ship; and, on the way over, touched by his contrition and his almost pathetic desire to make amends to his quondam friend at the earliest possible minute, I myself invited him to go with us the rest of the way.

Evelyn had proposed that Mrs. Lancaster should also be included in the party, but this I would not hear of. If, for propriety's sake, another presence was necessary, her maid, and, ultimately, Dr. Addison, afforded all the security the conventions could demand.

The fever of haste was upon all of us from the start. The time on shipboard, in spite of our common subject of converse dragged eternally.

Should we reach Cherbourg in time to connect with the P. & O. Express at Paris? That was the one constantly recurring question, to be speculated upon with varying degrees of hope and despair.

As good fortune would have it, we made the train with fifteen minutes to spare, and the run to Brindisi was accomplished without accident or unseemly delay.

Here, however, we were compelled to wait six hours. The steamer was late, owing to some seismic disturbance off the coast of Malta, and fear of encountering new and necessarily uncharted volcanic islands, which hrd demanded slow and cautious sailing.

However sinister had been the game Fate played with us in the earlier stages of our quest, the favor of its present mood could not be gainsaid. That we were now reasonably sure of reaching Port Said in advance of the Glamorganshire was in itself a welcome relief from trying anxiety; but that was only a small part of the banquet of good things provided for us.

I was still exercised in a measure over the steps which must be taken to secure Cameron's release. Without proper introduction to the authorities, it was becoming more and more a question in my mind whether, after all, I should be able to accomplish my end in the brief time to which I was restricted.

With this fell possibility of failure dinging in my reflections, I was striding the white deck of the P. and O. steamer, in the early morning following the night of our departure from Brindisi, when a hand, dropped heavily on my shoulder, spun me round to face a laughing, sun-browned, young Englishman in white flannels.

For just a moment I was literally, as well as figuratively, taken aback, for the tone of the ringing voice which greeted me carried me five years at least into the past, when Lionel Hartley and I had ridden to hounds together at Melton Mowbray, while fellow guests at a house-party in the neighborhood.

"You bally Yankee!" he was shouting. "Fancy running into you in this fashion! I'm jolly glad to see you, old chap!"

Though my delight at seeing him was at that moment tempered by absorbing interest in my mission, it rose a few minutes later to unadulterated ecstasy, when I discoverd that he was stationed at Port Said, and occupied what seemed to me just then one of the most important posts in the British Foreign Service—secretary to the Governor General for the Suez Canal.

"You're going to Cairo, I suppose?" he hazarded.

"No," I replied. "I'm going with you, and I shall not let you out of my sight, my friend, until you have proved you're something more than a figure head stuck up in the Egyptian sands!"

"If there's any little thing I can do—" he began; but I interrupted him.

"There's a very big thing you can do," I corrected. And then I told him.

"What a lark!" he cried, refusing to recognize the serious side of it. "Fancy one of your American multimillionaires passing coal on a British freighter."

"Passing coal!" I exclaimed. "What rot! Surely they wouldn't—"

"Oh, wouldn't they?" he broke in. "That's just what they would do. He isn't an able-bodied seaman, is he? You can safely wager he's an experienced stoker, or at least a trimmer by this time."

"Don't, Hartley, don't," I protested. "It's too cruel to think of."

"Never mind, old chap," was his rejoinder "There's a good time coming. We'll have him out and washed and dressed and sitting at table with us an hour after the old tub lets her anchor drop. And I'll wager you a tenner that there won't be a miss in any part of the programme."

AROUND THE WORLD IN SEVEN DAYS

Airmen Think it a Possibility of the Not Far Distant Future With Powerful Hydroplane

There is no mistake about it—the world is growing smaller. Magellan, its first circumnavigator, took no fewer than three years over the task. In 1907 Lieutenant-Colonel H. Burnley-Campbell, a veteran of sixty-four, raced round it in a little over forty days. This is the record, so far; but it will probably be broken in the not far distant future.

The waterplane, of course, is destined to accomplish this seeming impossibility. It can be done, airmen have no doubt. It is merely a matter of building machines big enough, with sufficiently powerful engines and adequate storage capacity.

First will come the flight across the Atlantic—roughly speaking, two thousand miles from land to land.

Then will follow preparations for the greater journey—the crowning aerial achievement of all—the flight round the globe.

This is not so difficult as it sounds. Possibly the flight across the Atlantic from, say, St. John's, Newfoundland, to Valentia, on the southwest coast of Ireland will be a more trying ordeal to airmen than any single stage in the round-the-world flight. And for this reason. The North Atlantic is proverbially a rough and stormy ocean, even in summer.

The aeronaut who essays to fly round the world, on the other hand, can choose his own route; and this means that he can fly, for the most part, over tropical seas, and in air of an equable temperature.

Nor need he at any time make a longer land-to-land journey than that which will have to be accomplished by the winner of the trans-Atlantic flight. His jumping-off place, so to speak, will probably be Cape San Roque, in Brazil, whence he will set a straight course for Sierra Leone, approximately one thousand miles distant. From thence he will steer his machine up along the African coast, hardly ever out of sight of land, and then through the Straits of Gibraltar, and, by way of the Mediterranean, the Red and the Arabian Seas to Ceylon.

Thence past the "Spice Islands" as the old navigators christened them, he will fly, by way of Torres Strait, out into the Coral Sea and the broad, isle studded Pacific, and so back by way of Panama to his starting-place.

Approximately, the distance travelled by the route indicated will be about 30,000 miles, and this can be covered, by a waterplane of 200 horse-power, at the rate of one hundred miles an hour, making 300 hours of actual flight.

Assuming the pilot to fly on an average fifteen hours out of each twenty-four, the remaining nine hours being devoted to resting, he would accomplish the entire journey in twenty days, less than half the shortest time taken for the trip up to now. Or if a waterplane be built of sufficient size to carry three men comfortably, so as to allow of a practically continuous flight being made, with only brief stops for petrol and provisions, then the world may be flown round in about twelve and a half days.

And even this is not the limit. Experienced airmen expect to be able to construct presently machines that will be capable of flying at the rate of 200 miles an hour; and this, of course, may mean that the world will be circumnavigated aerially in less than a week.—Answers.

SPORT IN CANADA

A Plea for Lacrosse and Other Trials of Strength

The game of baseball is a striking contrast to the sedate, leisurely Old Country game of cricket with its intervals for tea and its innings lasting two or three days. Nowadays there does not seem to be so much written or said about the real Canadian national game: lacrosse. It would be pity indeed if lacrosse were to be allowed to pass and become forgotten to Canada. For a manly robust summer game the pleasure of a well-matched lacrosse battle would be hard to excel. It may not be so entertaining to the spectators, but for a downright test of physical fitness and combination it is equal to any in the field. In modern times the tendency in sport as in work appears to be away from brawn in favor of brain. The midways at the fairs know nothing of the tough old boxing booths where brawny rustics were invited to don the gloves; wrestling on the green has given place to Japanese acrobats and vaudeville turns.

The opportunity to watch a straight bout between burly champions comes rarely. To see such a splendid specimen of manhood as Zybsco, or Frank Gotch, the western farmer, is a stirring incentive to the youth who is inspired to build up a robust constitution. How much better, with all its rough, strenuous work, is the glove fight and the wrestling match, than the morbid gazing at freak animals and fake criminal cars. Happily the sturdy spirit of sport still prevails in Canada; and even if lacrosse has to give way for baseball nothing will displace the stalwart contests of autumn on the Canadian football field and the fast hockey games of winter.

Boy was Terribly Crushed by Car

Shunting Accident in G. T. R. Yards at Toronto May Have Fatal Result.

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—Sleeping against the blind end of one of the spurs in the Grand Trunk yard at Bathurst street, Claude Smith, a seventeen-year-old call boy, employed by the railway, was terribly crushed this morning when a car was shunted along the track. His chest was caught between the buffer of the car and the blind end and he received serious internal injuries. The accident happened at 3.30 this morning. In the dark there was no chance for the train crew to see the lad in his dangerous sleeping place. Dr. Rice attended to him and he was removed to Grace Hospital, where he lies in a precarious condition. The boy lives at 117 Niagara street.

DIG UP $1,000 A DAY IN RICH STRIKE IN YUKON

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 1.—Confirmation has been obtained from an official source of the stories published of the rich gold strike on the shushanna, in the White River district of the Yukon. Secretary Wesley Blair, of the Vancouver Board of Trade, wired today for particulars, and received a telegram from the Dawson Board of Trade secretary stating that $3,200 was washed by two men in four days, and that the gold came to aDwson. Numbers of Dawson's most conservative people were leaving for the diggings, fully convinced of its genuineness.

Other reports say that $1,000 a day was taken out of the Shushanna district in eight days by two men, who worked on Discovery claim No. 1 on Eldorado Creek. John Moore and Gustarson arrived at Cordova, Alaska, yesterday with the report that two miners, using tin plates, had washed out $2,500 on their claim on Bonanza Creek in a week.

Col. Brodie Dead Was Nonogenarian

Man who Fathered Grey Regiment Lived to See His Corps one of Best in Ontario.

OWEN SOUND, Aug. 1.—Colonel George Brodie, who formed and fathered the 31st Grey Regiment, is dead. He was two months short of being 92 years of age. Born in Suffolk, England, he received his education at the famous old Bluecoats' Grammar School. Here he had his first military training, and the life appealed to him to such an extent that he never lost interest in it. When a comparatively young man he came to Canada, and after a few years came to Owen Sound, and almost from the first was busy in military matters, to him to no small degree being the credit for the formation of the 31st Battalion in the 'sixties. When the first Owen Sound company was formed he was the captain, and on the retirement of Colonel Pollard, in 1871, Captain Brodie became the Colonel of the regiment. In 1894, owing to ill-health he was obliged to withdraw from the command of the regiment. Since then he has lived a retired life.

Mr. Compton was married in Scotland a few week ago while on his vacation, the match being a case of love at first sight.

Smuggled Whiskey in Beef Blocks

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—The introduction of whiskey into the forbidden districts of Northern Ontario in pieces of beef has been discovered by Chief Rogers, of the provincial police, and several prosecutions have been undertaken as the result.

It was known that a woman in the Porcupine district was getting whiskey, and after the authorities had been puzzled for some time an examination of beef going in was made and deep cuts were noticed.

Examination developed the fact that cunningly hidden away in the cuts was a hot water bottle filled with whiskey, each bottle containing about two quarts of the liquid, which the woman mixed with water and sold for fancy prices.

Calgary Ignores High Priced Money

Will not Pay Big Rate for Loan Offered in Chicago--City not Hard Up.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 1.—Calgary does not need to pay 6¼ per cent. for money obtained on treasury notes. It was decided at a special meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council held today.

A proposal wired from Chicago by Mayor H. A. Sinnott, asking if the city would accept an offer made to him for the purchase of $500,000 worth of treasury bills at that rate was turned down. It was stated that the city was not pushed for money at present, and there did not appear to be any need of the city paying a higher rate than is being paid in London, as it would injure Calgary's credit.

New Zealand Mecca For all Vancouver

Thousand People Invited Aboard Warship at Officer's Reception.

VANCOUVER, Aug. .—One thousand persons were the guests of the captain and officers of the battleship New Zealand, from 3.30 to 5.30 yesterday on board the warship. At night the ship was brilliantly illuminated with two thousand lights, chief among the decorations being a huge crown in many colors. This morning Indian chiefs presented an address of welcome and in the afternoon the officers were to be entertained to luncheon by the North Vancouver Council, while aquatic sports will take place for the men, and in the evening the Council will entertain the officers at a banquet.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 1.—"I have always held in this court," said Magistrate South in hearing assault charges against a street car conductor named Nicholson, "that if one man calls another a foul name the man insulted is not worthy to be called a British subject, unless he resents the insult with a blow."

NEWSPAPER WINS CASE

Its Right to Decline Objectionable Advertising Upheld

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 1.—That newspapers have a right to decline advertising when they deem it objectionable, even if it is submitted to them under a yearly contract, is the effect of a decision handed down today in the District Court here.

The case came up when a local department store was sued by a newspaper to recover money due under a yearly contract which the store management had declared void because certain portions of its advertising copy had been rejected by the paper.

WORK ON TORONTO BARRACKS

Mr. M. Sullivan, the well-known Kingston contractor, who has been awarded the contract for the erection of the main building of the new Toronto Barracks at Long Branch, will begin work almost immediately. The amount of the contract is in the neighborhood of $670,000. The buildings to be erected under the first contract include the main barracks for the men, the officers's mess, the dining hall, the recreation hall and the stables. It will take nearly three years to complete the work.

Regiment Trod on "Old Glory"

Girl Waved American Flag in Front of Bugler who Then Tramped it in The Earth.

SASKATOON, Ang. 1.—Militia men of this city are in a ferment to-day over a flag incident which graced the parade of 105th Fusiliers last night and the general attitude around the armouries to day is that of waiting for something to drop.

When the parade was passing down Second avenue, the main thoroughfare of the city, a young girl in a passing automobile waved an American flag in front of one of the members of the bugle band of the regiment. The man broke ranks and snatching the flag, broke the staff in two and trampled it under his feet, the majority of the regiment passing over it also.

The young man was instantly taken from the ranks and at the conclusion of the parade was court-martialled and discharged from the regiment. The rest of the members of the bugle band, the majority of whom are young men, were waiting outside the armouries and as soon as they heard the decision they went inside and told one of the officers that they were handing in their clothes and would resign permanently from the regiment if this decision were allowed to stand. They stated that the flag was waved right in the face of the bugler in question.

Officers of the regiment held a consultation and the man was later reinstated.

Owing to the fact that the bugle band were to take a prominent part in the big parade in honor of six hundred delegates of the real estate board to-day, the officers, it is said, decided that they were forced to reinstate the man. The second decision was a signal for a jingoistic orgy which lasted until late. Members of the regiment in uniform marched through the streets near the armouries with the Union Jack at their heads singing "God Save the King", and "Rule Britannia".

The Old Dundas St. Burying Ground

To the Editor.

Dear Sir,—Your article in Thursday's issue in regard to the Old Dundas Street burying ground was timely, for it is not only an eyesore, but an open disgrace. The writer takes an occasional walk through the grounds for the purpose of keeping the headstones of certain persons for whom he holds a high regard, although no relation whatever, in or near their graves. The last visit was but a couple of weeks ago and it was painful to see the condition of things there,—grass and weeds in all directions, trees and bushes in clusters which form a rendezvous for tramps, one of whom was sleeping peacefully when the writer walked through, and even a worse class, for I have been told that it is simply a hot-bed of immorality. I noticed the names on headstones of persons who in days of the past held the esteem of Belleville, people such as Joseph Bullen, Samuel Stevens, John Wilson, Letitia Wilson, his wife, Mrs. Wm. Neal and many others. These stones are strewn upon the ground, some of them broken in pieces, and things generally are in a state of chaos—the front gate wide open and the back fence broken down. While such is the case, the church claiming this property is hardly to blame, for at different times they have spent considerable money in fencing the place, and in a short time it is carried away for firewood or broken down, as at present it is of wire.

Could not the head stones be taken to the Bellevile cemetery and put in a place by themselves where no further damage would be done to them, and the old burying ground sold, which would be more respectable than leaving it in its present condition? Perhaps the proper officials can take the matter up at an early date and make some improvement.

Yours truly,
METHODIST.

BAT WAS ELECTROCUTED

During Wednesday night a poor lone bat made its way in to the Standard job printing office, Kingston. Just how it managed to get into the office is not known, as it had no pass; but at any rate it got in. The bird picked out a very poor perch when it went to sleep on one of the motors. When the motor was started on Thursday morning the pressman was shock to see the bat fall to the floor dead.

THE G. T. R. SERVICE

The following is a letter received at Grand Trunk Pacific Railway headquarters from a well known and extensive traveller who resides in Toronto:

"I know it will be of interest to you to know the estimation in which the Grand Trunk Pacific service is held by the travelling public. Personally, I found it fully up to the standard exhibited during my trip last year; but what pleased me more was the evidence of the pleasure taken in your line of travellers. I talked to a score or more definitely about your service, and in not one case did I meet with anything but agreement with the statement that you were putting up by far the best service in the West to-day. I was told by not a few that you have practically cornered the Winnipeg to Fort William business, and there was not the least reluctance in expressions of unbounded praise for the Winipeg to Edmonton service. It was somewhat surprising to me to hear so many eager to talk in this way. In my rather wide travelling experience I have found the public only too willing to accept service without vociferous praise, and it pleased me to meet something different where your line is concerned.

The electric-lighted cars, berth-lights, fans, etc., are catching on, and your servants seem to take an interest in continuing your good name. I enjoyed the new line between Fort William and Winnipeg very much. I am waiting impatiently until your line runs through to Prince Rupert."

A CHANGED MAP

Public School pupils of a few decades ago would hardly recognize the map of Ontario which appears in the new Public School Geography now being issued for the Province. A new feature is the big "District of Patricia," bordering on Hudson Bay. The five mile strip, along which the T. & N.O. is to run, will be outlined, although the exact location cannot be traced with unerring fidelity. Geographies published hitherto have given old Ontario the centre of the stage, or page, with the Northern domain a sort of corner adjunct. But now, while the old Province is not neglected, the newer land is receiving somewhat more favorable notice than in the past. Fifty thousand copies of the book will be ready for the school reopening in September.

HOW TO DRESS THE BABY IN THIS HOT WEATHER

Of special interest in these hot days is the advise given by Dr. C. J. Hastings, M.H.O., in July Health Bulletin, on the care of babies during the warm weather.

"By using common sense and consideration in dressing baby during the hot weather, you will be doing a great deal towards keeping him well," he declares. How would you like, you mother in your cool, collarless gown, to have around your warm perspiring neck, the upper part of a flannel shirt, topped off with the starched frill of a fussy dress, and the starched bow of a muslin bonnet. On the very hot days keep baby in his little knitted binder and diaper. If his feet are inclined to be chilly, a pair of socks or wollen bootees will not add materially to his discomfort.

KEEP HIM OR HER COOL

"Keep him in the coolest, cleanest room in the house. Let him lie as much as possible in his cradle or carriage or crib, and let the little bed be made flat and smooth and covered with clean, cool sheets. You will in all possibilities use rubber sheeting or oilcloth as a protection to the mattress. Nothing is more heating than this material, so pad it well with an old folded blanket or a cotton batting pad. But, and this is of vital importance, be most particular in increasing baby's bed and body clothing if the weather becomes colder. A hot sultry day often precedes a storm, and it in turn is followed by a cool north wind. We "grown-up" feel the invigorating effects of the change in weather, but if baby is not properly protected, he is chilled and all sorts of trouble result. Doctors tell us they have more sick babies after a sudden cold wave than during a hot spell.

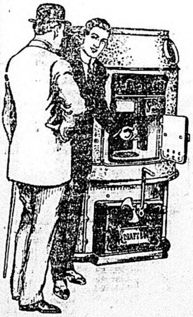
Don't be afraid to give baby a sponge bath two or three times daily during the hot weather. Use lukewarm water and give them before feeding. Depend more on careful drying and cleansing than on powder for keeping baby free from chafing. How often one sees baby's little creases full of moist caked powder!

CLOTHES MUST BE CLEAN

Keep baby's clothes scrupulously clean. When you use so little and have that little so simple that ought not to be so very hard to accomplish.

"Don't force feedings during the hot weather. When baby shuts his firm little mouth and refuses to take another drop, depend upon it, he knows what his little stomach can stand. Don't give him the breast or the bottle of food to still his fitful crying. Instead offer him some cool, boiled water in bottle or spoon. Have it always ready in a covered receptacle in a cool place, and give it frequently. Think how often you fly to the tap these hot days and remember baby feels the same thirst.

Mr. Burns Makes A Call



One day, just a short time ago, a keen business man, we'll call him Mr. Burns, though that wasn't his name, called on a McClary agent.

He said he was convinced that McClary's Sunshine Furnace was an economical furnace, because a Sunshine had cut one of his neighbor's coal bills by one-third. But he wanted to know more about the durability of it.

So the McClary agent told him how careful McClary's were to use the very best materials. That nothing was considered too good for the Sunshine.

He told about the fine quality of the steel used in the dome and radiator. He explained how the cup-joint construction provided ample room for the contraction and expansion of the fire-pot.

He told him about the fire-pot made of smooth close-grained semi-steel—a material that destructive sulphur fumes cannot penetrate.

He showed him how, by changing around the sides of the three-sided grate bars every day or two, the life of the grates was made three-fold.

He showed him the large feed and ash pit doors, convenient water pan, ample ash pan, and, in short, everything about the Sunshine.

When the agent was through, Mr. Burns shook him cordially by the hand, thanked him for his frankness—and walked out, without giving the agent a chance to close the sale.

But next day, Mr. Burns' architect 'phoned the McClary agent and told him he had an order for him to install a Sunshine Furnace in a new house.

If you want to know full particulars about a remarkable, durable, heavy furnace, call on the McClary agent in your locality. If you would like to read the latest Sunshine furnace booklet, write our nearest office.

WILD HORSES OF WEST

Descendants of Animals Abandoned During Cariboo Gold Rush

More than three thousand wild horses, in herds of from 30 to 100, are roaming over the hills and valleys in the interior of British Columbia, according to a report brought to Edmonton by James Bradley, after an extended exploration tour of the coast province.

"Indians and white prospectors and pack train freighters value these untamed animals more than the high bred horses," said Mr. Bradley. "They are the progeny of horses turned loose on the trail by discouraged or dying men during the famous gold rush in the Cariboo country. Thousands of the veriest 'tenderfeet' stampeded to the new fields in the early '60's. Most of them were incompetent, and, in fact, utterly helpless in that wild country, and the horses either broke away or were abandoned when the fortune-hunters gave up the long trail.

"The horses made their feeding grounds in the vicinity of Barkerville for several years afterward and their offspring wandered northward as the bands inceased. They make trails on the mountains and timbered country much after the fashion of buffalo in the early days and deer at present.

"The Indians and freighters, working in the timbered districts, catch them with snares, such as are used for lynx. In most cases the animals are easily broken and they are better for the rough country than high grade horses on account of their stamina and sureness of foot on the mountain trails. We lost horses from our train from time to time and replaced them with wild animals."

Two Fisherman Adrift in Dory

Aug. 1.—A despatch received by the Marine Department from the steamer Montcalm, now in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, states that she picked up two American fishermen adrift in their dory. Their names are Peter Fitzpatrick and Warren James P. Van Tassel. They belong to the steam trawler Alaska, of Gloucester, Mass. When they were picked up near Greely Island, they had been forty-eight hours without food.

The men had been attending to their trawls when a thick fog came on and they lost sight of their ship and were drifting about until picked up by the Montcalm. They received all attention possible on board the vessel and were soon in a fair condition again. The Montcalm will take them to Sydney, from whence they will be sent to Gloucester.

Notice that $300,000 worth of jewelry has been reported stolen from Narragansett so far this season. Think it must be even more. Some of the cottagers are going around with next to nothing on.

Seriously Injured in G. T. R. Yard

Robert Farmer, hailing from Lindsay, originally from Liverpool, but in this country about sixteen years, was seriously, if not fatally injured near the city switch, in the Grand Trunk Railway yards about ten o'clock last night.

As near as can be ascertained, the man must have been in the centre of the track, and, in shunting, three cars passed over him, striking his head and tearing a hole large enough to insert two fingers. As soon as possible the ambulance was on the scene and the unfortunate being was conveyed to the city hospital, where he now lies in a precarious condition.

A man standing near the scene of the accident stated to an Intelligencer representative that he distinctly smelt liquor upon the victim and the fact that he was a stranger in the city shows that he was in no way connected with the G.T.R. system, and at the time was trespassing on the corporation's property. Private information obtained this morning stated that he worked for a Mrs. J. S. Wills of Lindsay, but had left her employ and wandered this way. The same information referred to Farmer as being of a weak mind, and partially irresponsible for his acts.

SECRET OF MYSTERIOUS POWER REVEALED AT LAST.

How Prominent People Have Gained Wealth and Fame.

Simple Method that enables anyone to control thoughts and acts of others, cure diseases and habits without drugs, win the love and friendship of others and read the secret thoughts and desires of people though thousands of miles away.

"TO UPLIFT AND BENEFIT MANKIND," says THE REV. JAMES STANLEY WENTZ.

WONDERFUL BOOK DESCRIBING THIS STRANGE FORCE AND A CHARACTER DELINEATION POST FREE TO ALL WHO WILL WRITE AT ONCE

The National Institute of Sciences of London, England, has appropriated $25,000 toward a fund for the free distribution of Prof. Knowles' new book, "The Key of the Development of the Inner Forces." The book lays bare many astounding facts concerning the practices of Eastern Yogis, and explains a wonderfully simple system for the development of Personal Magnetism, Hypnotic and Telepathic Powers, and the curing of diseases and habits without drugs. The subject of practical character reading is also extensively dealt with, and the author describes a simple method of reading the secret thoughts and desires of others though thousands of miles away. The almost endless stream of letters requesting copies of the book and character delineations indicate clearly the universal interest in Psychological and Occult Sciences.

That Prof. Knowles' system is exciting the interest of the brightest intellect of the present day is clearly shown by the scores of recommendations, among which the following, from representative British publications, the clergy and the medical profession are striking examples:

The Christian Age—"Professor Knowles' System has cured disease, corrected bad habits, strengthened memory, and proved highly beneficial in the cultivation of personality and Personal Influence."

The London Weekly Times:—"Professor Elmer E. Knowles' complete system of Personal Influence and Healing provides the embryo enthusiast with just such knowledge as could be adapted to his own personal circumstances and inclinations."

The London Mail—"Professor Knowles' System embraces a great deal of erudition in a form which can be readily grasped by all who have the ability to read and understand simple prose. No better help towards success in life could be desired."

Modern Society—"No modern investigator along practical lines has received so large amount of praise as that accorded to Professor Elmer E. Knowles for his marvellous System of Personal Influence and Healing. Here at last is a man who is at once a great scholar, a born teacher and a practical helper—for the instruction papers reveal a nature which is sympathetic and of good fellowship for an ambitious, yet largely misguided population."

The Rev. James Stanley Wentz, says:—"No one can give the system a careful perusal without becoming satisfied that in giving this knowledge to the world Prof. Knowles is actuated by the earnest desire to uplift and benefit mankind. I heartily recommend this course to all who desire to develop and cultivate their inner forces."

A Leading London Physician, Dr. R. N. Pickering, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., L.S.A., in a letter to Prof. Knowles, says:—"I consider your system the most complete and accurate literature upon the subect. You have treated the science with much ability."

A Prominent American Physician, A. W. Fisher, M.D., Ph.D., M.E., Principal of the Douglas Institute, writes:—"Your system is very useful to me in my practice."

"Rich and poor alike benefit by the teachings of this new system," says Prof. Knowles, "and the person who wishes to achieve greater success has but to apply the simple rules laid down." That many wealthy and prominent people owe their success to the power of Personal Influence there is not the slightest doubt, but the great mass of people have remained in utter ignorance of these phenomena. The National Institute of Sciences has therefore undertaken the somewhat arduous task of distributing broadcast without regard for class or creed, the information heretofore possessed by the few. In addition to supplying the books free, each person who writes at once will also receive a character delineation of from 400 to 500 words as prepared by Prof. Knowles.

If you wish a copy of Prof. Knowles' book and a Character Delineation, simply copy the following verse in your own handwriting:

"I want power of mind,
Force and strength in my look.
Please read my character
And send me your book."

Also send your full name and address (state whether Mr., Mrs., or Miss), write plainly, and address your letter to:—National Institute of Sciences, Dept. 859-A., No. 258, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E., England. If you wish you may enclose 10 cents (stamps of your own country) to pay postage etc. Postage on letters to England, 2 cents.

LIBERALISM AND BRITISH-BORN VOTE

In anticipation of that form of capture of the British-born vote, the Liberals do not seem to have done anything. Publicly, in Toronto, last autumn, Sir Wilfrid Laurier confessed the injury that vote had done him; admitted that the Liberals would be in a bad case if they could not win it; and mourned over the prevailing habit of the British Liberal to become a Canadian Conservative.

He attributed this to distrust of the Liberal party, says a prominent Canadian paper, because its leader is French and a Catholic. It did not seem to occur to him that, if British Liberals became Canadian Conservatives, something is probably amiss with the Liberal party. It was not very complimentary to the intelligence and fibre of British Liberalism when it goes out into the world to suggest that it is incapable of surviving his own charming accent.

Though Sir Wilfrid frankly owned the dilemma in which the campaign among the British-born had left his party, his lieutenants show indifferent skill in putting their case so that it will attract the element that upset them two years ago.

The most potent platform force behind Sir Wilfrid is Dr. Michael Clark, who, before he began farming in Alberta eleven years ago, was a notable Tyneside politician, and who is the only out-and-out apostle of free trade in the Commons. Dr. Clark seems oblivious of the fact that the Britisher is the only newcomer who is entitled to a vote a year after he arrives in Canada, and that, therefore, his point of view (which he may express in the ballot box years before those who landed with him at Montreal are entitled to any civic privileges except paying taxes) is apt to be what it was rather than what it will be when his vision has been renewed.

TURNING ON THE LIGHT

The habit children on the city streets have formed of clinging to the back of ice wagons may well be due to a combination between Nature and the Artificial Limb Trust. The tendency of women to wear peek-a-boo waists and low-neck blouses suggests an understanding between the mosquitoes and the Fashion Trust. The modern tendency of men to smoke is explained by the machinations of the Tobacco Trust. The development of the public appetite for beef is due to the activities of the Beef Trust. Not nearly so many people would want fruit in summer but for the existence of the Cold Storage Trust. The popular novel would be unknown but for the Literary Trust. Ragtime would disappear were it not for the Music Trust.

These "arguments and absurdum" are mentioned for the purpose of illustrating how logical it is to argue that the nations are aiming against war because there is nowhere in Europe or elsewhere, an alleged Armament Trust. Revelations have been made, but in no country has the responsible government, which must answer to the people, thought them serious enough to back one inch from its regular programme for defensive preparation.

The tendencies of human nature create the Trust; in no case has the Trust created the tendencies or the appetite of the people for its wares. —Ottawa Journal.

NO TRUMET NOTE SO FAR

With Mr. Borden and the Conservative party leaning to the centralizers, and Sir Wilfrid and the Liberal party calling for a navy, but not on fire about it, the precise form of the contest, when it comes, cannot be predicted, says The Canadian. Some unexpected flame of passion may burst forth; some phase of our material development may give a surprising turn to all our politics; for the German scare is not scarifying just now, and the inflowing stream of money is less impetuous than it was. The last election disclosed the existence of certain latent forces for which party politicians who are nothing more than party politicians were not prepared.

So far, the country has heard no trumpet note; and the appearance of apathy seems to contradict the faith of those whose reliance must always be upon Canadian nationality. During most of the summer of 1911 there was, for similar reasons, a gloom among those who saw an interference with the ordained progress of things in the confident prophecies of Mr. Taft, but regardless of the result, the fight went on and the great idea, after all, was "get across." History has not forgotten how to repeat. In due time the charter, Mr. Borden's charter of 1909, will be justified, and Canada will join Australia in noble assumption of the full duty of a nation in the Britannic Alliance under one living Head; which will be as far beyond the dream of a mere centralized empire as high noon is above the setting of the sun.

ACROSS THE RIVER

Fort Erie has successfully opened the celebrations which are to commemorate 100 years of peace on the Niagara frontier.

Fort Erie is not only to be congratulated on the effort and on its success, but especially upon the spirit which inspired and dominated the entire undertaking.

Buffalo and Fort Erie have been shaking hands across the river for 100 years, but that's a long stretch for a handshake. We'd like to do our hand-shaking in the middle of a bridge hereafter.—Buffalo Express.

FARMERS MAY SAY "WHAT WASTE"

Among those who care for a Canadian navy there is some apprehension that the Liberals will appeal to the assumed parsimony of the farmer, to whom thirty-five millions for ships which he will not control will seem a colossal waste. Mr. Maclean, of Halifax, who, since the submergence of Mr. Fielding, who was Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Finance Minister for over fifteen years, has been the financial critic of the Opposition, ominously told the House of Commons that the party would not necessarily be bound by Sir Wilfrid's amendment calling for the outlay of thirty-five millions on two fleet units.

It has been observed that the campaigning of the Liberals, in and out of Parliament, has been heavily against the Government and moderately for the navy. They were given a magnificent opportunity to make good to the country the case for a Canadian navy when Mr. Borden disclosed his expedient. But they seemed to have no heart for tackling the job of filling the land with a sense of a great and far-reaching issue. Sir Wilfrid waited five months before he went outside the House of Commons to sense the quality of public opinion, and when he came to Toronto his speech was a debating effort against the Government for its parliamentary tactics, far more than it was an appeal to the nation to justify its nationhood.

Madoc Review: "Since automobile drivers have taken to the left hand end of the seats, and all new machines are being so constructed, it has started horse drivers to favorably consider the same idea, as it secures much more safety in passing rigs. It's coming; start in now, men, and save many a locked wheel."

Is the party headed by Mr. Borden going to make its way back again to the position it took up, together with the Liberal party in Parliament, in support of the Canadian navy policy?" What's the matter with the Free Press man? Has he just returned from his annual, or is the above the product of a befogged brain?

THE COUNTRY BOY BEST FOR BASEBALL

Fresh Air and Varied Work Make for Stamina and Resourcefulness

Other things being equal—and by "other things" I mean natural ability, baseball brains and nerve—I would pick the country boy in place of the city chap for my ball team, says the famous Cy Young. In making this statement am dividing the country into two classes—cities and country—including in the latter division the villages and small towns, which in reality are nothing more than the country, for in them boys have the advantage of country life, which is plenty of work and fresh air.

I am not saying this because I am from the country and return there on the slightest provocation. Still, I believe the fact that I was born and raised on a farm is largely responsible for my success as a pitcher. I was naturally rugged, and my farm work as a boy tended to make me more so. I have seen other pitchers who seemed to have a lot more stuff than I had, fail, for the reason that they were lacking in reserve power.

They would go along splendidly for a few innings, but when the real test came they were lost sight of, and now are all but forgotten, whereas had they had the same early training I received, they might have remained in the game as long as I have. The argument that city boys think faster and are more independent is not a good one. In fact, I believe it is entirely wrong. The country boy must think as fast and as often as the boy in the city, and he is thrown upon his own resources much oftener.

All in all, give me the boy from the country—the boy who has survived the hard knocks—for a diamond star.

GOOD BALANCE COUNTS

Heavy Hitting Teams Not Always the Pennant Winners

Every ball club wants good hitters, but the best hitting teams do not always win the pennant, and many a time a light-hitting, well-balanced team will succeed in finishing ahead of their heavier-hitting opponents in the race for the bunting.

The light-hitting Chicago American club won a pennant in 1906, although it never had a man hitting over .280, and but four players hitting above the .250 mark, and one of these was George Rohe, who was used the greater part of the time in utility roles.

The foregoing is one of the exceptions that prove the rule, and in the majority of cases, the heavier-hitting clubs always finish well up in the race. In 1909 the two clubs which played for the world's championship, namely, Pittsburg and Detroit, led their respective leagues in team batting.

For some time the old Philadelphia National League team, with such wonderful hitters in its line-up as big Ed Delehanty, Larry Lajoie, Elmer Flick, Sam Thompson, Billy Hamilton, Jack Clements, et al., were never able to capture a pennant. In the Southern league it is the exception when the heaviest hitting teams win the gonfalcon, as in most cases it is generally won by a well-balanced club that possesses few good hitters.

Breeding Hedgehogs for Bounty

In Vermont, United States, a bounty of 30 cents is paid for every hedgehog killed. Some farmers have added considerably to their income by raising hedgehogs, and the Legislature will probably be asked to repeal the Hedgehog Bounty Bill. The bounties paid per year amount to $30,000 representing the killing of about 100,000 hedgehogs.

FARM AND GARDEN

WEANING LAMBS.

By R. C. Curtis.

The lambs should be weaned when three to four months old. If they are properly fed in a creep where they alone can have access to grain and forage, there will be no further trouble at weaning time. For a time after the lambs are weaned the mothers should be given non-milk producing foods. The legumes and green grazing crops, especially should be withheld.

By withholding these feeds and allowing the lambs to suckle several times there should be no trouble with the udders unless it is with a very heavy milking ewe. If a lamb is allowed to return to a heavy milker she should first be milked out before the lamb is allowed to gorge itself and bring on digestive troubles.

Lambs which are to be sent to the market early in the season need not be weaned, but allowed to get every benefit of the mother's milk, which will, when it is properly supplemented with grain and forage, give the lambs a full, plump appearance.

TEST CATTLE WHEN PURCHASING.

B. K. Shaw, Welland, Ont.

Ten to twelve per cent. of all the dairy cattle of America are tubercular. Such is the estimate of veterinarians and investigators of continental reputation. We cannot, therefore, be too careful to see that all cattle brought into our herds from outside sources are free from this terrible disease.

I was recently reading in the Farmers' Review of Chicago of a man who bought five cows from a dealer. He did not have them tested as the dealer assured him that they were O.K. and was quite willing that they should be tested at once; in fact, urged that they be tested immediately.

A few months later that farmer wanted to insure his cows and a condition to their being insured was that they pass the tuberculin test. They did not pass. Every one of them was badly diseased. Then the farmer awoke to the fact that he had been "stung." In all probability the cattle, when he bought them, had been doped with tuberculin so that, had he tested when he purchased, they would not have reacted.

I know of a worse case than this one, and it happened in Canada and not far from here. An Ontario dairyman got tuberculosis in his herd through untested purchases, and before he was rid of the disease had slaughtered 18 milch cows.

We farmers, as the feeders of the race, owe it to consumers of our products to ensure that our products are perfectly healthy. We dairymen have a big responsibility in that the quality of milk that we supply the cities has such a large influence on infant mortality. It is therefore up to us to see that our herds are free of tuberculosis, the greatest scourge of humanity. If we have a clean herd we can best do this by buying all cattle subject to the tuberculin test.

THE VALUE OF TIME.

Two young men led their horses from the stable and began hitching up. One did not seem to work any faster than the other, yet his horse was hitched before the other was more than three-fourths through. Being a casual observer, my wonder was piqued and later I made investigation.

Here was the difference!: In one case the hold-backs were attached to the breeching and had to be wrapped around the shaft several times and then buckled; in the other case they were already attached to the shaft and snaps made the connection. In one case a strap had to be wrapped twice around the shaft at the surcingle; in the other case a fixed loop made this unnecessary. One set of reins had to be buckled into the bridle; the others snapped in. On one single tree the keeper for holding the tugs was a small piece of leather, one end of of which had to be drawn through a small hole in the single tree; on other, a small metal hook dropped over the tug at a touch.

Since that time, I have attached more importance to the value of saving time in these little things. A minute saved sixty times during the day is just as much as sixty minutes saved once during the day.—P. C. Grose, in Successful Farming.

THE HOG IN SUMMER.

A. McIntosh, Russell Co., Ont.

The hog, being the fattest of all animals, is most susceptible to heat. They die very easily in hot weather. Even on days when the most experienced pig man thinks there is no danger, he is liable to find a fine hog ready to be buried. I have had this experience myself and wish to pass on a few of the ideas that I have gathered from these experience.

In my opinion the ordinary hog lot is a regular death-trap. Most of them are open and exposed to the blazing sun and where there is shelter it is one of the "A" shaped coops with no ventilation except for the one door. The interior is generally hotter than it is outside. Hogs suffer excessively under such conditions and even if none die it means delayed growth and consequent loss. The farmer with a large well ventilated pig pen to which the hogs have access has little to worry him in hot weather. The pigs will do well in it. There is danger, however, in a pig pen no matter how large that is not well ventilated.

I believe that the ideal place for hogs in hot weather is in a well fenced piece of woodland, or lacking that, a well shaded pasture. Under such conditions hogs do not suffer from the heat and in the case of breeding hogs on a large pasture they will almost pick their living. In the case of market hogs grain must be fed in addition and they will make the best returns for it under such conditions.

On many farms I would pick the orchard as the best place available. If the hogs are well fed they will not do much rooting. Their droppings will add to the fertility of the soil and the apple crop will be immensely better under hog pasturage than if growing hay or grain. Likewise, the hogs will provide a market for "drop" fruit.

MORE SHEEP NECESSARY.

R. H. Harding, Middlesex Co., Ont.

While touring Ontario on the Better Farming Special that has just completed a seven weeks' trip from Windsor on the west to Tillsonburg on the south, to Goderich, Owen Sound and Orillia on the north, and to Ottawa and the Quebec boundary on the east, I became more convinced than ever that more sheep would not only be a source of revenue to our farmers but are practically a necessity as farm cleaners. With the help problem such a vexed one, the best farmers have found it impossible to cope with the weeds that are fast taking possession, while the few (comparatively speaking) who keep sheep and practice rotation of crops are able to keep the weeds from going to seed, and thereby manufacture them into money values in the form of wool and mutton. At the same time they build up their soil.

Sheep will eat practically all weeds that exist. We have proved this statement to be fairly correct. While on the trip we availed ourselves of every opportunity to offer our sheep any weeds we could find (and I believe nearly all kinds can be found along the railway tracks), and we never found any that the sheep wouldn't eat. It is true there are a few that they are not fond of, especially after they are out in seed. These are Worm Seed Mustard, Red and Curled Dock and a few others.

I believe the signs point to the "Golden Hoof" as a necessity. While some farmers have been driven out of the business by dogs and others by stump, stone or other poor fences, yet the great majority of farmers are ready to admit that sheep, intelligently handled, are as profitable, if not more profitable, than any other class of live stock, considering the capital and labor and the inexpensive housing required. Apart altogether from their inestimable value as scavengers, I might also say that very many farmers expressed themselves as intending to get into the sheep business on a small scale as soon as possible. I don't think it can happen too soon for the good of Ontario, and especially Eastern Ontario, where Bladder Campion, Perennial Thistle, Mustard, Buttercup, etc., grow in abundance.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

BASEBALL.

PLANNING BASEBALL CIRCUITS

Brantford, July 31.—The face of the baseball map of this section may see great changes next year, if the plans of the promoters of a new league are carried out to the full. The Canadian league will be no more. Its place will be taken by two other leagues, one formed of the Western Ontario Section of the Canadian League, joined with United States cities to form an International League and the eastern cities doing likewise.

"Knotty" Lee of Hamilton, is the promoter of the new league. The scheme has been called into being through the fact that the Interstate League, which had in it cities in New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, has disrupted. There is also the added fact that there are some towns in the Canadian League which are not paying towns.

The proposal is to include in the new International League four cities now in the Canadian League—Hamilton, Brantford, Loud and St Thomas. With these four would be added Youngstown, Ohio; Akron, Ohio; Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Erie, Pa., three of these latter having been in the defunct Interstate League.

Guelph and Berlin would be dropped from the league entirely and would be left with a chance to get in with the Stratford, Woodstock, Guelph, Berlin semi-pro league as a class D. league which they could form. Berlin has been a losing prosposition all year. Ottawa and Peterboro' at present in the Canadian League, would join in with Montreal, which will hardly be in the International League next year and with Watertown, N. Y., and two other American cities would form a club circuit. "Knotty" Lee is confident that it will be a success and that the two new leagues will be formed.

TORONTO TO GET PITCHER CARLO FROM MONTREAL

Montreal, July 31.—The Toronto ball club is hard up for pitchers, mighty hard up, indeed, and President McCaffery has asked the Montreal club for the loan of Carlo for a few weeks.

President Lichenheim will let them have Carlo for nothing until the end of the season for nothing, provided they pay him the salary he is getting at present and protect the interests of the Montreal club who owns the player outright.

Carlo pitched part of one game for the Royals and did very nicely for a few innings but he blew up half way through and has never been given another opportunity to perform.

ATHLETICS.

SWEDES TO HONOR JIM THORPE

Advices received from Sweden indicate that Jim Thorpe, the great all round athletic, who is now a member of Manager McGraw's party of National League champions, will yet come into the possession of a Swedish trophy. A few weeks ago, on the day that King Gustav V. presented the Decathlon trophy, that Thorpe was obliged to relingish to Weislander, its rightful winner, the Swedish papers came forward with the suggestion that sportsmen throughout Sweden should contribute to a fund for the purpose of sending Thorpe a consolation prize as a reminder of his great victories at Stockholm a year ago.

"The suggestion" took immediately with sportsmen in Sweden, and the scheme to give the American Indian a consolation prize is now fathered by one of the very biggest men in Swedish amateur sports. If the carryng out of the desire of the Swedes meets with no disfavor on the part of the American Olympic committee Thorpe will get a handsome trophy from the northmen within a few weeks.

THE RING.

LOS ANGELES OUT OF BIDDING FOR RITCHIE

Los Angeles, July 31.—San Francisco and Vancouver boxing promoters will have no opposition from Los Angeles if they bid for the services of Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie. This became known following a conference between Tom McCarey and the champion, who has returned to Los Angeles after a brief mountain trip.

According to McCarey, he will make no effort to land Ritchie until Thanksgiving day. Vancouver fans take this to mean that Ritchie holds his services to be worth more than McCarey will consent to disgorge.

In view of this state of affairs, Joe Rivers and Cross probably will box Ritchie at Vernon on Labor Day.

JOE JEANNETTE TRYING TO SQUEEZE McCAREY

Los Angeles, July 31.—Trying to squeeze an extra handful of cash from Promoter Tom McCarey, Dan McKittrick, manager for Joe Jeannette, is the only obstacle preventing the closing of a Langford-Jeannette match for Vernon in September.

Final figures have been offered McKittrick, however, and Secretary Harry Burns, of McCarey's club, expects the negotations to be closed soon. Joe Woodman, for Langford, has accepted.

No definate date has been arranged for the probable mill.

NERVE NECESSARY FOR GOOD BATTER

"Home Run" Baker Talks of Pitchers Who Aim at the Head to Frighten a Man

"I believe hitters are born, not made," says "Home Run" Baker, "but I also believe it is possible for weak hitters to improve.

"The first thing a boy needs, to become a good batter, is good eyes.

"He must have nerve, too. Strength is necessary, but almost every ball player is strong. The exercise he gets, playing, is bound to strengthen him. The big thing is nerve, though. Unless a boy has plenty of nerve he cannot hope to succeed. It requires nerve to stand up to the plate and let the pitcher throw at your head. The good hitter will duck out of harm's way and return to his position and dare him to do it again. If a batter backs away because he is afraid of the ball, he is gone.

"There are any number of pitchers whose stock in trade consists of a 'bean ball' and a prayer. They throw the ball at the batter's head until they drive him from the plate and then sneak a couple of fast ones over the middle.

"A batter needs just as much nerve in a minor league as he does in the majors. In fact he needs more, for many minor league pitchers are "bean ballers." I mean that many are shy of control, not that they throw at your head more frequently than the big fellows.

"My receipt for batting is to look upon the star pitchers as if they were bush leaguers. If a recruit gets the idea that the great pitchers are going to beat him, he never will get anywhere. No player can afford to be afraid of a pitcher. I think this feeling helps me when I face such men as Mathewson. I know such men have such good control that they will not hit me and I simply wait until I get a good one."

GEORGE CARPENTER the phenomenal French boxer. English critics say Carpenter is a marvel of cleverness and generalship; that he has a knockout punch and two of the best hands that ever graced a boxer. They are big, heavy boned hands, and may be indicative of the size of the boy when he is fully developed.

BEST OUTFIELDERS

Oldring, Strunk and Murphy the Choice of Connie Mack

Speaking of outfields, Connie Mack believes he can name the three best.

"Oldring in left field cannot, to my way of thinking, be duplicated. He's not only a hard and timely batsman, but an A1 fielder, sure on flies and line drives, and he has an arm that makes Cobb, Milan and the other phenoms think twice before trying to stretch a bit, with him in possession of the ball.

"Strunk is a marvel. He is one of the fastest men that ever broke into baseball; so fast, as a matter of fact, that most all the fans fail to realize just how speedy he is. Not only that, Strunk is a great hitter.

"Murphy is quite a youngster, but a sure born ball player. I know he will soon show the fans what he really is in the baseball line, not only at the bat, but in the field as well. Just keep your eyes on the Athletics' outfield and you will agree on everything I have said."

Washing Grimy Hands

Every automobilist who has had to repair his machine has longed for some way to wash his hands, ordinary soap and water being almost useless as a means of removing the many and tenacious varieties of dirt that gather upon them on such occasions. So chauffeurs and men who drive their own cars will welcome the directions given by an authoritative French scientific magazine. This paper directs that the hands be rubbed with gasoline, the operation being twice repeated; then they are to be washed in sweet oil or butter after which a thorough washing with soap and water will remove the last vestiges of dirt. The nails, however, require special attention, and it will repay the automobilist to keep a mixture of benzine and alcohol expressly for his hands.

J. M. BARRIE'S CLIMB UP FORTUNE'S LADDER

Much of Baronet Novelist's Early Life Told in His First Novel

J. M. Barrie's baronetcy is said to be the first conferred on any man of letters since Sir Walter Scott. Literary and journalistic knights are plentiful enough, but that a writer should gain the coveted honor of a baronetcy is a rare enough event to be sensational. Barrie is the most modest of men, and the very last whom one would suspect of having made any effort himself to gain the decoration. Ralph Connor tells how he was once invited to a reception at Free St. George's, Edinburgh, which was given by the young people of the church in honor of the rising novelist. Coming in late the Canadian met Henry Drummond. "Have you seen Barrie?" asked Drummond. "No, I should like to see him," was the reply. "Well," said Drummond, smiling, "look round till you find a hole, look down in the hole and you will see Barrie." Ralph Connor found Barrie later in a quiet corner, evidently looking for a hole, and somewhat distressed at not finding it.

It was in 1887, when The British Weekly was still a new and struggling journal, that it began to publish some extraordinarily clever stuff written by a man who called himself "Gavin Ogilvy."

Sometimes it would be an appreciation of a Scottish preacher or professor. Another week it would be a column that it would be impossible to classify under any literary category. Anything or nothing would serve as an adequate subject.

To those who followed "Gavin Ogilvy" week by week as he let himself go with all the high spirit of youth, it was good news to learn that he was about to write a serial novel dealing with the journalistic life. "When a Man's Single" was the story. When the memoir of Sir James Matthew Barrie, baronet, comes to be written, the biographer will find ample material in this book. Barrie himself is largely a composite of two of its characters—Rob Angus, the lad who leaves a Thrums sawmill to take a reporter's job on The Silchester Daily Mirror, and afterwards challenges fate as a free-lance in London, and J. Noble Simms, the practiced London journalist, whose experience helps the raw countryman over many of the difficult places.

Silchester stands, of course, for Nottingham where J. M. Barrie found employment for two years on the staff of a daily paper after leaving Edinburgh University. But it is when Bob Angus takes the plunge into London that the main interest of "When a Man's Single" begins. Did Barrie himself, one wonders, know the lonely struggles of the novice—the acceptances and rejections, the ups and downs, the hopes and fears—that he describes so graphically in this story. It is at this point that we make the acquaintance of J. Noble Simms. At once we recognize in him a near kinsman to "Gavin Ogilvy" Before Angus meets Simms he hears an account of him from a fellow-Scotsman, Rorrison. "You see this pipe here? He saw me mending it with sealing wax one day, and two days afterwards there was an article about it in the Scalping Knife. When I went off for my holidays last summer, I asked him to look in here occasionally and water my flowers. He forgot to do it, but wrote an article on 'Rorrison's Flowerpots.' He has had my umbrella in the Scalping Knife. When I play on his piano I put scraps of paper on the notes to guide me, and he made three guineas out of that. Once I challenged him to write an article on a straw that was sticking to the outside of my window, and it was one of the best things he ever did."

"He must read a great deal," remarks Bob.

"He hardly ever opens a book," replies Rorrison; "indeed, when he wants to consult a book of reference, I believe he goes down to Booksellers' Row and does all the reading required at a bookstall. I never saw him reading a newspaper. I don't think he was ever in the British Museum. I calculated once that he must have made at least fifty pounds out of me on the Scalping Knife, and then he went and wrote an article about that."

The presumption that a mine of autobiographical material is concealed in this book is confirmed when one finds Sir William Robertson Nicoll saying of Barrie as he first knew him: "You never caught him reading; he did not buy papers, an yet in some mysterious manner he knew everything."

The will of Michael Kiely, who died in Jersey City possessed of considerable personal property and real estate most of which he left to neighbors in that city, is being contested by Mr. James Kiely, of Bandon, Ireland, who claims relationship.

WESTERN CANADA

A BUMPER WHEAT CROP THOUSANDS OF MEN REQUIRED

This Year's Harvest promises to be be the largest in

THE HISTORY OF CANADA

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

CANTONESE MARCH.

News That Southerners Will Make Attack Welcomed in Pekin.

PEKIN, August 1.—(Can. Press.)—The announcement from Canton that three divisions of Cantonese troops are preparing to march against the northern forces, is welcomed in Pekin, as government officials say they will anticipate their coming, as it will enable the government troops to inflict a crushing defeat on the rebels without risking the sacking and perhaps the burning of Canton City, and the disorganizing of export trade.

Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai issued a manifesto today in which he asserted that most of the supporters of the rebellion belonged to the Kwo Ming-Tang party, and he demanded the cancellation of their membership, threatening that the law would be sternly enforced if he received an unsatisfactory reply. The president also ordered Gen. Tuan Chih-Koei, commander-in-chief of the government forces in Yangtse River region, to arrest and punish the rebel leaders. Dr. Sun Yat Sen, as in the previous proclamation, issued by the government, was again unmentioned in President Yuan Shi Kai's manifesto.

SHANGHAI, August 1.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen, one of the leaders of the southern rebellion, today declared that the re-occupation of the City of Nanking by government forces was only temporary. The spirit of the southerners, he affirmed, is undaunted and they hope to renew the struggle when arrangements with Kwangtung and other southern provinces have been completed.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen will leave Shanghai tonight for Hongkong, where he personally will make an appeal for further support in his campaign to overthrow Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai for crimes which the southern leader claims have been committed by the president, namely, the illegal execution of military officers, the assassination of the nationalist leader, Gen. Sung Chiao-Jen, the issuing of unconstitutional mandates and the enacting of laws without consulting parliament.

Booty of Jewel Robbers Thought to Have Been Traced.

Wholesale Thefts of Gems May Be Solved by Detectives Discovery of a "Fence" Where Valuables Worth a Quarter of a Million Have Been Disposed Of — Suspects Gave Servants Motor Rides.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R.I., Aug. 1.—Private detectives are tonight watching a residence in a suburb of Providence. This home is the long-sought "fence" for the gang of thieves who obtained more than a quarter of a million dollars worth of jewelry here during the 24 hours ending at last Saturday midnight, according to the theory of one of the four detective agencies engaged on the robberies.

The occupant of the house cannot escape surveillance, but the police have no positive evidence upon which to proceed against him.

Another detective agency is watching a house in South Boston, believing it to be either the headquarters of the jewelry stealing band or the home of their agents.

Mrs. J. H. Hanan, who lost $150,000 worth of jewels, has placed her case in the hands of a firm of detectives at Providence. New York detectives are entrusted with the mission of recovering the jewelry of Mrs. Charles C. Rumsey, estimated to be worth $125,000.

The detectives watching the house near Providence are said to have a speculative commission from both the Hanans and Rumseys. According to their manager, the suspect made a specialty of taking servants on automobile rides, during which he seized the opportunity to obtain information of the habits of the families in which his guests were employed.

SHE WAVED A FLAG.

American Girl's Act Caused Trouble in Saskatoon Militia.

SASKATOON, Sask., Aug. 1.—The local militia are in a ferment today over a flag incident which disturbed a parade of the 105th Fusiliers. When the parade was passing down Second avenue a young girl in a passing automobile waved waved an American flag in front of one of the members of the bugle band. The man broke ranks and, snatching the flag, broke the staff in two and trampled it under his feet, the majority of the regiment also passing over it.

The young man was instantly taken from the ranks, and at the conclusion of the parade was court-martialed and discharged from the regiment. The rest of the regiment immediately resigned.

The officers of the regiment held a consultation and the man was later reinstated, owing to the fact that the bugle band are to take a prominent part in the parade in honor of 600 delegates of the real estate board today.

Toronto Woman Injured in Wreck.

KINGSTON, Aug. 1.—(Can. Press.)—A Grand Trunk freight train and a passenger train on the Thousand Island Railway collided near Gananoque this morning and one of the passengers, Mrs. W. T. Heaslip of 27 Kendall avenue, Toronto, was badly injured. Several ribs were broken. She was on her way home from Toronto after visiting at Tremont Park. The freight was backing up and as the accident occurred on a curve the engineer on the passenger train did not have time to stop his train. Henry Abrahams of Gananoque was the engineer and he jumped and saved his life. The fireman, Henry Case, Gananoque, also jumped, but was badly injured. All the injured, it is expected, will recover. The engine was knocked off the track. Sheriff McCamer of Brockville was one of the many passengers who suffered a severe shaking up.

Watching Castro.

TENERIFFE, Canary Islands, Aug. 1.—(Can. Press.)—Gen. Cipriano Castro's wife and children, and his brother-in-law, Senor Lazaro, all of whom are in Teneriffe, refused today to give any information regarding the Venezuelan ex-president, except to say that he was in Hamburg on Wednesday of this week.

It appears, however, that a transportation company has received instructions to arrange for the shipment of an automobile belonging to Castro to the Island of Trinidad during the month of August.

The Gomez administration, it is stated, by the port authorities here, has recently sent a number of spies to the Canary Islands with the object of keeping the Venezuelan GGovernment posted concerning every action of GGen. Castro.

Diana's Cargo Transferred.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Aug. 1.—(Can. Press.)—The steamer Erik, with the Donald B. McMill Arctic expedition on board, sailed for Crockerland today. The damaged steamer Diana, on which the expedition was brought here from Battle Harbor, and its stores were transferred to the Erik. A new commander, Capt. Yeo, who is experienced in Arctic navigation, sailed on the Erik and the crew included a number of men who were not on the Diana.

Fair weather favored the steamer's departure and the explorers were hopeful of making a good run north.

Demanded $150,000.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Henrich Krenenskathen, a youth of twenty, will appear in Bow street police court today charged with sending threatening letters to Lord Rothschild demanding $150,000. For some weeks the financier has been receiving letters demanding money. Scotland Yard was communicated with and as a result of advertisements in newspapers Krenenskathen was arrested in a west end restaurant last night after a struggle.

Rammed in a Fog

The coastwise passenger steamer Lady of Gaspe, from Montreal for Gulf ports, was rammed and so seriously damaged by the freighter Crown of Cordova, below Three Rivers that it was necessary to beach her at Cap Magdalen. The hundred odd passengers were panic stricken, but all were landed safely. The accident occurred during a heavy fog.

MONEY TALK ENDED

Stormy Debate on U. S. Currency Bill Comes to a Close.

Much Opposed Measure Is Ordered Printed and Will Be Submitted to the House of Representatives at Once — Interlocking Directorates Will Still Be Allowed Until It Can Be Considered in Separate Bill.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—(Can. Press.)—Consideration of the administration currency bill was practically concluded tonight by the Democrats of the house banking and currency committe after more than five weeks of canstant and stormy discussion. The bill was ordered closed and reprinted, and on Monday the Democratic committee members will take a formal vote on recommending the measure to the Democratic caucus. It will go to the caucus with the disapproval of at least three members of the committee, it was practically certain tonight.

As closed tonight the bill differs little in its essentials from the administration measure framed by Representative Glass, Chairman Owens, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and approved by President Wilson. The complete government control of the federal reserve board, which will direct the new banking and currency system, deemed by the president the all important factor of the bill, was retained. At the eleventh hour, however, the Democratic members of the committee incorporated in the bill an amendment providing for an advisory board of bankers to "advise" the federal reserve board. This amendment was in the nature of a compromise with the banking interests, which protested vigorously against the exclusively governmental feature of the control of the board.

Another amendment incorporated in the bill altered the re-discount section conferring the power to require federal reserve banks to mutually rediscount paper.

Earnings of New Banks.

A change was made in the division of the earnings of the federal reserve banks created by the law. Originally these banks were allowed a yearly cumulative dividend of five per cent. and a surplus equal to twenty per cent. of the paid in capital stock. All earnings above these amounts reverted to the government. As amended the balance of earnings after the five per cent. dividend and the twenty per cent surplus will be paid, sixty per cent. to the government, to be used as a sinking fund to reduce the national debt, and forty per cent. to be divided among the member banks in proportion to their balances in the federal reserve bank concerned.

In the reserve section, the committee reduced the period during which a bank must hold a 25 per cent. reserve against deposits from twenty-six months to sixty days. As finally passed, the reserve section requires that after a period of gradual changes, the country banks must keep their fifteen per cent. reserves either in their own vaults or in the federal reserve bank of the district in which it is located.

Interlocking Allowed.

By a vote of 7 to 5, the conference today struck from the bill a provision previously ordered inserted, forbidding interlocking directorates between banks. It was stricken out on representations that the president believed it should be considered apart from general currency legislation.

The so-called "insurgent amendments" to the bill, providing for currency on warehouse receipts for cotton, corn and wheat, were voted down today [illegible] viva voce vote with little discussion. Representative Ragsdale and Representative Henry of Texas, will carry the fight for these amendments to the floor of the Democratic caucus, however.

LITTLE FOR HER PAINS.

Bulgaria WillHave Little After Peace Is Made.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—(Can. Press.)—The allies in their demands presented to the Bucharest peace conference today proposed the establishment of a frontier standing east from the Struma river, running midway thru Roumelia and reaching the Aegean Sea fifteen miles west of Dedeagatch. This would leave Bulgaria a coast line on the Aegean Sea of less than thirty miles. If these drastic terms are accepted Bulgaria will issue from two wars a little larger than when she entered into them, but she will have to abandon a large amount of territory to Roumania. In addition the allies maintain their demand for an indemnity.

It is probable that the negotiations will be protracted and that the armistice of five days will be renewed. No objection is likely to be raised to its renewal for it seems evident that both the Servians and the Greeks have fought themselves to a standstill.

A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Belgrade asserts that the casualties of the Servian army in the past month of fighting aggregate nearly 35,000.

Fortune if He'd Vamoose.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 1.—(Can. Press.)—At a conference with the special counsel who will prosecute the Western Fuel Company cases here this month, David G. Powers, formerly an employe of the company and now the chief witness for the government, said today that he had been offered $50,000 if he would vanish.

Powers gave the names of those who had approached him and the phraseology of the offers. Matthew I. Sullivan and Theodore J. Roche, in charge of the case as assistants to the attorney-general, declined to discuss Powers' story beyond saying: "We will vigorously prosecute every person connected with this immense fraud."

The president and directors of the Western Fuel Company are charged with having defrauded the government of customs dues aggregating nearly $1,000,000 by manipulating weighing sheets showing the tonnage of imported coal.

This is the second charge of corruption made since indictments were returned. When John L. McNab resigned as United States attorney he charged, in a sensational letter to President Wilson, that pressure had been brought to bear on Attorney-General McReynolds to order the trial postponed.

Verdict For Both.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—A jury in the circuit court here tried to be accommodating to both sides in a damage suit, and returned a verdict for both the plaintiff and defendant, thereby bringing up all sorts of legal complications.

Lawyers declare the result is the same as if the jury had disagreed, and that there will have to be a new trial. There is no precedent, so far as anybody can find, and some other lawyers declare the verdict legal. Judge Robinson, in the meantime, is trying to decide what to do.

The unusual verdict was rendered in a suit of Charles H. Apple against J. M. Smith for $800 damages as a result of a collision with Smith's motor car two years ago. Smith filed a cross-bill demanding the same amount of damages. It was agreed that somebody was careless and that both cars were damaged.

So the jury returned a verdict of $550 for Apple and then awarded Smith damages for $2 [illegible]

Have the Intelligencer Sent to Your Home Address

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 2—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Aug. 3 to 7, warm wave 2 to 6, cool wave 5 to 9. This storm will be of greater than usual force, very cool about three days preceding its arrival and very warm about three days after it has gone by. Not much rain. Bad weather for corn, good weather for spring wheat where rainfall was sufficient in July.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about Aug. 7, cross Pacific slope about Aug. 7, great central valleys 9, eastern sections 11. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Aug. 10, great central valleys 12, eastern sections 14.

Unusually hot and dry weather will prevail while this disturbance is passing and the corn and cotton crops will be injured thereby. Storms will not be of great force and general weather will be favorable to those who wish to take their summer outings. Good spring wheat weather will continue to prevail where July rains were sufficient.

It must be noted that our July rainfall forecasts, in a general way, were good. Those rains had the effect to lower prices of grain. We now expect the Aug. drouth to put grain and cotton higher and we still advise not to sell the new crops of cotton and grain.

Third storm wave of Aug. will reach Pacific slope about 12, cross Pacific slope by close of 13, great central valleys 14 to 16, eastern sections 17. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Aug. 12, great central valleys 14, eastern sections 16. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Aug. 15, great central valleys 17, eastern sections 19.

Not much to be said for this disturbance. Generally hot and dry. A crop weather scare is probable for corn and cotton about that time and we advise no selling of grain or cotton till the effects of August weather are definitely known. Last half of Aug. promises unusually hot and dry weather. A few showers are expected during the week centering on Aug. 13.

We are of the opinion that financial affairs will be favorable to business expansion during the next six months and that all farm products will sell at better prices. Mexico and the Central American states must soon return to business and drop the occupation of war. To recoup they will need much of our farm products. The Balkans are in much the same condition as Mexico. The opening of the Panama Canal will bring new demands for our products. Our own population is rapidly increasing while our cultivated lands are at a standstill or decreasing. The unsettled conditions in European Governments will increase immigration to this country and Canada. All these matters will tend to make good prices for farm products.

A very important feature is that the people, through Congress, are about to take control of the circulating medium and check the great speculators of Wall street and Chicago. When these things are accomplished not only agriculture but all legitimate interests will get better returns for their products.

Therefore, hold your grain and cotton.

Grain and Cotton Markets.

Future prices of Grain and Cotton are now being approximately estimated on the basis of future crop-weather conditions. This is a new process for estimating future values. For information regarding this service address

Geologists to Visit Madoc This Month

An excursion is being arranged for a party of geologists from the International Geological Congress which meets in Toronto early in August to visit Madoc to look over the surrounding district and mines, but more especially the geology of the district, the North Hastings unconformity. The party will arrive at Ivanhoe on the night of August 8th, and will be brought to Madoc by bus, the 9th to be spent in examining the various mines, talc, pyrite and fluorspar in the vicinity, the afternoon in geology. The party will motor to Bon Echo on the 10th, returning to Madoc on the 11th, and thence back to Toronto. The International Geological Congress comprises the most important geological meeting of the world. It was a distinct honor for Canada to obtain the annual meeting this year.

THE SELLS-FLOTOS CIRCUS

"Do you know," said the Almighty Voice of the Sells Floto Circus, "do you know that a hippopotamus doesn't have to swim around in a tank of water in order to keep him alive as most folks popularly supposed? Why, Bon, our baby hippopotamus, plays around in a cage right on the ground floor of the menagerie, nearly all day long, and only goes back to his tank when it is time to go to bed."

"The discovery that he could live out of the water just like other animals who are not amphibious, was only made last winter. We had a cold spell, and the hot water pipes in Bon's tank froze so that he had to be removed from his regular den until the repairs were made. We put him in a small enclosure on the ground floor of the home menagerie and contrary to our expectations, he made himself perfectly at home. Then Recardo, our head animal trainer, undertook to teach him to stand on a rolling ball and other difficult feats, which he learned just as easily as the average animal."

Bon will be seen in the menagerie of the Sells-Floto Circus before and after the performances which commence at 2.15 and 8.15 p.m., although the doors are open one hour earlier in order that the patrons may view the menagerie and Horse Fair for which this attraction has always been so justly noted.

The Sells-Floto Circus will appear in Belleville on Thursday, August 7.

HUMILIATED WOMAN

WOULD NOT ATTEND SOCIAL FUNCTIONS BECAUSE OF HER HAIR.

There are many women in this world handsome in features, perfect in form, graceful of movement and brilliant of mind, who keep in the background just because they have thin, colorless and lustreless hair.

In Paris they understand things about the hair that we do not know in this country. It was a Parisian, Dr. Sangerbond, who discovered that thin hair and dandruff are caused by a microbe.

It is Parisian Sage that proves Dr. Sangerbond's theory to be correct, for it is rigidly guaranteed to kill the dandruff germ and cure dandruff, falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is a delightfully pleasant hair dressing and invigorator; it is not sticky or greasy. It should be used freely in Spring and Summer as it keeps the scalp clean and cool and free from odors.

Parisian Sage comes in large 50-cent bottles and is for sale by W. H. Lattimer and leading druggists everywhere on the money-back plan. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every package. Made in Canada by the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont.

High School Course At Madoc Improved

(Madoc Review).

On Monday evening the High School Board decided to add a fourth teacher to the staff, and upon the opening of the school in September, Fourth Form work will be included in the school work. Circumstances necessitate a Junior Third Form, and the employment of the extra teacher will enable this to be done.

The Board have secured the services of Miss Alice Turner, B.A., who took an exceptional course at the University, graduating with first class honors in both classics, English and History. At the faculty of Education Miss Turner again took first class honors, obtaining the standing of specialist in classics.

It was decided that the fees for the ensuing year be as follows: First Form, $2; Second Form, $3; Third Form, $4; Fourth Form, $10. The fees are to be paid half in October and the balance in January.

The resignation of Mr. Alex. MacGregor as secretary of the Board was accepted, and Mr. G. B. Foote was engaged in his stead.

The Board decided that the requisition to the Village Council be $1,400. This is the same amount as last year, and less than the year previous.

The SABLE LORCHA

By HORACE HAZELTINE

COPYRIGHT, 1912, A. C. McCLURG & CO.

When, at breakfast, I told Evelyn the good news—omitting, of course, all reference to the coal-handling suggestion—she demanded that I hunt up Hartley, at once, and present him. Discretion, however, seemed to me in this instance, the better part of obedience. I did hunt Hartley up and I did present him, but not until I had allowed time for the first flush of Evelyn's fervor to cool.

He was a very good-looking young chap; Evelyn was both grateful and impulsive, and I—was in love.

Our landing at Port Said was made on the morning of Saturday, the fifth of December, and all that day and the next, we waited in more or less constant expectancy and a boiling temperature for tidings of the tardy Glamorganshire.

Hartley, meanwhile, was a model of hospitality, but Port Said is primarily a coaling station on the sea-edge of the desert, and aside from the concrete docks, the ships, the light house, and the nearly naked Nubians that swarmed everywhere, it proved utterly lacking in objects of interest.

Sunday night brought some small relief from the intolerable heat, and grateful for the respite, all four of our little party were early to bed. Gradually we had come to believe that our waiting was likely to be prolonged. The earthquake at Malta having delayed one vessel would in all probability delay others as well, including that which we had come so far to intercept. So, utterly worn out by nervous tension and the fatigue of the tropical climate, we found rest grateful, and slept soundly. Just how soundly was demonstrated when, at an hour after midnight, three resounding knocks on my hotel chamber door only roused me, dully, and left Evelyn and her maid and Dr. Addison, who occupied adjacent rooms, in deep slumber, totally undisturbed.

With what seemed almost superhuman effort, I spurred myself to consciousness and struggled up on elbow.

"Who's there?" I called.

"Hartley," came the answer. "Open the door. I thought you'd died of Port Said ennui." And when I had sleepily risen and admitted him he went on hurriedly. "Make haste, now, old chap! The bally freighter has just come in, and I don't propose to lose that tenner through dilatory methods on your part."

But I needed no urging. Wide awake at his first sentence, I was already flinging on my clothes. He still chattered on in his chaffing way, but I scarcely heard him. Conscious only of the murmur of his pleasant, cheery English voice, my thoughts were out in the night, across the waters of the harbor, down in the inferno of a rusty ocean tramp, where a sweating stoker was giving battle to despair—a sweating stoker who, in far-away America, owned a pleasure craft almost as big as the ship whose fires he had been feeding for forty days across two seas.

"How about the doctor?" Hartley asked, as I slipped my arms into my coat sleeves and snatched a cap from a closet peg.

"It's too late now," was my answer. "You should have reminded me. I forgot all about him." And it was true. I had forgotten everything, except the imminence of the rescue and the urgency of haste. To one in Cameron's plight every fretting minute must count a drop of torture.

The heavens were splendid with tropic stars, and a faint breeze from the sea gently ruffled the spangled black harbor waters, as Hartley's launch, guided by a pilot of experience, headed for the twinkling lights of the recently anchored freighter.

Silently I sat, with gaze straining, watching the indicated sparks grow larger and brighter, moment by moment, until at length their gleams reflected in the waves, and their background emerged in a great dark shadow, which silhouetted itself against the less opaque sky.

"There she is!" Hartley cried in enthusiasm, as her funnel and masts somberly defined themselves above the black of her hull. "We'll be able to hail her in another minute."

Then I heard the voice of our helmsman ring out, and presently there was an answering shout from above, and an exchange of greetings, succeeded by directions; and the next moment, I was following Hartley up a swaying rope-ladder to where an outheld lantern glowed overhead.

"Yes, Secretary to the Governor General," I heard my friend saying, as I put foot on the iron deck. "You're Captain Murchison, I suppose."

The captain's affirmative was more than deferential; it was obsequious. He was not a tall man, but broad, rugged and bearded, with long, powerful, gorilla-like arms out of all proportion to his stature. I could readily fancy him an ugly antagonist. Unaided by Hartley, I concluded, I should have had small chance indeed of success. But the low-born Briton's respect for official authority was evidently strong in him, and I felt that if Cameron was aboard we should be able to effect his rescue with a minimum of effort.

"I should like to see you in your cabin, Captain," Hartley proposed, and when we were closeted there, he continued: "There is a report that you have among your crew a United States subject who was brought aboard, drugged, and forced to remain aboard against his will. His government has interested itself in his behalf, and unless he is restored at once to his friends serious complications will undoubtedly ensue."

The captain, despite his respect for authority, frowned.

"There's nothing to that report, sir," he said, boldly. "I'm not shanghaiing men in these days, sir. Every mother's son I've got on this boat shipped for Hong Kong, sir, of his own free will and accord."

"I dare say you fully believe that, Captain Murchison," was Hartley's diplomatic rejoinder, "but this time you happen to be mistaken. I don't suppose you have any objection to our inspecting your crew, have you? Suppose you have both the watches piped forward, and we'll settle this little business for ourselves. Mr. Clyde, here, knows the man."

Captain Murchison's glance at me was undisguisedly venomous. Reluctantly he rang for his steward.

"Send the bo'sun here," he directed, doggedly.

"We'll begin at the bottom, Captain," Hartley suggested, when the boatswain, cap in hand, stood in the doorway. "First, I want to see every man Jack you have working in the stoke hold."

Although the master gave the necessary directions I mistrusted him. Between the boatswain and himself I felt that there was an understanding which required neither voicing nor signal. And as, a little later, we stood on the forward deck, under the bridge and by the light of a lantern viewed one after another of those swarthy grimy laborers who had crowded up from below, I was convinced of the correctness of my intuition. For Cameron was not among them.

And then a chill fear gripped me. Could a man of his habits and training, suddenly called upon to assume such labor, survive its rigors? He was naturally robust, but he had been weakend by an illness. Might he not therefore have succumbed to the strain, died, and been buried at sea?

But one consideration sustained me. In their cunning cruelty, the Chinese who had arranged for his transportation must have stipulated that he be delivered in China alive. Otherwise their vengeance would not be complete. It was not likely that anything had been left to mere chance. The probabilities were that Murchison knew definitely what was required of him and was to be well paid for his services.

Upon his seamed face, now, there was something of a sneer as, our examination concluded, he said:

"What next, Mr. Hartley?"

But for a moment Hartley, who was standing thoughtfully with brows contracted, his lower lip gripped between finger and thumb, made no response. Before he spoke his attitude changed. Quickly he had assumed a pose of listening intentness. Behind us, somewhere, a clamor had arisen. Voices, excited, hoarse, fremescent yet muffled by distance, echoed dully.

"That man, next, Captain," he said coolly. "The man they're trying to keep below."

It may have been that his hearing was more acute than mine, or it may only have been a guess. I don't know. But, whichever it was, it hit the mark. It scored a bull's eye at long range.

Captain Murchison's indifference gave way instantly to palpable uneasiness. His hands, which had been deep in his coat pockets, came out as though jerked by springs. One of them canted his cap from his brow to his crown and the other clutched agitatedly at his beard. And in that moment the riot advanced, the voices waxed louder and more distinct; scurrying feet resounded on the metal deck.

I saw the captain start hurriedly toward the starboard rail, intent evidently on meeting the rabble which was approaching on that side, and I saw Hartley boldly block his way. And then, almost at the same instant I saw a tall figure with naked torso as black and shining as polished ebony—black with grime and shining with sweat—come running backward around the corner of the deck house. Saw it with an iron bar held menacingly aloft against its pressing pursuers; and even in the uncertain light of the deck lanterns, recognized it at once, by its outline and the characteristic set of its head upon its shoulders, nude to the waist and collied as it was, as the figure of the man I sought.

"Cameron!" I cried, chokingly, my fast-beating heart crowding my utterance. And all unmindful of the dirt which covered him I flung my arms about his waist from behind. "Cameron! Cameron! Thank God! Thank God!"

I was discouraged when a friend advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". After using three packages, I felt relieved and continued until I had used five packages when a complete cure was the result after years of doctoring failed. ROBINSON KILLED IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

St. Catharines, Aug. 3.—Albert Robinson, who some years ago gained a reputation as a travelling sleight-of-hand expert, but who recently has been residing in Grantham township, died Saturday noon from injuries received when a horse he was driving became frightened at a concrete mixer near the Welland Canal, and threw him out, fracturing his skull. His head struck a tie on the new trolley line which is being constructed to Niagara-on-the-Lake. No inquest will be held. He was sixty-three years of age and unmarried. He leaves one brother and one sister.

Officer Turned Back His Only Brother

Sarnia Immigration Officer Refused To Allow Relative's Visit

SARNIA, Ont., Aug. 2—Seldom has an immigration officer of the Dominion been forced to turn his own brother back when he tried to enter this country, but that is what hapepned to Inspector Cameron here yesterday morning, when his brother, a veteran of the civil war and a resident of Detroit, came to Sarnia to pay a visit to his only relative.

The old soldier is in a badly crippled condition from rheumatism, contracted during the war. When he landed on the Canadian side he was accosted by his brother, who was forced to accompany him back to the American side, as he could not allow him to enter under his oath of office. Such is the cold judgment of the law.

Toronto Boy Met Death in Bay

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—Clarence J. Grant, of 25 Balmoral Avenue, was drowned yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock, when he and a companion upset in a canoe near Eddie Durnan's boat house at Hanlan's Point. The young fellows were paddling leisurely along, when the wash from a motor launch threw them into the water. Grant was unable to swim, and sank instantly. His friend grasped the canoe and held on for an instant and then struck out for shore. He was a very weak swimmer and some people on the dock pulled him out in a very exhausted condition.

Tony Wallace, a fifteen yea[illegible]ld Italian lad, living at 140 William Street, was drowned yesterday afternoon in the Bay, near the foot of Simcoe street.

With a number of other lads he was bathing and walked out farther than he should have. His companions were unable to rescue him but ran for help. The body was recovered in an hour's time and taken to the morgue.

HUNDREDS OF WOMEN GAMBLE ON BASEBALL

Head of Philadelphia Vice Squad Counted Three Hundred of Them—One Man Placed Under Arrest on a Charge of Operating one of the Pools.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—Three hundred women gamblers, working in mills and spending their money on baseball "pool," have been counted by Detective Charles Lee, head of the vice squad here. Harry Reed of 4,470 Germantown avenue has been arrested and held in bail before Magistrate Coward, charged with operating one of the pools. He was held in bail for court.

Lee says 1,800 persons gambled on ball games at the place each week, most of whom were women. The chances cost twenty-five cents.

Parents and husbands have appealed to Superintendent of Police Robinson to prosecute operators on all pools.

In one of the pools it was shown by the police that the operator collected each week approximately $450, of which $150 was paid out in prizes and $300 was "velvet" for the man who ran the pool. The police say that the investigations made thus far have shown that in some sections of the city more women, many of them unmarried, and girls play the "pools" than men and boys. All of the women and girls are not baseball fans.

Buffalo Man Shoots Woman in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—A well dressed middle aged man and a handsome young woman quarreled to-day on Fifth avenue until the man suddenly drew a revolver, shot the woman three times and then shot himself through the head. He died instantly. The woman may survive. The woman said she was Miss Becky Silverman, 27 years of age, and that she lived with her brother in this city. Abraham Fink, she said, was the name of the man who shot her. She described Fink as a widower, about 48 years of age, who travelled as a jewelry salesman.

Fink it was found later, carried nearly $3000 in United States currency and a large quantity of Canadian money. In his pocket was a potoffice receipt for $10 obtained in Buffalo, also a receipt for money made out to Miss Silverton.

Letters found in the dead man's pocket gave his address as 86 North Division street, Buffalo. The letters were signed by Violet Rogers of 12 Vine street, Buffalo. They were mailed from a hotel in Atlantic City, and were signed "Your Darling Violet" and "Your Dearest Violet."

End of Balkan War in Sight

VIENNA, Aug. 2.—M. Radostavoff, the Bulgarian Premier, declared yesterday that the war may now be considered finished, and that there is every prospect that peace preliminaries will be signed within five days.

The settlement of the Macedonian question would cause no insurmountable difficulties, the powers having reserved for themselves the final decision.

As regards the attitude of Turkey, it is asserted that, while the military party at Constantinople persistently maintains that Turkey will retire from Adrianople only when overwhelmed by force, compensations are indicated by the Porte which would cause it to consider retreat without a struggle.

CHICAGO WOMEN POLICE WATCH THE DANCES

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Mayor Harrison last night appointed ten police women in accordance with a recent order passed by the city council. They will be assigned to duty at public bathing beaches and dance halls. Their uniforms have not yet been decided upon.

THE ABBOT OF OKA DEAD AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Fathers were Gathered Around Bedside--Lived Long in "Valley of Silence"--Was Born in 1852--Sketch of Career.

MONTREAL, Aug. 2.—After al ong illness, Dom Antoine Mitred Abbot of the Trappist Monastery at Oka, died yesterday afternoon. Beside his bedside were gathered many of the fathers with whom Dom Antoine had spent so many years of his life in "the valley of silence" by the Lake of Two Mountains.

The death of Dom Antoine leaves a gap which it will be hard to fill. His tall commanding figure, wearing the white robes of his Order, was always prominent in religious celebrations. Always gravely reserved, but none the less always courteous, Dom Antoine was zealous in charity and indefatigable in well-doing.

He went to France some time ago in an endeavor to regain his lost strength but his native air was powerless and Dom Antoine returned to spend his few remaining days at La Trappe.

REV. ROBERT WALLACE PREACHED FAREWELL SERMON AT BAPTIST CHURCH

The Rev. Robert Wallace, of the Marchmont Home, preached a farewell sermon to the members of the Baptist Church last night. Mr. Wallace has been a member of this church for 30 years. The sermon took the form of a resume of the preacher's experiences in Belleville during the past thirty years. The text was Mark v:35—"Have faith in God." Mr. Wallace spoke first of the growth of the Baptist Church during his membership here, from a Home Mission cause to a self-sustaining church, with a modern building and a substantial membership. He urged the need of evangelistic services to reach the non-church goers, and of a canvass of the streets for children who do not attend any Sunday School. He pointed out that all efforts and plans and progress would be compatible and commensurate with a living and loving faith in God. Turning next to the city itself, the speaker commended the increased business enterprise and the development of the civic spirit and desire for a truly beautiful city among the Christian people of this city. He spoke of the City Hospital, Children's Aid Society, County House of Refuge, W. C. T. U. Society, City Mission and kindred agencies for serving the people, both in body and soul, all of which have come to pass in Belleville during the past 30 years, and have been born of faith in God. Mr. Wallace, in a strong appeal, urged for a truer temperance spirit in Belleville, and for the banding together of all good citizens for the wiping out of the liquor traffic. It can be done if we have faith in God.

In a beautiful and solemn closing passage the speaker urged for a personal faith in God as the one way to happiness and peace in this life and in eternity, and closed by his own faith in God as His constant friend and helper during his many years of service for the orphan children. This sermon, which was listened to with marked attention, will long be remembered by all who heard it.

The Baptist Church male quartette rendered a gospel selection, and Mr. Jack Cookson played "Shadows" on the trombone during the offeratory.

A farewell reception will be tendered Rev. Robert and Mrs. Wallace tonight in the Baptist Church. All friends are welcome to attend.

Trent Valley Canal Is Within Sight

OTTAWA, Aug. 4.—Special —It transpires that the construcion of the Trent Valley Canal is within sight. This waterway has been before the public for nearly a century and has been under consideration for many years.

Hon. Frank Cochrane has taken the work up in earnest, and recently went over the route from Trenton, on Lake Ontario, to Orillia, on Lake Simcoe, and from Orillia over the proposed route of the Georgian Bay section as far as Ragged Rapids, on the Severn River. That portion of the canal between Trenton and Hastings, at the Lake Ontario end, is rapidly nearing completion, and it is expected that it will be finished in 1914 and ready for use in 1915. That will give complete water connection between Orillia and Lake Ontario.

The Port Severn section at the Georgian Bay end will be advertised in a day or so. The remainder of the work between Port Severn and Lake Couchiching will be advertised in three sections some time in the coming fall, and it is hoped that the work on these secions will be completed in 1915.

MILITANTS DISTURB SERVICE IN ST. PAUL'S

London, Aug. 2.—St. Paul's was the scene of a suffragette demonstration this morning a number of militants disturbing the congregation during the service by loudly intoning a series of prayers for the women's cause. There were interruptions during the litany. Only a single policeman was present. Special officers who used to guard the cathedral at the height of the suffragette campaign were recently withdrawn. Finally the suffragettes retired at the instance of the verger. The incident is likely to be repeated in any church, as the suffragette prayer has been printed and circulated among the militants for Sunday use.

Pitiable Condition of Transported Cattle

17 Bulls, Shipped from Nurval for Cape Vincent were Penned up in Closed Car.

KINGSTON, Aug. 2.—The pitiful spectacle of cattle suffering from the excessive heat, was witnessed when four cars containing 200 cattle were placed on a siding at the C.P.R. station this morning.

Seventeen head, all large powerful bulls, had been placed in a closed box car and when the car was opened the animals were found lying on the floor of the car overcome by the excessive heat. One was dead. They were removed from the car and placed on the ground, where they were showered with water. In the meantime word had been sent to No. 1 Fire Station and the firemen pulled the hose cart down to the station and soon had a cool refreshing stream playing on the unconscious animals.

Dr. Bell, V.S., soon arrived and did all in his power to alleviate the sufferings of the stricken beasts, who later on revived with the exception of one, which it was found necessary to kill.

The cattle were liberated from the other cars and for a time it looked as though there would be a stampede. In fact, some of the thirst-crazed cattle ran to the water's edge and plunged into the river, and considerable difficulty was experienced in bringing them ashore.

The cattle were the property of Wm. Webber, Cape Vincent, the well known cattle dealer, and were being shipped from Godfrey and Murvale to Cape Vincent, via Kingston. Those in the box car had been placed aboard the car about eight o'clock this morning and the train arrived in Kingston about 10.30 o'clock.

A score of amendments will be ready to be offered. The original resolution calls for the names and locaitons of all American citizens in Mexico who have been imprisoned, injured or robbed during the revolutionary period, together with an estimate of the financial loss suffered.

A BUMPER WHEAT CROP

THOUSANDS OF MEN REQUIRED

This Year's Harvest promises to be be the largest in

THE HISTORY OF CANADA

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

OLD TABLET FOUND BROUGHT TO AMERICA

Further Light Is Thrown on Creation Stories by Discovery of a Relic of Babylonia—World Created by a Dark-Haired Woman, It Says.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—(Special.)—A newly discovered tablet now at the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, brought to this city from Babylonia, gives what is now believed to be the first story of the creation of the world, as well as one of the most wonderful accounts of civilization as it existed in 2500 B.C.

According to this story the world was created by a woman goddess. She was a brunette, because the account says that her hair was black. It is stated that when the world became so wicked that it had to be destroyed the male gods, angry at the goddesses, opened the flood gates of heaven and drowned but one man and his family.

There are many parallelisms between this story and that of the Book of Genesis. Dr. Arno Poebel of Johns Hopkins university, who has deciphered this tablet, has declared that, in his estimation, it is the most remarkable story of the creation which the world ever has known.

Women Had Equal Rights.

The tablet tells of the peculiarities of the women of those days. It says that they had equal rights with men, thus providing the suffragists with an additional weapon for argument, altho history in 2500 B.C. says nothing of militant methods.

It contains beautiful epic poems, such as characterize the Psalms, and it is now thought that the Hebrew language, which came into use centuries after this Sumerian tablet was written, copied its style. In this way the archaeologists account for the writings of the Scripture in its present form.

The tablet relates all the essentials of the story in Genesis. It tells of the creation of mankind first, then the animals, and then the ground.

Flood of Seven Days.

It tells of a flood that lasted only seven days, instead of 40, or a year, as some historians have insisted took place. It tells of the rewards to Noah, after he had been saved; of how the ark was constructed and way Noah was selected for salvation.

It declares that one prehistoric king ruled 64,000 years, which makes Methuselah look like an infant. It declares that the number of years which elapsed from the creation to the flood were 460,000.

Parts of the tablet are missing, and the university authorities have sent again to Constantinople, in the hope that the fragments may be located in the tombs at Nippur or at the college at the Turkish capital, where many relics from the excavation have been taken.

The late J. P. Morgan is said to have paid $27,000 for a small portion of one of these fragments, which he bought in Constantinople.

MADE SQUAWS WORK

Piute Braves Soon Surrender Their Jobs to Women.

SAN FRANCISCO Aug. 3.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands are being tried in the Nevada desert. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job however the work went along just the same boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the payroll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning twenty-four hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railway, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

BOAT BREAKS LOOSE

Freighter Lehigh Crashes Into Lock 23, Welland Canal.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 3.—(Special.)—The steel freighter Lehigh, bound for Montreal with coal, crashed into the foot gates of lock 23, Welland Canal, at Thorold, Saturday afternoon, smashing the upper portion of both gates and bending them over sufficiently to allow the force of water from the upper level to wash the big boat over the remaining eight feet of the gates into the level below. In making this dive the steamer dropped 14 feet, bow first, shipping a quantity of water.

Righting herself the Lehigh was swept the full length of the short level below lock 22, which the steamer Fairmount was just leaving. To avoid hitting the Fairmount, the captain of the Lehigh steered his boat into the stone abutment, knocking a hole in her hull below the water line. The steamer is leaking badly but is being kept from sinking by the pumps. The Lehigh is loaded too deeply to go into the Port Dalhousie dock, and it is a question whether she can be taken to the dock at Kingston, altho the captain will try to make Montreal. She is owned by the Anchor Line of Buffalo, and has been thru the canal three times before this season.

Navigation was resumed at 8.30 this morning.

EXPLORERS FAIL

Prospectors Return Without Striking Placer in North.

COBALT, Aug. 3.—(Special.)—Sam Ottisse, Ernie Holland, David Moore and "Dad" Tuberner, well-known northern prospectors, have just returned from a trip 800 miles north of Cochrane. They started out on May 4 for Ungava in search of placer gold and diamonds. As they just reached Hurricanaw at the time the ice was going out of the rivers and lakes they encountered almost unprecedented high water and currents. They went in by the Natagon River and reached the Nitchiquon, on the coast of the Hudson. They blazed trails and canoed hundreds of miles where white men had never before set foot. The trip so far as striking placer gold and diamonds was concerned was not successful, it is said, but the men were, however, greatly impressed with the country, and one of them stated that he thought the far north was rich with other minerals. They found a formation of rock extending nearly all the route they traversed going north, which is said to be similar to that in other mining districts of the great north.

LIQUOR CHIEF CAUSE

Four-Fifths of Kansas Convicts in Prison Because of "Booze."

LANSING, Kan., Aug. 3.—(Special.)—At least four-fifths of the prisoners in the Kansas State penitentiary owe the loss of their liberty to liquor, in the opinion of the Rev. J. D. (Jerry) Botkin, newly appointed warden of the institution. The new warden will keep two things uppermost in his mind during his supervision of the inmates—to break up the drink habit and to teach the men to like work.

Warden Botkin declares there are but two answers to the question, "What's he in for?" These are, he says, "He got drunk," or "He did not work."

"These prisoners may or may not have been habitual drinkers," Botkin said. "Quite often it is the man who drinks only occasionally that liquor gets into trouble. Its influence over him is greater.

"Few busy men are criminals. They have neither the time nor inclination. I believe that work is a habit, and we are going to drill work into the men here so that they will go out and continue to work. We will teach every prisoner some definite line of work."

The new warden has been a minister 40 years. He is a Democrat, and was defeated for governor of the state by W. R. Stubbs.

Blackmail the Cause.

EL PASO, Texas, August 2.—An American who arrived from Chihuahua today states that the cause of the arrest of Charles Bissell, manager of the Mines Company of America, and Bernard J. MacDonald, manager of the San Patriotic Mining Company, which was made several days ago by soldiers of General Pascual Orozco, at Santa Rosalia, was because they declined to accede to the demand of Orozco for a commission of five per cent. on the value of the bullion they intended to move from the Parral district.

Orozco is said to have offered the miners safe conduct to the border for a consideration. Bissell and MacDonald have, it is said, made affidavit to President Huerta, setting forth Orozco's demand. General Mercado, Governor of Chihuahua, who is said to look on Orozco with suspicion, has collected the facts regarding the arrest and is merely detaining the mining men until he receives definite orders in the case from Huerta.

Bissell and MacDonald are said to be comfortably situated in jail and allowed everything except their freedom.

Will Help England.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 2.—Over thirty thousand people visited the battleship New Zealand yesterday. In the forenoon the officers were entertained by the council of North Vancouver to luncheon at the famous Capilano canon.

Replying to the toast to the royal navy, Captain Halsey took exception to the statement that Canada should be ashamed of itself in that it had allowed a small dominion like New Zealand to get ahead of it in the manner of contribution to the imperial navy. Canada, he was convinced, intended to do something, and in whatever way it assisted the motherland he was certain it would be right. The choice was one of the Canadian people, and he was sure they would do the right thing.

Aquatic sports for men were held in the afternoon and were attended by twenty thousand persons. At night the city council tendered a banquet to the officers, which was attended by many prominent citizens.

In Brother's Clothes.

MONTREAL, August 2.—Cutting off her curly brown hair and changing from her own dress to a suit belonging to her younger brother, fifteen-year-old Miss Benedictine Weisman disappeared from her parents' home early Tuesday evening. Altho police and detectives have been searching the city no trace of her had been found today.

Always of a romping nature and ever ready for tomboyish larks, she became known to her friends as "Benny," and strongly objected to being called by her feminine name.

The young man who is looking for promotion should consult a promoter.

The man who would reach success hasn't much time to sit under shade trees by the wayside.

Lived on Berries For Sixteen Days

Terrible Experience of Young Lumberjack—Lost in the Woods.

BLIND RIVER, Aug. 2.—Lost for sixteen days in the bush, during which time he lived entirely on berries, a man who gave his name as John Black, was found in a deserted hut by a young Frenchman, who came upon the deserted camp while out on a paddling excursion. Black, when found, was in a terrible condition. His only clothing consisted of a pair of old overalls, held together by pieces of wire. His body was a mass of sores, the result of scratches sustained while groping through the underbrush, and mosquito stings. His feet were badly lacerated, and he was in a terribly emaciated condition. He was hurried to the hospital here, and it is thought he will recover.

Black was working in Moore and Macdonald's lumber camp before he lost his way in the bush. At that time he weighed 190 pounds. He is now 50 pounds lighter as a result of his terrible experience. Black says that he could hear the trains going through the district, but found it impossible to get out o the maze of bush.

Montreal Grows by Great Leaps

Lovell's Directory Shows an Increase of Over One Hundred Thousand.

MONTREAL, Aug. 2.—An estimated increase of over a hundred thousand in the population of the city for the last two years is shown in Lovell's directory, just published, which places the population of Montreal at 568,003, while with the outskirts there are approixmately 652,500 people who were inhabiting the city on the 1st of July last. The directory contains 186,138 names, and the estimate of the population is reached by multiplying this figure by three and one-half, which has been shown by experience to give results that can be relied on as very nearly correct.

A feature of the new directory is the very small increase in the number of pages, which has prevented the already bulky volume from becoming unmanageable. Eighteen names have been added to each page of the street directory, and 12 names to each page of the alphabetical directory, and by this means the size of the directory has been kept down so that only a few more pages are contained than in last year's volume.

Sixty-one years ago, the compiler of the directory and four others collected the names and addresses of the citizens. In the present work, the enormous growth of the city is illustrated by the fact that over one hundred persons were required to work for two months, before the material had been gathered. Every precaution has, as usual, been taken to secure accuracy of information, and to make the directory thoroughly reliable in every respect. Where information about some society or corporation is missing, the publishers are satisfied that the blame for the omission rests with the party who should have supplied it.

There are, in the new directory, 14,313 more names than there were last year, when the population was estimated at 602,437 or a little over fifty thousand less than this year's figure. The names of those residing in Westmount, Maisonneuve, Outremont, Verdun, and Montreal West are found in the street and alphabetical portions of the directory, and in making the estimate of the population of the city proper, deductions have been made for these outlying municipalities, the population of Maisonneuve being reckoned as 32,000, Westmount at 18,500, Verdun as 24,000 and Outremont as 10,000. When these deductions have been made the population of the city proper is 568,133, as against 468,197, the figure from the official census returns of 1911, an increase of almost 22 per cent. for the last two years.

At this rate the city's population will be considerably over the million mark in 1919. By 1931, two years would be quite sufficient to add to the population of the spreading city, more people than are at present living in both the city and suburbs. If the present rate of increase should remain constant, twenty six years from today would see a city containing a greater population than the whole of the Dominion of Canada can boast of today, and with seven and three-quarter millions of people, exclusive of suburbs, considerably larger than the London of the present time. A trip further in the future is too dizzy for the brain of any but the trained mathematician, but the array of figures are sufficient to show that within the life-time of the present citizens the city on the shores of the St. Lawrence is likely to stand in the fore-front of the leading centres of the world. Of course, it is only natural to expect that the increase will not be maintained at the present rate, but the addition of growing suburbs will likely prevent any considerable decrease in the rate of advance.

Montreal is not the only city whose population has been growing, as the Toronto figures show an increase of almost a hundred thousand over the two year period, a relatively faster growth than that of Montreal, if the estimate of the City Clerk of Toronto is taken as accurate. The cities of the west are also growing by leaps and bounds, so that in 1913 more than two million Canadians are living in cities of fifty thousand or more.

Kidnapped His Own Child

Mother Claims Husband Carried off Child for Adoption by Friend.

CARDIFF, Wales, Aug. 2.—A remarkable case of alleged kidnapping took place in Cardiff on Friday, when Yvonne Barget, three years old, was carried off by a man and a woman in a blue taxicab.

The child is a daughter of Mme. Barget, a former Cardiff girl, who married a Frenchman and has been living with him in Paris for three years. Recently she returned to Cardiq with her child on a visit to her parents.

On Friday evening the child was playing in the street when a taxicab drove up with two men and a woman in it. One of the men jumped out and, picking up little Yvonne, carried her into the cab, and they drove off. All the neighbors who saw it agree that the incident took no more than a few seconds.

Inquiries show that the car went to Newport, where the party took the train for Bristol, and it is stated that the child's captors have been traced to Southampton.

The driver of the taxicab, when he returned to Cardiff, said that every day last week he had been engaged by a foreigner to drive him through the city in search of his lost child. He was accompanied by a handsome woman, and he said:

"I have lost my little girl. If it costs me $500 I will find her. If you find her—a little girl with rosy cheeks and curly hair—I will give you four quids."

"On Friday he told me to drive slowly through Daisy street," said the taxicab man. "When we came to the corner of Ivy street, he said, "Turn here," and he got out of the cab and went back to Daisy street. Two minutes later he came back with the little girl in his arms and said, "Drive straight up to Cathedral Road."

"hWen I got to Cathedral Road he said, 'Newport,' and I drove them to the station approach where he paid me. That was the last I saw of them." The mother was not at home when the incident happened, and when told of the affair was distracted.

"It is possible that the strange man in the taxicab was my husband," she said.

"I had no idea my husband was in the city. I came home for a holiday at the end of May, bringing little Yvonne with me. I only intended to stay a month, but was pressed to stay on a little longer. I was on good terms with him when I left, but I believe he has come under the influence of a wealthy woman, who is childless and is very anxious to adopt the child. She is the lady who, I believe, was with him in the motorcar.

"He loves the child dearly, and so do I, and I will get her back yet, even though I have to search all Paris for her."

FAIR MARKETS FOR THE FARMER

The farmer in Canada has innumerable problems to solves, and not the least important appears to be the question of finding a fair market for his crops after they are raised. This, says the Monetary Times, is constantly being emphasized, more especially in Ontario. The farmer often gets the barest pittance for his products, and the consumer pays the highest possible price for the same products. Who absorbs the difference?

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of agricultural and horticultural societies for Ontario, the other day cited a striking instance. A man from near Wiarton, Ontario, went to him and said that, having heard of the demand for vegetables in cities, and thinking that perhaps the raising of them might pay him better than the ordinary farm crops, he decided to put in an acre of cabbages, with the object of selling them in Toronto. He did so, raising 10,000 head of cabbage. When he came to Toronto and asked the wholesale men what they would pay for his fifteen tons of cabbages, they offered him $5 a ton, f.o.b. in Toronto. That was $75 for his carload of cabbages, or about one and three-quarter cents a head. At this time in the grocery stores of Toronto, cabbages were selling retail at 15 cents a head.

In order to transport his cabbages to Toronto, the Wiarton man would have to charter a car, costing him $42, leaving him $33. He figured that the manure at 25 cents a load, labor necessary, spraying, etc., would increase his charges so that, after selling his cabbages, he would actually be thirty-five dollars out of pocket.

Hundreds of barrels of apples rotted on the ground last year, while others were selling in the cities at high prices. Many similar instances could doubtless be instanced.

Is too much attention being paid to teaching the farmer how to grow and increase his crops, rather than showing him how to market profitably what he does grow?

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC

Scarcely had Mr. James A. Hill stated at Montreal that Canada has enough railroads, than Mr. E. J. Chamberlain, president of the Grand Trunk, said that as a railroad he never expects to see the Grand Trunk Pacific completed—because more mileage must continually be added to branch line construction and otherwise. This is according to the principle that no progressive railroad is ever completed. The time is fast approaching for the completion of the backbone of the Grand Trunk Pacific from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. Its steel will be be connected between Winnipeg and Prince Rupert within less than a year and Mr. Chamberlain sees no possibility of a hitch in the plans for the Grand Trunk Pacific to take over the National Transcontinental, the section built by the Dominion Government between Winnipeg and Moncton.

This road is tapping the famous clay belt of Northern Ontario and is expected in due course to give an impetus to settlement and business generally in that region. The Grand Trunk Pacific has running rights by lease over the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railways, the Ontario government road. As Mr. Chamberlain points out, however, the question of routing of freight lies with the shipper. When he is shipping grain, for instance, he engages vessel room at Montreal, Quebec, Halifax, Boston or New York, as the case may be, and his grain is routed accordingly.

The Grand Trunk pays the Temiskaming and Ontario Railway Commission a fixed yearly sum, based on 4¼ per cent. of one-half of capital cost, for the main line of the railway—North Bay to Cochrane inclusive. For the purposes of the agreement at its initial point, the sum of $300,000 was fixed as the rental, based upon the capital cost of the main line as of July 1, 1911. Cost of additions and betterments from that date are added to capital cost, upon which the Grand Trunk will pay interest upon one-half thereof, which naturally increases the rental annually. In addition, the Grand Trunk has to pay its proportionate share of operating and general expenses. The agreement is to be in force for twenty-five years from the date on which the Grand Trunk begins to use the line ,and an option clause renews all rights for twenty-five or more years.

The financing of the road is progressing favorably, although it will cost considerably more than was originally estimated. The directors met recently and authorized the issue of $15,000,000 debentures in respect of the loan for that amount which was granted to the company by the Dominion government at the last session of parliament. This is the second loan of that nature which the company has been fortunate enough to obtain, the former being one for $10,000,000. The Grand Trunk Railway guarantees both issues.

Shippers will soon learn that this sort of thing does not pay."

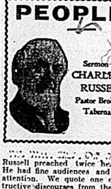
PEOPLE'S PULPIT.



Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL
Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Why Jesus Refused to Pray.

Pastor Russell on God's Times and Seasons.

[illegible]—Pastor Russell preached twice here to-day. He had fine audiences and excellent attention. We quote one of his instructive discourses from the text, "I pray not for the world, but for those whom Thou hast given" (John xvii, 9). He said:

When, years ago, I believed that an eternity torture awaited all who do not accept God's "call" of the present time, I had great difficulty with this text. I asked, Is it possible that our Redeemer was selectively unjust in his dealings with our race? Can it be true that the Heavenly Father merely calls and draws a predestinated few to himself and to everlasting bliss? Can it be true, as our catechisms recite, that God and Jesus "passed by" the great mass of mankind without drawing them, without calling them, without giving them the hearing ear, without opening the eyes of their understanding? Can it be that all these blind and deaf, unsought, undrawn, uncalled and unprayed for by the Saviour are going down to eternal torment? My heart answered, No! But my brain was confused by the errors, the misinterpretations of the Bible, which I had received.

Trained in the Doctrine of Election and Predestination I, like hosts of others, felt somehow that Brother Wesley's teaching of Free Grace was more noble, more God-like, than Brother Calvin's teaching respecting Election and Predestination.

Nevertheless, when I reasoned on the subject I said, Can I think of the omniscient God preparing a great place of sufficient size to hold the entire human family and outfitted with every devilish appliance for their torture, and yet being ignorant of the conditions under which they would be born? Can I think that he did not know that we would be born in sin and shapen in iniquity? Can I think that he did not know of the present reign of Satan, Sin and Death and that it would last for six thousand years and injuriously affect our entire race?

Brother Wesley's theory of God's Love and good intentions—of his endeavor to save everybody—seems inconsistent when contrasted with his teaching that only a saintly few reach eternal bliss and that the thousands of millions must spend eternity in torture. Thus I was once confused, as millions are still confused to-day, in respect to the Divine Character as exemplified in the Divine plan of the ages. So far as I can see, Brother Calvin had a wise and powerful God such as I could admire and reverence, if he had only been kind and loving instead of diabolical. And Brother Wesley had a kind and loving God such as I could admire and worship, if he had only had the wisdom and power of Calvin's theory.

So long as we have such confusion in our minds faith and hope and love and trust shake upon the foundations of our reason. We recognize that we know nothing of the future of ourselves; that we are wholly dependent upon Divine Revelation. But we cannot expect that our Creator would give us a Revelation which to sanctified minds would appear Satanic instead of Divine. We must remember that our Creator invites us to reason, saying, "Come, let us reason together; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow." Surely a right understanding of the Divine Revelation, the Bible, should be a reasonable one to a sanctified mind.

Hearken to the Word of the Lord: Their fear toward me is not of me, but is taught by the precepts of men! (Isaiah xxix, 13.)

Hearken again: "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my methods higher than your methods and my plans higher than your plans" (Isaiah lv, 9). And so we find, my dear friends—God's Word is true. His Character is glorious. Only the mist and smoke of the "dark ages" have confused things for us and mystified matters and darkened the eyes of our understanding.

Now as the six thousand years have passed and we have entered upon the Sabbatic Seventh Thousand we are beginning to realize that it marks a New Dispensation—that the night is passed; that the dawn is upon us. The wonderful inventions of our day along earthly lines are in full harmony with the clear light now shining upon God's Word, making its dark places bright and its rough places smooth and enabling us to remove the stumbling stones from the "path way of the just, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Now we can see why Jesus did not pray for the world. It was because the world was not in any danger of a fiery hell. More than that, it was because God's time for dealing with the world had not yet come. The world, however, is to be dealt with by the great Redeemer. After He shall have set up His Kingdom in power and great glory; after He shall have bound Satan for a thousand years that he might deceive the people no more, the glorious Saviour, Messiah, will cause a general enlightenment of mankind and a full opportunity for all, rich and poor, great and small, to rise up from dust and ashes and the grave to the full perfection of human nature.

The Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams, blessing mankind, healing their diseases, mental, moral and physical, and causing the knowledge of the Lord to fill the whole earth. No longer will any need to say to his neighbor or his brother, "Know thou the Lord, for all shall know Him, from the least to the greatest." And only the wilfully wicked and disobedient will be cut off from life in the Second Death—not torture; but, as St. Paul declares, "They shall be punished with everlasting destruction."

We see, then, that our Lord's reason for not praying for the world was that He knew the Father's Plan that the world was not to be dealt with during this Age, but during the next, the Kingdom Age. The Master prayed for His own, for the class which He has been selecting during the past nineteen hundred years. These are variously called "the elect," the "disciples," "His followers," "members of His Body," a "Royal Priesthood," the "Bride," "the Lamb's Wife," the "little flock," to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom.

Seeing, then, that there is a difference between God's provision for the world, to be dispensed in the next Age, and his provision for the Church to be given now, we ask, What is the difference between these? The answer is that the world's salvation is to be to human nature and an earthly Paradise world-wide; while the elect class is a special one called of God, chosen in Christ and faithful in adversity and, by the Lord's grace, is to have a heavenly nature, like unto that of the angels, but superior. Theirs is a "heavenly calling," a "high calling." They are to be like their Lord and Redeemer and Head and Bridegroom, Jesus, in His glorified state, "far above angels and principalities and powers, and every name that is named."

Is this an arbitrary election? Does God arbitrarily draw and call one above another? Yes. He thus selected the Jewish nation to be His peculiar nation—not, however, to the detriment or injury of other nations. He thus called Isaac instead of Ishmael, and Jacob instead of Esau to be the progenitors of His chosen nation Israel, whom He foreknew as a people and predestinated to a certain service. But this selection worked no injury to either Ishmael or Esau. Similarly during this Gospel Age God chooses from the world a certain class and grants them the hearing ear and the seeing eye, and He passes by others and gives them not this special favor. This, however, is not to be to the disadvantage of the others—non-elect, unchosen, uncalled.

St. Paul speaks of the Church as "called according to His purpose." He even tells us what the purpose is, namely, that in Ages to come He might show forth the exceeding riches of His grace in His loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus (Ephesians ii, 7). Toward this specially called class God will to all eternity manifest special favor. But we are not to suppose that there is no reason for this selection and favor. There is a reason. It is because of certain intrinsic qualities or characteristics possessed by this class which God is now selecting. They will all be "saints." They will all love the Lord more than they love houses or lands, parents or children, self or any creature. They will all possess the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit.

Indeed, this is God's particular predestination. St. Paul tells us that He foreknew that He would provide His only-begotten Son to be the Saviour of mankind and the Head over the Church, and He foreknew that He would have a Church, a Royal Priesthood under the great High Priest, as members of His Body. God foreknew also the kind of a Message He would send forth and that it would be attractive only to a certain class possessed of a love for righteousness. These only would hear His call. These only would have the eyes of their understanding specially opened, because these alone would accept of His assurances and make a full consecration to His service. Such He would beget of His Holy Spirit, and such, in due time, would be born of the Spirit in the resurrection and enter into the fellowship and companionship and kingly joys of their Master.

It is of this special class that the Apostle declares, "Whom God did foreknow, these He also did predestinate to be conformed to the likeness (image) of His Son" (Romans viii, 29). That is to say, God's predestination was not only that He would have a Church, but, additionally, that the terms or conditions of fellowship in that Church should be that each one would become Christ-like. Surely this is a good predestination, with which no one could find fault. Whether we shall gain a place with the "elect" on the heavenly plane, or a place with the non-elect world in restitution to earthly nature, we cannot do otherwise than recognize the justice of God

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursion—This Year's Wheat Crop will be the Largest in THE HISTORY OF CANADA

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greaest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipepg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East", $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton, to Winnipeg.

Going Dates.—August 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

August 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Main line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

August 25th—From Torono and North Wesern Ontario, north of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to Sarnia and east of Toronto to Kingston, Sharbot Lake and Renfrew, including these points.

HER LOVE LASTED TWENTY YEARS

The Jilted Girl, Now a Woman, Became Bride of Lover of Girlhood Days

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Although 23 years had passed since last she saw him, Miss B. Mann had no trouble in picking out her finance, James Russell Ross, of Islip, L. I., from the crowd on the pier, when the liner Minnetonka came into her slip. It was in 1890 that Ross, then a lad of 20 left England to seek his fortune in the United States, leaving his boyhood sweetheart to await the day he would make his fortune and come sailing back. Unfortunately Ross' new surroundings weaned him from Miss Mann and he married an American girl.

Miss Mann remained true to the love of her youth, and after many years her constancy was rewarded. Ross' wife died and in his loneliness he turned to her. He wrote and asked her if she was still willing to marry him. She replied that she was, and has met her old sweetheart.

THE TURF.

BLUE RIBBON TROTTING

Since the inauguration at the old Hamtramck track in 1885, the Blue Ribbon trotting and pacing meeting at Detroit each midsummer has ranked with later racing in the matter of speed. Always have there been sensationally fast performers on the Detroit track in spite of the fact that the meeting generally has taken place in July. Now that this carnival of speed has been moved back to the week of August 11 it is certain that all records made in the Michigan metropolis will be tumbled over by the fleet trotters and pacers headed for this annual event, which is incomparable in the sporting world.

Never in the history of trotting have so many horses beaten 2:10 in races in the month of July, and in view of the fact that they are improving it is expected that they will about reach their limit when they turn for the word at the Detroit races.

The Blue Ribbon program this year is one of unusual excellence. It is so balanced that the people living outside of Detroit who may be able to spare only a day or two will be able to see just as good an attraction no matter what afternoon they pick.

On Monday, August 11, the Matron stake for three-year-old trotters and pacers will introduce the best colts in the world. The Board of Commerce stake is a novelty in that it is for pacers who do not wear hobbles. The Chamber of Commerce stake for 2:13 pacers, $5,000, is the headliner for Tuesday, when the big field of 2:16 trotters will perform.

The Merchants' & Manufacturers' stake of $10,000 for 2:24 trotters is set for Wednesday when the great 2:05 pace will be raced. The free-for-all pace and the 2:08 trot are the big things for Thursday and the free-for-all trot and 2:08 pace on Friday.

In all there will be 20 races, four each afternoon, and the horses will be started by Frank B. Walker, acknowledged to be the master of his profession. Daily band concerts will help to make Blue Ribbon week one of the most enjoyable of the year.

Simple Freckle Cure

Two simple but quite satisfactory bleaches and freckle cures for the skin are buttermilk and sweet cream. These should be used several times a day, being patted on the skin and allowed to dry. Every time you come in from a long out-door jaunt wipe off your face and neck with a piece of old linen soaked in the milk or cream. After a time wipe the coating off with rose water. If you find this too expensive you may substitute water containing a little tincture of benzoin, twelve drops of the latter to a pint of water.

CHANCE'S CAREER BEGAN IN THE RING

"Peerless Leader" Was Once a Star Boxer, and no Novice at a Game of Cards

Way back in the nineties Frank Chance thought his calling in the world was to be under the jurisdiction of the old Marquis of Queensbury rather than on the baseball field, and he didn't make such a bad showing, either. He succeeded in presenting his case so strongly that nobody in Fresno had any desire to stand up opposite him in the squared circle.

Frank weighed about 180 pounds then, was as active as a kitten and possessed plenty of skill with his hands. He used to add suits of clothes and athletic goods, as well as an occasional purse to his collection by taking on all comers at Fresno Hall.

One day there came to Fresno Hall a young giant from the Middle West who tipped the scales at 220 pounds, and who was heralded as one of the coming heavies. On the strength of the records he brought to town he was duly installed as constable.

The new constable had not become well acquainted with his star before Frank's friends got busy with a challenge which was promptly accepted. A purse was made up, an evening's bout arranged, and the tickets for the exhibition were at a premium at a dollar a seat.

The two went at it hammer and tongs for four rounds without either one having much of an advantage. In the fifth round the big fellow swung a vicious upper-cut that went wild and Frank swung one that took the constable on the point of the jaw. Nobody counted. Somebody yelled for a doctor, and seconds and referee worked over him for two hours before they could bring him to, while Frank sat over in his corner frightened into believing he had laid out his man for keeps.

That's about the last time that Chance ever handled a pair of gloves. One's enough for him now.

The game of poker is one always dear to a ball player's heart and Frank Chance was no exception. Frank, however, was always blessed with such an amount of luck that opponents were scarce. Now, it happened that Fresno, at this time, although a town of no large dimensions, nevertheless possessed a Chinatown. Here, often, with a crony or two, did Frank try his skill. But the "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" succeeded in taking nearly every pot.

One evening Frank's companions scented a little "fixing" in the air and promptly hit one of the Orientals in the eye. It was a long way home, but Chance never made a better run around the sacks than the way he stepped it out in front of that mob of howling Chinese.

As a football hero, Chance made a great record, but he was on the injured list most of the time, as he took little care of himself in the scrimmages. A baseball knockout is not much worse than a gridiron quietus anyhow, and Chance seems to be used to both.

WORLD'S LONLIEST SPOT

An English historian has finally decided on the loneliest spot on the earth. Tristan a Acuma it is called, and it is an island hundreds and hundreds of miles away from its nearest neighbors. A tiny oasis in a boundless ocean, no matter which way you go. It is rocky, with a solitary mountain 1,000 feet high. A shepherd community lives there, farmers, cattle raisers, etc. In the valley of the island are fertile fields where potatoes are grown, and the food of the people consists of beef, fowls and fish. The island formerly produced many fruits and vegetables, but they can no longer be grown there, for the island is overrun by rats which escaped from a ship and the people have never been able to rid themselves wholly of them.

Messages for the Future

The modern Historic Record Association has formed a novel plan of delivering messages from its members to their descendants 100 years from now.

Two envelopes of durable Japanese vellum are sent to each member, with the request that genealogical memorandas, messages and photographs be inclosed. The sealed envelopes will be deposited in lead-lined steel chests. One will be stored with the association's collections in the New York Public Library.

A copperplate inscription will direct that the other chest be put in a vault near the Cheops pyramid in Egypt. In this way the insurance is taken against possible destruction by war or natural causes.

The chests will also contain documents, tablets, and photographs relating to affairs of the present day.

Mirrors at Road Crossings

Mirrors at road crossings for the use of warning automobiles are commencing to be used in England, and the results are very good. They are put in places where the crossings are specially dangerous, and the use of large mirrors allows the driver to see the reflection of cars which are coming in other directions. Another use for mirrors is upon heavy-power wagons, where the driver cannot hear the signals of automobiles back of him so as to have him take the right-hand side of the road to allow them to pass, for the noise of the power wagon often prevents the horn from being heard.

The ice on the river was burnished by the bright sunlight till it shone like a sheet of gold. The air was like new wine. Half a hundred happy persons hovered about, and Nelly Blair was the center of her own little group of select friends.

There was a pout upon her lips and a discontented, almost angry expression in her eyes. She stamped her little foot till the skate blade rang.

"I will never speak to Lisle Jordan again!" she declared. "I have a good mind to send him back the engagement ring."

"Don't be foolish, Nelly," advised her sister. "You are making a great big mountain out of a very small mole hill."

"Big? Little?" gasped Nelly, her eyes full of tears. "I saw him skating away from everybody with one of the new academy girls. His arm was around her, and I am sure I saw him kiss her."

"Did he see you, Nellie?" inquired her sister.

"He acted as if he didn't want to see me," cried the vexed girl. "He was to be here to skate with me two hours ago and—"

"Why, there he is now, Nelly; there is some mistake. He must have just come from home."

But Nelly was not in hearing now and soon she was out of sight. She had glanced just once at an approaching figure. It was her lover, with his skates over his shoulder.

Nelly was soon far from the general throng. Every moment she felt more abused and perverse. When she came to where the river divided, she took the far western branch.

Here the ice was a clear, brilliant sheet, scarcely marked. Nelly rested for a moment. Then she casually noticed a man coming her way. He wore a very fancy skating costume, and his progress was the rarest poetry of motion.

Nelly drew back timidly. The stranger was a foreigner, with jet black eyes and a waxed moustache. He lightly kissed the tips of his fingers, he smiled and bowed with an excess of courtesy.

His Progress Was the Rarest Poetry of Motion.

"Beautiful, very beautiful," he said, and Nelly was more astounded than ever. He described a wonderful circle on one foot, and then, with a flourish, made a series of quick whirls.

Nelly gasped and flushed at the audacity of the man. Plainly he had written on the ice with wonderful skill a name.

It was: "Nelly."

"How dare you!" flashed forth the little lady, but, with a delighted laugh, the expert skater was off on a long glide, and farther away Nelly saw him once more write that name on the glassy surface of the ice.

"Oh, dear! I am the most friendless and forlorn being in the world!" burst forth Nelly. "Everybody is cruel to me."

The expert skater was maneuvering between the spot where Nelly was and the junction of the rivers. Nelly was really frightened at the impertinent, airy fellow, as she judged him. She got out of his way by skating on. Finally she espied a cut-off leading to the other river branch. It had steep clay sides, and Nelly started along it.

Crack—swish—crack, crack! Nelly uttered a sharp, sudden cry of dismay. The frail rubber ice was bending under her weight. Then one foot went through it to the ankle. She darted for shore, but though at every step her feet broke through, she gained the bank.

A driftwood log was there, and Nelly sat down on it, breathless and with wet feet. All her sudden temper was subdued. How lonesome it was! How foolish she had been! In regaining the main river she might incur no actual danger, but her feet might sink in deeper.

"There is no Lisle to find me," mourned the dejected maid. "I suppose all men flirt. I wish—I wish I hadn't run away. Oh, dear!" and Nelly burst out crying.

She looked up at the sound of clanging skate blades and crackling ice. Her lover was coming towards her. She could read the anxiety and solicitude in his pale, earnest face. In his expertness he evaded breaking through the ice.

"Why, Nelly," he cried, in a glad, relieved tone. "I feared I should not find you. If it were not for a skater I met who had seen you come this way, I might have searched for hours. And in trouble, too, poor little girl!"

"Yes, I am in dreadful trouble," sobbed Nelly. "Was it a man in a fancy costume you met?"

"Yes, a stranger—looked like a foreigner."

"He is a bold, bad man," blazed out Nelly. "He smiled at me, and—and deliberately wrote my name on the ice. I never was so affronted in my life."

"He did, eh?" flared up Lisle, in his turn. "Well, we'll see about that. Now, little girl, I'll carry you over the rubber ice here, and we'll just go and bring that impertinent fellow to time."

Nelly nestled in his arms so gladly that she forgot all her pet grievances.

"Now you must skate to keep from freezing, dear," advised the thoughtful lover. "I must get you home just as quickly as possible."

"Oh—I am not the least bit cold, and I don't mind the wet one bit," declared Nelly, with a joyous thrill at being under such lovable protection again.

"Ah, there is that insolent fellow!" exclaimed Lisle, as they came to a bend in the river and the man who had so frightened Nelly was in view. "You wait here while I attend to the gentleman."

"How strong, how brave is Lisle!" enthused Nelly, as she watched her lover approach the object of her complaint. Then, to her astonishment, instead of a stormy collision there was a perfectly friendly meeting. The stranger bowed and showed the most extravagant courtesy. Lisle skated back to Nelly, his face in a broad smile.

"Why," he observed, "there is, of course, only one Nelly in the world to me, but there are two Nellys mixed up in this skating experience."

"What do you mean, Lisle?" asked Nelly bewilderedly.

"That gentleman yonder and his wife are a roller skating team who are here with a vaudeville company. He was simply practicing on ice skates. His wife's name is the same as yours, and he was delighted to find he was able to write it on the ice."

"Oh, dear! what a foolish girl I have been," said Nelly.

"Your sister told me of your mistake about myself," pursued Lisle.

"Mistake?" repeated Nelly.

"Yes, dear. The person you mistook for me was a college friend, Jack Delmar. I loaned him my outfit this morning."

"Oh, Lisle! can you ever forgive me for doubting you?" almost sobbed Nelly. "That Jack Delmar, though, is a bold fellow—I saw him kiss the girl with him."

"Why not? She is one of the seminary girls, and Jack is engaged to her. I tell you, Nelly, Jack is a fine fellow."

Nelly nestled closer to her lover, subdued, contrite, but immensely happy. Then she glanced up archly, and said:

"And you are a fine fellow, too, Lisle!"

He was not averse to the delicate hint, and their kiss of reconciliation was as well the kiss of peace and perfect understanding.

Fad Became Big Industry.

A Missouri woman has made what started out to be a fad into an interesting vocation. She has always had a fondness for beads, and years ago when traveling in Europe began a collection of fancy beads.

Though beautiful beads of rare coloring were to be bought, she wondered at the lack of taste shown in stringing them. She brought beads from Venice, Dresden and Russia and for her own satisfaction experimented in making them into necklaces. She then began to teach women in a small Missouri town to string beads according to her designs and color scheme. She now has over fifty helpers, and her necklaces are in demand. They are not at all expensive, but are decorative.

She goes abroad every year, and one of the pleasures of her travels is hunting about for odd and unusual beads, which she has so far found in nearly every country of the old world. Some of her beads have histories, and many were found in famous little curio shops.

He Didn't Forget.

Attorney Ephraim Lipschutz recently had a client who was to come up for a hearing before Magastrate Gallagher.

"What is your name?" asked Mr Lipschutz of his client, when the latter came to him with the case.

"James P O'Brode," was the reply.

"What is your middle name?"

"Patrick."

"Well, now, when Magistrate Gallagher asks you your name, say 'James Patrick O'Brode,' and don't forget the Patrick."

"Sure I won't," promised the client.

When O'Brode was arraigned and Magistrate Gallagher asked the first question, "What is your name?" the prisoner said in stentorian tones, "James Patrick O'Brode, and don't forget the Patrick."

He was discharged.—Philadelphia Press.

NINETEEN MEN DEAD

Double Explosion Takes Toll of Lives at Tower City Pa.

Thirteen Miners Are Killed in First Blast and Five Others Who Go Heroically to Rescue of Their Comrades Are Killed in a Second Explosion.

TOWER CITY, Pa., Aug. 3.—(Can. Press).—Nineteen men were killed and two seriously injured yesterday in a double explosion in the East Brookside Mine of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co., near here. Thirteen men died in the first explosion and five went to their death in the second blast after an heroic attempt to rescue the first victims. One of the rescuers escaped alive, but died a few hours later. The dead:

JOHN LORENZE, 60, mine superintendent.

HOWARD HAND, 21, Muir, single.

Nine Italian workmen.

Two Explosions.

It is not known exactly what caused the explosions, but the miners at the colliery are inclined to the belief that the first explosion was that of dynamite and the second was caused by gas which had been liberated by the dynamite explosion. The dead were scattered about for a distance of about a quarter of a mile. Only three men were taken out of the mine alive, and one of these died on the way to the hospital.

Supt. John Lorenz, 60 years of age, was in the mine when the first explosion occurred. He was rescued several hours later. Harry Schoffstall was another taken out alive. Both were burned and bruised and Lorenz died later.

It is possible that the real story of the explosion may never be known as all who were in a position to know were killed.

While the impression seems to be that the first explosion was that of dynamite, it is also possible that it might have been due to gas. The men were killed in three different ways. Some of them were violently hurled against the side of the tunnel in which they were working, and crushed. Some were burned to death by the explosion of gas, and others were suffocated by the after damp, which always follows an explosion in the mines.

All but five of the men killed were readily identified, and it is believed that the other five might easily be identified also, if any of their relatives had lived in the vicinity. With a few exceptions all of the foreign workmen were brought here from a distance.

Gave Up Search.

Superintendent Lorenz and Foreman Farrell were together when the explosions occurred, and Farrell was killed instantly, dropping dead at the side of Lorenz.

At 9 o'clock rescuing parties came out after a futile search and gave it as their opinion that both Farley and Fessler were dead.

Hillary Zimmerman, who was the only man in the affected mine at the time who escapped with practically no injury, was standing near the slope when the first explosion occurred, and he was hurled a distance of ten feet by its force, but was not rendered unconscious.

One theory of the explosion is that when the muckers were cleaning up the debris their shovels struck a piece of unexploded dynamite and set off the 175 pounds which the men had taken in with them.

Millionaire Shoots Himself.

SELKIRK, Aug. 2.—(Special.)—Arthur Stewert, aged 49, one of the most prominent financiers in Western Canada, founder of the National Trust Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, and formerly director and manager of that institution, was found by his wife at 6.30 this morning lying on a couch with a bullet hole thru the temple and a 32-calibre revolver lying on his breast.

Mr. Stewart had been complaining recently of heart trouble and worrying considerably over financial troubles, which is the only cause that can be assigned for taking his own life. At the time of death Mr. Stewart was rated at $1,000,000.

George L. Stewart, only son of deceased, is a student at McGill University and is at present in Montreal. Funeral arrangements are pending until word is received from him.

Purely Business.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The only London paper to comment on England's refusal to be represented at the San Francisco exposition is The Daily News, which says:

"The American press has jumped to the conclusion that the refusal of the British government to take part in the Panama exposition is meant as a protest against the American omission to arbitrate the Panama tolls difference. This is preposterous. The true reasons are purely business ones, and have no political flavor at all. It would be very unfortunate if the American people were to persuade themselves, either that we had given up all hope of arbitration on the tolls question, or that we have any thought of retaliating with a sort of boycott."

Erin Fire-swept.

GUELPH, Ont., Aug. 2.—A disastrous fire swept over Erin Village at five o'clock this morning, completely destroying the following establishments:

Steele and Foster, dry goods and groceries; J. Stevens, boots and shoes; John Horner, butcher; C. J. Blackwood, implements; the Queen's Hotel, proprietor, S. Ridler.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss is about thirty-five thou-

Thomas Fowler Meets Death While Working in Gravel Pit.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 3.—Thos. Fowler, aged twenty-six, son of Jas. Fowler, a farmer near Glanworth, in Westminster Township, was smothered to death by a cave-in of gravel in a pit from which he was drawing gravel yesterday. He had gone to the pit at 6.30 a.m., and when he failed to return either for dinner or supper his two sisters became alarmed, and his father, on returning from St. Thomas, where he had spent the day, went to the pit. He found his son's body buried under several feet of gravel, and the horses and partly-loaded wagon standing nearby. Several feet of gravel had fallen around the wagon, preventing the horses from leaving the scene. The young man had drawn no gravel from the pit that day, and it is supposed the accident occurred early in the morning. Deceased's mother is at present in Washington State on a visit. The coroner has decided that an inquest is unnecessary.

To Meet in Regina.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Aug. 2.—(Can. Press)—The closing session of the sovereign grand lodge of Orangemen was held this morning. Regina was selected as next year's meeting place by a small majority, Ottawa and Niagara Falls putting up a determined effort to land the honor. Last year's officers were re-elected, with the exception of Thompson of Toronto, who becomes treasurer in place of Parkhill, deceased. Harper takes Thompson's place, and Eaton of Winnipeg becomes deputy secretary.

In the closing hours of the session the grand master voiced the sentiments of the delegates in expressing in highly complimentary terms his appreciation of the reception accorded them during their stay in Newfoundland. Many of the clerical delegates remained over to occupy local pulpits tomorrow.

Noted Australian Dead.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The death of Sir William Lyne at the advanced age of seventy, which was reported from Sydney today, has removed one of the most notable figures in Australian politics. For thirty-three years he had sat continuously in Parliament, and met his first defeat in the recent federal elections. A protectionist to the core, he was responsible for the present Australian tariff, which extends a handsome preference to British goods. Since the Deakin-Cook fusion he had allied himself with the Labor party.

TWO BUILDINGS BURN

Toronto Exhibition Receives a Severe Blow by Fire.

Sheep Building Is Origin of Conflagration Which Spreads to Poultry House, Causing Damage of a Hundred Thousand Dollars.

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—With the exhibition three weeks away, two buildings disappeared by fire Sunday afternoon. Starting in the sheep building, near last year's eastern entrance, the flames galloped thru the long wooden aisles, jumped ten feet to the poultry building, lingered at the door and window sills a moment and then raged thru that brick and stone shell. In fifteen minutes the fire was at its height, and the department, delayed by a belated alarm, just arriving. A hundred thousand dollars' damage was done.

Temporary sheds will be put up for the poultry show, a tent erected in the open space north of the grand stand, where the horse sheds used to be, for the sheep.

Of the sheep building nothing remains but charcoal and twisted tin. Naked brick and stone foundation walls, bulged in places and ragged at the edges with torn metal coping and enclosing an unroofed pool in which charred wood floats, tell of the futility of semi-fireproofing as tried in the once handsome poultry structure. This building has been used two years and cost about $70,000. Its walls held, except for some few bricks that fell before the heat, but they may have to be razed. The floor and roof of wood, enclosing many layers of chicken coops, piles of sawdust, lumber and other materials used in buildings under construction were choice fuel for the flames, and the unprotected steel work of the interior, whitened with heat, writhed and bent into fantastic figures.

No one who would tell could say how the fire began. Sparks from a passing locomotive—the depressed Grand Trunk tracks run alongside the buildings—set things going is the theory of some. But firemen and police held to the opinion that incendiary work was responsible. In the last two weeks the city has been spotted with fires, some of them costly, that have started from no traceable cause. On the face of these, so fire experts believe, there have been characteristics of deliberate fire setting. Deputy Chief Noble thinks it is the work of boys, not men.

With the wind sweeping from the northeast it is not likely that the firemen could have done more than isolate the Exhibition blaze to the two buildings, even tho they had been warned sooner. A good 15 minutes swung around before they were at the blaze, and four minutes of that they used in getting there. The balance of the time was wasted after a park visitor saw the smoke wreathing up. He chased from one fire alarm box to another. There were no keys to any of them. They were locked to keep idle folk from bringing the reels on useless errands.

Running frantically among the maze of many-sided buildings he was seen by Special Constable Wright, the lone daytime patrolman of the Exhibition grounds.

Wright hastened on his bicycle closer to the scene of the fire—he was at the waterfront—and rang in the fire warning from a Dominion signal box at the back of the art building, which is next west the poultry building. That was at 2.20. The private protection system, which is a G. N. W. operated company, phoned headquarters and they, at 2.21, sent three halls out, Cowan, Dundas and Portland. Four minutes later a call went in from the corner of Strachan avenue and Wellington street. Somebody from there had seen the fire, now flaming high, and that emptied six more fire houses.

There are four or five fire alarm signal boxes scattered around the Exhibition, but the keys that turn them were removed a long while ago, as boys used to turn in false alarms. The public cannot use these boxes, but they can ring in an alarm in the usual way from the Dominion signal boxes—if they can find them. They are the regular red signals, but they are enclosed in a plain wooden box that hasn't even a remote appearance to a fire alarm box.

As a result of a fire which broke out in the Robert Crean hat factory, 12 to 18 Balmuto street, on Saturday afternoon, and which could not be put out thru want of water pressure, about 200 hat operators were put out of employment and property amounting to $250,000 destroyed.

The fire broke out in the felt building, which was of frame, and spread to a three storey brick factory built five years ago, where it burnt itself out while the firemen looked on and helped pull down the walls.

2,000 Asked to Strike.

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 2.—Officers of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers stated early today that many organizers and workers would be sent at once to Weirton, W. Va., in an effort to persuade the two thousand men employed in the plant of the Phillips Sheet and Tin Plate Company there to strike in sympathy with the striking employes of the same company at the Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, mills. Yesterday was the time set for the strike, but it was stated that less than fifty men left their places. Amalgamated men said this was due to a desire to have them finish out the week.

The works are closely guarded and Sheriff Mercer today added twenty deputies to his force. Scouts from the union side, it was said, were prevented from entering, but there were so many of them that they expected to get into the works before nightfall.

We also recommend that the crossing be protected by an electric bell at once."

BOX CAR IN THE WAY

Jury Says G.T.R.'s Negligence Contributed to Death.

Inquest Into the Death of Mrs. Martha Perrin at Cobourg, When Auto Dashed Into a Train Results in a Finding That Both Chauffeur and Train Crew Tried to Avoid the Accident.

COBOURG, Aug. 1—"We find that the deceased, Mrs. Martha Perrin, came to her death on the University avenue crossing on Sunday, July 27, by being thrown from an automobile, struck by a Grand Trunk train. We believe both the driver of the motor car and the train crew did all in their power to avoid the accident.

"We believe the accident would not have occurred had not a box car been placed so close to the street on the siding as to obstruct the view of the driver and train crew and we think the Grand Trunk Railway negligent in so placing their car. We recommend that the G.T.R. be compelled to use necessary precautions for the safety of the public by placing a gate or flagman on this particular crossing or stop all trains going south."

The above verdict was returned by Coroner Ferris' jury tonight on the death of Mrs. Martha Perrin, who was killed on University avenue crossing here on Sunday last.

A rider recommended that the town demand from the Dominion Railway Commission a joint subway under the new C.P.R. tracks and the present G.T.R. tracks.

Box Car Blocked View.

That he was a distance of only 8 yards from the backing train when he first saw it, was the statement of Ira Dawson, the driver of the motor car. He said his view of the track from University avenue was blocked by a box car standing on a siding near the street. Only a second before his wife had remarked on the danger of this particular crossing.

Dawson explained to the jury that in the front seat with him were his wife and four-year-old son, while in the back were Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Kerr, and on the left hand side, Mrs. Perrin who met death.

"Exactly what did you do when you saw the train?" questioned Crown Attorney Kerr. "Well, I was horrified, I jammed my foot on the brake, but it slipped off. I know I got it on again and used the brake. I really don't remember, I was so scared, at the time."

He declared he was going no faster than 10 miles an hour at the time, and altho everybody in the car was watching and listening for a train, no signal bell or warning of any kind was given.

The car, he said, was struck broadside on and carried down the track about fifty or sixty feet. Nobody excepting Mrs. Perrin was thrown out.

Asked by Coroner Ferris if she had not jumped, witness said he did not think so. He pulled her out from under the car, and he believed she was killed instantly.

Cross-examined by T. F. Hall, solicitor for the family of Mrs. Perrin, witness said he had driven a car since last spring. He was quite competent, he thought, to drive.

George Chaplin, who witnessed the accident from his veranda on Spring street, thought the box car on the corner prevented Dawson from seeing the backing train. He heard no crash.

Mrs. Cockburn, a resident of Cobourg, testified to administering first aid to the first woman. According to witness Mrs. Perrin was not instantly killed, but drank a little water, then lay down and expired shortly after. Witness heard no warning given.

She saw the box car on the siding and believed it would block the view of the track. Next morning she said it was shoved down the track.

That the clutch on the motor car was never released before the accident was the evidence of E. McGuire, motor expert. His examination of the car after the accident showed the clutch to be still in, and about three notches of gas and about seven of spark. If the engine was stalled at all, he said it must have been done by the foot brake.

McGuire, who went over the ground for the crown afterwards, stated that a man had to pass the box car before he could see a train 20 feet upon the track. This, he said, would not leave space sufficient in which to stop a motor car.

Gave Warning, Says Conductor.

Conductor Wagner of the freight train contradicted former witnesses, declaring that there was a warning whistle and bell given about twenty car lengths from the crossing. He also had, he said, a brakeman on the leading car, who, however, jumped into the coal car because he didn't want to see the people get hurt. Wagner disagreed with former witnesses who said that after passing the standing freight car they had but 24 feet in which to stop for a train. Twenty-four yards would be more accurate.

Brakeman Barr of the freight train stated that he was fulfilling his duties on the leading car. The box car, he said, was 15 feet from the corner, and he had to almost clear the corner before he could see the corner. He signalled to stop as soon as he saw the auto couldn't stop in time. The collision, he said, was almost at the moment he saw the motor car. Proper signals had been given, he said.

Engineer Hill swore he whistled for the crossing and kept his bell ringing continuously. His train was traveling about five miles per hour.

Vienna Men Will Visit Fair.

Vienna, Aug. 1.—It was announced today that the decision as to the Panama Pacific exposition will rest with a commission which is about to visit North America, composed of representatives of the government and Vienna chamber of commerce, is about to go to Toronto to visit an exposition there and from Canada will go to San Francisco. They will report to the government on their return.

Hours Are Reduced.

MONTREAL, Aug. 1.—(Can. Press.)—Commencing today the working hours at the Angus Shops of the C. P. R. were reduced from 54 to 40 per week.

This is in accordance with an agreement with the Federated Trades, that in the event of the state of work not requiring as large a staff of men the company shall reduce the hours instead of curtailing the staff.

CONDUCTOR BLAMED.

MAPLE, Ont., Aug. 1.—At the inquest held here tonight into the circumstances surrounding the death of G.T.R. Brakeman John Wilson, in the Maple yards on July 26, the jury placed the onus of the fatality on Conductor Parker for failure to protect the end of his train. Despite the jury's finding, however, The World was informed that no further action would be taken by the crown.

Wilson, who was the front-end brakeman on a southbound extra freight train, was riding with the fireman and engineer in the cab when the engine dashed into the rear end of a standing way freight in the Maple yards. Both the fireman and engineer jumped to safety, but Wilson was caught in the cab and buried under the debris called seven witnesses.

Conductor Parker, who had been subpoenaed, however, failed to put in an appearance, tho he was represented by counsel.

Engineer Robert Harman of the southbound train told the court that he had received orders to run from Allandale to South Parkdale. As far as he knew his train was superior to all others. At Newmarket the despatcher gave him a clearance order, informing him that he had a clear track.

He swore that he did not see the tail lights of the standing train until he was about eighteen car lengths away. Altho he had good air brakes he was unable to stop in such a short distance. When the crash came the train was moving at about twenty miles an hour, he said.

"I threw on my emergency brake," said the witness, "and hollered to my crew: 'For heaven's sake, jump.' My fireman was on the steps, and I yelled to him to jump and give Wilson a chance. Hutchinson hesitated, and before I leaped the last thing I saw of Wilson was his attempting to climb up on the coal-tender."

Wm. J. Gladman, rear-end brakeman on the standing freight train, blamed Parker for not warning him that they were nearing Maple, so that he could have thrown out fuses as a warning. When the train reached Maple he was getting his red lantern ready to run back to protect his train when the crash came.

Parker, it seems, left everything to the young brakeman, who is only 21, and was helping to unload freight without finding out if his train was protected at the rear.

PORT HOPE, Aug. 1.—(Special.)— bathing with some other young people on the Ontario Beach at the foot of John street and got beyond their depth about twenty-five yards from shore altho unable to swim.

Some time elapsed before the onlookers realized that the girls were in danger and took steps to help them. The rescue was effected in the nick of time by Robert Rufe, C.P.R. civil engineer, and Charles Cancilla, a local fruit dealer.

Cancilla is the hero of three previous rescues from drowning during the last two years and he almost lost his own life in trying to save the girls, who made matters worse by clasping him round the neck.

Mrs. Charles Kerry rendered valuable service in resuscitating the young ladies previous to the arrival of Drs. Dickinson and Aldrich.

Turns Brother Back.

SARNIA, Aug. 1.—(Special.)— Seldom has an immigration officer of the Dominion been forced to turn his own brother back when he tried to enter this country, but that is what happened to Inspector Cameron here this morning, when his brother, a veteran of the civil war, and a resident of Detroit, came to Sarnia to pay a visit with his only relative. The old soldier is in a badly crippled condition from rheumatism contracted during the war. When he landed on the Canadian side, he was accosted by his brother, who was forced to accompany him back to the American side as he could not allow him to enter under his oath of office. Such is the cold judgment of the law.

Victim of G. T. R. Accident Dead

Robert Farmer, of Lindsay, who on Friday night last sustained painful injuries in the G.T.R. yard here, by being struck by passing cars, passed away at the hospital yesterday afternoon. It was thought at the time the victime had received fatal injuries, and such proved to be the case. Everything possible was done for Farmer, but it was of no avail, and the end came. The remains were removed to Tickell & Sons' morgue, and Dr. Boyce, coroner, under the circumstances, was compelled to hold an inquest. A jury was empanelled, and convened at 2.30 this afternoon, and after viewing the body listened to the evidence submitted.

Notes of the Harbor

The Schuster Co.'s dock will be put in a first class condition. A new trestle is now being built for the unloading of coal at the coal sheds. Some thousands of dollars will be spent on the warehouse, etc., and a general air of prosperity prevails down at this end of the city.

The steamer Belleville arrived here several hours late Sunday afternoon, with a large passenger list and discharged and loaded large quantities of freight.

The steamer Alexandria arrived on time Saturday, and left here for Quebec this morning. A large crowd of passengers was taking in the trip of this favorite steamer.

The Government boat house is receiving two coats of paint from the skillful hands of Mr. Theodore Jardine, which it certainly needed.

The dredging outfit of Randolph MacDonald & Co., is hard at work at the new docks. It is expected that another outfit will be here in a few days to help in this work.

SELLS FLOTO PARADE

Of course when the Sells Floto circus comes here, on Aug. 7th, it will give a parade, which will probably come down the street about eleven o'clock in the morning with bands playing and banners flying and full of all the joy and gladness that it will hold.

Sells-Floto is the only big travelling organization that always gives its patrons the full benefit of this free spectacle. Others cut out the street parade at one time or another, the real reason being that they did not have exactly what they advertised, but when the Sells-Floto circus comes here, it is especially requested by the management that you go and see the street parade, because if you don't even care to go to the circus afterwards, you will see much that is interesting, entertaining and educational while watching the pageant. Some of the things that you will see and hear, are as follows:

The famous Royal Scotch Kilty Band from Toronto, Canada, the greatest organization of its kind in the world. You will hear the Sells-Floto Concert Band under the direction of Park B. Prentiss. As the line of march proceeds, you will notice Devlin's Champion Zouaves, performing all kinds of intricate and sensational military movements. You will hear the Berni Giant Serenadum, the largest musical instrument ever carried on wheels and featured in a parade. You will also notice that every den and cage is open, and each contains some remarkable specimen from jungle and plain. You will see Marguerite Recardo sitting like Daniel of old in an immense den of lions and tigers, unterrified and unafraid, while they crouch fawning at her feet. You will notice the display of horse-flesh, the like of which you have never seen before and may never see again—every class and species being represented, from the sleek thoroughbred to the lordly Percheron. There will be clowns without number, afoot, a-horseback, and every other way. There will be ten bands. You will see the famous herd of trained elephants, followed by the racing camels hitched to their speeding wagons. There will be pretty women driving tandem and dare-devil charioteers with their swift coursers. There will be sacred oxen from India and whole flocks of Shetland ponies to amuse the little ones; scores of champion riders mounted on the best horses that money can procure, and a host of other things sufficient to make this wonderful spectacle nearly two miles long.

Even if you don't want to pay the 25 cents admission fee which is just one half that levied by every other circus of consequence, you are welcome as the flowers in May to come down on the street and watch the circus pass by.

COMPARE THEM

Best English and American Bands at Canadian National Exhibition

With the Irish Guards' Band and Patrick Conway's Band both giving three concerts daily at the Canadian National Exhibition, lovers of band music will be able to compare the best English and American bands. The Irish Guards are undoubtedly the most popular of the Guards' bands, and that means the most popular of European military bands, while Conways's band has succeeded Gilmore's band as the popular favorite in the republic to the south of us. These two bands make the greatest musical attraction the Canadian National has ever offered its patrons.

Some Persons "Flinch" When Truth Hunts Them

"If any man is able to convince me and show me that I do not think or act right, I will gladly change, for I seek the truth, by which no man was ever injured."—Marcus Aurelius, Roman Emperor.

Some shrink and try to close their eyes and ears to the haunting fact that the little 1½ to 3 grains of Caffeine in every average cup of tea or coffee is the demon which relentlessly pursues and starts various ailments, such as biliousness, headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, bowel trouble, heart failure and a long string of aches and ails, taking one form in one person and another in another.

The effect of repeated doses of tea or coffee, on those who are susceptible to caffeine poisoning, is so complex that it is difficult to foretell where its hurt will be most serious; in Heart, Head, Eyes, Nerves or where.

The stroke of trouble will come somewhere if the daily doses are persisted in.

Of course if anyone prefers to treat his body in that way it is useless to suggest relief.

Let him "follow the trail" until badly wounded.

Some go so far they can't get back to health. Others quit the foolish, losing game before fixed chronic disease sets in.

There is a mighty army of sensible ones, however, who have bravely tested the truth with their own bodies to see whether or not it was the truth that tea and coffee caused their ailments.

It's an easy test. Quit tea and coffee absolutely for 10 days. Take Postum hot and well-made and keep track of the change toward health day by day.

It's the most exquisite pleasure in the world to be perfectly well with all the delicate and beautifully adjusted machinery of the body working in harmony, not interfered with by drugs, one of the most insidious and deceptive of which is caffeine in tea and coffee.

This is Truth.

Meet it bravely with head up and a hearty handclasp.

Truth thus made welcome will prove your best friend.

These are facts without regard to our own opinion, or to whether or not you use Postum.

However it is well to consider that famous food-drink because it supplies a hot beverage of deep seal-brown color, which turns to the rich golden-brown when cream is added.

It has a snappy flavor, but there is no "sting" in it, no caffeine or other drug of any sort. It is skilfully manufactured of wheat and a trace of New Orleans molasses.

It comes in two forms. One called Regular Postum, must be boiled full 15 minutes.

The other, Instant Postum, is in powder form and a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water makes the beverage instantly. Grocers keep both kinds.

Gets Currant in His Nose and Death Follows

BRANTFORD, Aug. 2.—Ab William K. Lampkin, a five year old boy is dead here under peculiar circumsances. Three weeks ago the little fellow got a green currant up his nose and his parents were unable to extract it until next day.

Complications set in resulting in the lad's death and leading to the belief that death was caused by one currant seed in the nasal organ which the parents failed to extract.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of Senator Robert M. La Follette, has written a play with woman suffrage as the dominating motive.

Mme. Aime Dupont, a fashionable photographer of New York, is the widow of the French sculptor whose work was notable in Paris several years ago.

Dr. Valfrid Palmgren, the woman member of the municipal council of Stockholm, is said to be responsible for that body voting 2,000 crowns to be used in entertaining the coming congress of the International Woman Suffrage alliance in that city.

Mrs. Clarence Burns of New York is president of the Little Mothers' association, which was formed to take care of the little girls who must mind the baby and do the housework while their mothers are out earning a living. The society takes care of the babies for the little mothers and lets them go to school.

Miss Fannie Bixby of Los Angeles, Cal., has served as special police officer at Long Beach for more than two years. Besides her duties as police officer she is probation officer connected with the juvenile court and a member of the juvenile court commission. Miss Bixby is a Wellesley graduate and the daughter of a wealthy family.

The Writers.

Paul Heyse, the German novelist, who won last year's Nobel prize in literature, is recognized as a master of his art in his own language. He has been a writer for sixty years.

The death of Rudyard Kipling's mother in the early seventies accentuates the fact that the son, nearly twenty-five years after his first literary success, is still essentially a young man. As a matter of fact, he is only forty-five years old.

Edith Wharton, the novelist, was born in New York in 1862 and married Edward Wharton of Boston in 1885. Her first story was published in 1899. Since that time her industry has never flagged, more than a dozen volumes having come from her pen, though some of them were not stories, but records of travel.

Salads.

Shredded pistachio nuts—the kind that come salted—improve the appearance as well as the flavor of the apple and celery salad if a dozen are sprinkled over the top.

In making salads do not chop your meats and celery in a chopping bowl. Cut into the desired sized pieces with scissors. This is quicker, neater and cleaner than the old way.

For delicious cheese balls for the salad course select a dry cream cheese, moisten it with olive oil and cream, mix with it minced parsley, salt, paprika and sugar and form in balls.

Sporting Notes.

McKinney, champion trotting sire, has thirteen performers in the 2:10 list.

John McGraw is "coming back." The New York manager says he will play in many of the earlier games.

Foot racing is popular in South African sport. The 100 yard dash between Donaldson and Walker drew 20,000 spectators.

Battling Nelson is planning a trip around the world. He will box in China, Russia and Japan, as well as in all the English speaking countries.

Too Effective.

COPYRIGHT, 1912, A. C. McCLURG & CO.

I heard the iron bar drop resoundingly to the deck; I heard Hartley's voice raised in anger, strident, staccato; and I heard the receding shuffle of feet as those who had pursued now backed away. There followed then a moment of silence, while the body I had held twisted out of my arms, and having released itself, turned and faced me—a moment of silence, only, for against the sudden stillness there now rang out a weird, palpitant cry, born of surcharged emotion, as Cameron, casting himself forward into my arms, buried his face in the angle of my neck and shoulder.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Final Problem.

It is doubtful whether in all Egypt there was ever such another period of joyous thanksgiving as that which followed the bringing of Cameron to the little hotel in Port Said. I am inclined to question, too, whether in the space of a single waking day four persons ever talked more, or with more mutual interest, than did the four of us there gathered. The heat, the flies, the poor food, and the miserable accomodations, generally, were not merely gladly tolerated, but absolutely disregarded. In the exuberance of our rejoicing, annoyances which had loomed large on the preceding day dwindled to the imperceivable; and from early morning until late night experiences were exchanged, adventures told and speculations indulged in.

Washed, scrubbed, shaved, shorn and clad in raiment put at his disposal by the indefatigable Hartley, Cameron appeared wonderfully well-looking. Indeed I was amazed by his appearance and by his condition. I had feared to find him a mental and physical ruin. I had feared even for his life. And he had come to us, if we might judge by outward seeming, stronger, more robust, less nervously relaxed than when he disappeared.

"At first," he told us, as we sat at breakfast in a little upper room of the hotel, Evelyn close on his right, Dr. Addison at his left, and I opposite him, "I suppose I did suffer, whenever I was conscious, which, fortunately, I think, was comparatively seldom. They dosed me almost continuously with what I believe to have been some attribute of opium, so that even in my waking moments I was not wholly normal. In this way, of course, I lost all count of time. And so, too, I am unable to give events in sequence. My first conscious moment after being on the deck of the Sibylla found me strapped in a narrow berth on a rapid, but rather rough-riding craft of apparently much smaller dimension than the yacht, and with a Chinese boy sitting beside me. You can fancy my startled amazement at the sudden transition. In vain I asked questions. In vain I struggled to rise. Then I shouted, and the Chinese boy lighted what appeared to be an ordinary joss-stick on a stand at the head of my berth, and withdrew from the tiny cabin. Insensibility followed quickly. After that I have a vague, dreamy recollection of eating something with a strange, spicy flavor, which seemed only to add to my stupor. Once I dreamed—at least I think it must have been a dream—that I was in a dark box, so cramped that my bones ached, and that far away above me were little holes through which the light came in luminous fan-like rays that glowed against the black."

"I'm inclined to think it was no dream," I put in, recalling the newspaper story I had read in my broker's office, in Wall street. "The probabilities are that you were shipped in that box from Fall River to New York, and a certain influential Chinaman, called Yup Sing, knew all about it."

"It's quite possible," Cameron went on. "I know that it was very difficult to distinguish, in those days, between dreams and realities. Eventually, however, I awoke to find myself on the Glamorganshire, quartered with the men in the forecastle, a beard well grown and my clothes the coarsest sort of mariner's outfit. For a while I was far too ill for labor. The reaction from the drugs which had been administered caused me the keenest suffering. But, gradually, I came about, and was set to work with paint pot and brush. The humanity shown me at this time was surprising. I couldn't comprehend it. But I realized eventually that my strength was being fostered for future torment."

"Why didn't you explain, dear, to the captain?" Evelyn asked, with one of those bursts of naivette that contrasted so charmingly with her usually abounding good judgment.

Cameron smiled. "I couldn't get near the captain, my child," he returned, indulgently. "It wasn't because I didn't try. The officers ridiculed my assertions as pipe dreams, and when, at each port, I pleaded to be allowed to communicate with our consul, I was only kept under stricter guard."

And so his story continued, interrupted at intervals by questions from one or another of us, until we had the whole wretched tale of cruelty, including the final chapter which preceded the rescue.

When he learned that every stoker and trimmer, save himself, had been ordered on deck, still hoping against hope that the outside world had at length been moved to intercession in his behalf, he demanded to be allowed to go with the rest. And when his demand was refused he rebelled, fighting his way to liberty with an iron bar from a cinder-tub, which he had purposely concealed for such emergency.

I have no inclination to test patience by detailing all the events and recording all the dialogue of that happy day. Much that happened and much that was said I must leave to the imagination of those that read. But I cannot refrain from the statement that Cameron's meeting and reconciliation with his old friend Dr. Addison was one of the brightest spots in a delectable constellation. The meeting between Evelyn and her uncle was an episode, too, to touch the sensibility of the most apathetic. And if there had lingered a single doubt as to the wisdom or expediency of accepting their companionship on my expedition of rescue it must have been dispelled by the emotional thrill which these scene provoked.

Our homeward voyage, which all of us were anxious should not be delayed, was by way of Naples. Hartley, who appeared to be able to go and come as he pleased, accompanied us that far, and our farewells to him, on the deck of the Koenig Albert, were combined with a fervor of gratitude that exhausted our powers of expression.

Evelyn begged me to be permitted to kiss him good-bye, but there I was forced to draw the line. Her caresses in my own direction had not, up to that moment, been so lavish that I felt I could spare any of them, even for this young Englishman, notwithstanding my abundant appreciation of the inestimable service he had rendered, and that was precisely what I told her, when on the first evening out, she had demanded to know my reasons for refusal.

"You're a very selfish man," she retorted, with a pout. "And I'm not at all sure, now, that I shall ever kiss you again. Besides—" And there she stopped.

We had reached the after end of the deck in our post-dinner promenade, and had paused there, leaning on the rail, to watch the phosphorescent gleam and glitter among the turbulent white wake-waters. Cameron and Dr. Addison were talking over their cigars in steamer chairs amidships, and the girl and I were alone together for the first time since her uncle's restoration.

"Besides?" I repeated, questioningly.

The big blue eyes she turned to me were never more roguish.

"Besides," she said, low-voiced and with a just perceptible quiver, "until you keep your promise, I don't see that you have any right to dictate to me."

I knew very well what she meant. Ever since Cameron had come running backward around that deck-house corner—I think even at the minute I recognized his naked, smut-covered shoulders—I had had that promise in mind, and had longed for the moment of its fulfilment. But till now not even the briefest opportunity had offered. Nevertheless, her present mood was too entirely winsomely lovable to be neglected, and the impulse to prolong it by teasing too strong for resistance.

"Keep my promise?" I queried, mingling with assumed perplexity a certain suggestion of injury. "Have I ever failed you in anything?"

She turned away now, silently, and the eclipse of the eyes I loved left me suddenly repentant; still I persisted.

"Have I ever failed you?" I asked again.

Quickly her gaze came back, and her eyes had taken something of the cold, snapping fire of the phosphorus.

"Since you don't remember," she said, "it's of no consequence. Only you were so sure that you couldn't forget."

"Give me a hint," I begged, still cruel. "When did I promise?"

"I couldn't be so unmaidenly," was her retort, looking away again.

"Was it before we came over here, or since?"

"Before," after a pause.

"Long before?"

"Not very."

"Where? At your house?"

"Yes."

"In the library?" I asked, with a glance behind for possible intruders.

She turned quickly and found me laughing.

"Oh, you dear, silly, lovable, delightful child!" I cried; and the echo of my words was carried far astern, as my arms went about her and held her close, and my kisses fell thick and fast on her ripe, tender little mouth.

"What need had I to keep such a promise?" I asked, when in mercy I paused that she might get her breath. "Why should I ask you to tell me that you loved me, when I could read it in letters as long as your glances and as bright as your smile?"

The tailor-made girl is said to be going out of fashion. But the ready-made girl is plenty good enough.

Men are just as sympathetic as women but they haven't the knack of showing it.

in so deciding, that none but the saintly copies of their Lord, could be members of the elect Church and joint-heirs with Him in His Kingdom.

"True and righteous are Thy Ways, Lord God Almighty!" "Who shall not come and worship before Thee, when Thy righteous acts are made manifest?" Truly it is written of this great King of glory, Head and Members, Bridegroom and Bride, "Unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God."

Although our Lord did not pray for the world, He will yet pray for them, and His prayer will be answered. The promise reads, "Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for an inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession" (Psalm ii, 8). Jesus did not make this request on the night of His crucifixion because it was not the Father's time to answer that prayer. Appropriately He waited, and while gathering the "elect" from every nation, people, kindred and tongue, the Scriptures declare that He is seated at the Father's right hand of glory expecting or waiting for the time to come when the Kingdom under the whole heavens shall be delivered to Him by the Father. This will be done at the end of this Gospel Age, when the saintly Body of Christ shall have been completed. Then "He shall take unto himself His great power and reign."

A great time of trouble will follow. The plowshare of sorrow will made ready the hearts of mankind for the great blessings which Messiah will then be ready to bestow, because that will be the due time. St. Paul tells us that Messiah's reign will be a victorious one: "He must reign until He shall have put all enemies under His feet (in full subjection); the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Then, after a thousand years, after having accomplished the purpose of the Father in the uplifting of all the willing and obedient of mankind to earthly perfection the great Prophet, Priest, Mediator and King of Glory will at the end of the thousand years' reign deliver up the Kingdom even to God the Father, that God may be all in all (I. Corinthians xv, 28).

While Satan will be bound at the beginning of Messiah's reign and every form of unrighteousness will be rooted out, nevertheless the raising of mankind up out of sin and degradation to perfection will be a gradual work. As the regenerating influences operate in mankind, they will become more and more alive, less and less dead—until at the end of the Messianic reign Adamic death will be no more; it shall have been fully destroyed by the raising of mankind completely out of it; the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death—Adamic death.

The Second Death will never be destroyed, but will be everlasting. It is not an enemy to God and His righteousness, but a valuable servant to destroy everything wilfully and intelligently out of accord with the Divine Government—righteousness.

All who are seeking to walk in the footsteps of Jesus; all who have taken up their cross to follow Him, may well rejoice in that feature of His prayer which says, I pray for those whom Thou hast given Me, that they may all be one, as Thou, Father, and I are one, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me (John xvii, 20, 21). The oneness of God's people is not represented in the various sects and parties of the present time. It is represented in the fact that all the consecrated followers of the Redeemer are individually united to Him as the Head and united to each other as members of His Body. "The Lord knoweth them that are His." By and by, by the power of the First Resurrection, all these shall be perfected on the spirit plane and constitute the Kingdom for which we pray, "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." As a result of that Kingdom's coming the world will all be brought to the point of believing in Jesus and will all have the opportunity of obtaining through Him the gift of God, eternal life.

Our Lord's solicitude was not merely for the Apostles and earliest members of the Church whom the Father gave Him in the special sense, as His personal companions and helpers in the founding of the Church; he prayed on, saying, Neither pray I for these alone, but for all those also who shall believe on Me through their Word. The Master's words outlined to us the Divine Program. And Jesus himself began to declare the Gospel and brought life and immortality to light. He commissioned His twelve Apostles, St. Paul taking the place of Judas, to speak in His Name and as His special mouthpieces. Whatever they would declare to be binding on earth would be binding in the sight of God in Heaven. Whatever they would loose and declare to be non-essential on earth, we may know would be so by Divine decree (Matthew xvi, 19).

In a word, Jesus, the Apostles and the Prophets alone are to be considered the special guides and standard-bearers for the Church. We are to believe on Him through their word and not through the word of counsels or synods or presbyteries. Each individual of the Church has his personal responsibility. This is in harmony with our Lord's declaration, "My sheep know My Voice and they follow Me; a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from a stranger." It behooves us to-day to hearken back to the words of Jesus as He personally uttered them and as He personally sent them to us through His chosen twelve.

Soon the Master's prayer for His disciples will have fulfillment. They will be one with Him beyond the veil, sharers of His glory and Kingdom. Then will come the time when the world will believe. The knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth and all the binding and stumbing influences of the present will be at an end. The Saviour will not need to pray for the world then, but instead will exercise His power on their behalf, overthrowing evil and uplifting every good principle and all who love righteousness and destroying those who would corrupt the earth.

Reward of Art.

"Those people talked all the time you were playing. They couldn't hear a word of your music."

"That's all right," replied the eminent performer. "My music prevented me from hearing their conversation."

DISCOVER GOLD IN BELGIAN CONGO.

Antwerp, Belgium, Aug. 5.—A gold field of exceptional richness has been discovered in in the southern part of the province of Katanga, in the Belgian Congo, according to despatches received here privately from Elizabethville, the capital of the district. Some of the samples are declared to yield an ounce of gold to the ton.

Montreal Police Two Hours Later, Rounded up Suspects, one with Extra Coat —Victim Indentified Both.

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—To be held up, beaten almost into unconsciousness, and robbed of all of his money and part of his clothing, in broad daylight and within a short disance of his home, was the experience of George Edgecombe, of 143 Wellington street, while returning home from his work Saturday. Although the victim had to be patched up at a hospital after being found lying on the sidewalk by a policeman, he was lucky enough to recover his property, this through the quick work of two constables of the Young street police station, who rounded up two suspects, one of whom was wearing a cap similar to the one which the beaten man says was taken from him. He also identified the hat and coat.

PITY THE MAN "SOT" IN HIS WAYS.

"Preserve us from the man who becomes so "sot" in his ways—that he cannot be told anything," says a certain editor. "And yet he serves a useful purpose in life. His friends can use him to laugh at when the cheerful stories run out."

THE CITY TAX RATE SAME AS LAST YEAR

Council Passes Estimates and Adjourns for Two Months--Civic Holiday Wednesday, August 13 Many By-Laws Passed--Other Business

One of the most important, if not the most important, sessions of the City Council for the year was held last evening, when the estimates for the year were submitted by the Finance Minister of the city, Ald. Panter. Notwithstanding the fact that the expenditures this year are in more ways than one in excess of last year, the Council was able to fix the rate the same as last year, namely 25 15/100 for all purposes. In compliance with a request, the Council fixed Wednesday, the 13th inst., as the civic holiday and the Mayor was requested to issue his proclamation for the same. During the session a number of by-laws were passed and considerable business of more or less importance was transacted. The Council has adjourned until Monday, October 6th. In the absence of Mayor Wills, Ald. Woodley was voted to the chair.

The members present were: Aldermen Panter, Woolley, White, Slater, Robinson, Lee, McFee, Wallbridge and St. Charles.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

On motion the Council went into committee of the whole on communications, etc., Ald. Wallbridge in the chair.

Mr. R. H. Ketcheson addressed the Council, in reference to having the 13th of August proclaimed as a public holiday. Mayor Wills had promised to have that day set apart as a holiday, and the Oddfellows' celebration committee had advertised that it would be a holiday.

Acting Mayor Woodley said the matter would be attended to at the proper time and there was no doubt but that the 13th would be proclaimed as a holiday.

The following accounts were passed:

J. W. Walker	153.24

F. D. Ford	3.00
Stafford Hardware Co.	1.80
Y. & O. Coal Co.	1.60

A communication was read from Messrs. Porter & Carnew in reference to an account of $30 alleged due to Mrs. Geo. Frost, for damages.—Referred to Executive Committee.

A petition was presented asking for an extension of the water service on Burton street.—Referred to the Water Works comittee.

Mr. G. W. French asked permission to tap the drain on Bridge street west at his own expense. The matter was referred to Ald. White and Mr. Henderson, with power to act.

A report was presented, showing that the cost of extending the water works on Great St. James street would be $1047.75 and the revenue only $38 per annum. On motion, no action was taken on the petition.

"A SILLY YARN," SAYS COLONEL HUGHES.

Ottawa, Aug. 4.—"A silly yarn," was the way Col. Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia, who arrived today in Ottawa, characterized a report that Kingston permanent forces were to be removed to Toronto.

"The newspapers fix up our policies for us," continued the colonel, "in such a way that I hardly venture to deny any rumor they publish, but I certainly haven't heard anything the Kingston one yet."

RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS FAIL TO CONCUR IN REQUEST FOR CHANGE OF TRACKS

Following will be found the decision of the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners regarding the reconstruction of the railway tracks at the south end of Front street, including the provision for subways, flood levels, etc. After reviewing the appeal of our citizens through the city government, and the suggestions by Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P., and Mayor J. F. Wills, at Ottawa, the Board, through its chairman, Mr., H. L. Drayton covers the situation in detail as follows:

Under these circumstances, the only question open to the Board is the consideration of the best solution of the various problems in view of the present state of affairs), having regard both to the municipality and the railway company.

The first location of the Campbellford, Lake Ontario & Western Railway crossed the tracks of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway at a point adjacent to Macdonald Street, or the eastern limit of Belleville, and then continued in a westerly direction south of the Canadian Northern and at distances varying from one hundred to two hundred and fifty feet therefrom.

The result of the adoption of this location is to duplicate whatever inconvenience is caused and damage done to the city of Belleville by the Canadian Northern lines. It necessitated two bridges over the Moira river, and created pockets on highways between the two tracks.

The location was not opposed by the City Council, and, after a formal hearing at Ottawa, it was approved on September 19th, 1911, by Order No. 15289.

The officers of the Board desiring, if possible, to confine the railway tracks and operation to as small a space as possible in the city, directed the companies to consider the question of joint operation within the city limits, with the result that Campbell-

TO HUNT FOR ANDREE

Norwegian to Probe Stories Concerning Explorer's Fate

Christian Leden, the young Swedish explorer, who brought back from Northwest Canada in 1911 Eskimo stories which apparently threw additional light on the supposed fate of Professor Andree, will spend another year and a half or two years in exploration of that far northern district. Mr. Leden said he expected to obtain further information regarding Andree, the scientist, who started in a balloon for the North Pole in 1897.

The explorer has a full description of all instruments in Andree's equipment, and will be able to identify any such articles that he may find in the Esquimos' possession. The stories previously told him related to the descent from the sky of a "large bubble" containing two people, thought by the Eskimos to be devils, one of whom was killed by arrows and the other left to his fate when the natives became frightened and fled.

Cement Mushrooms

Among the most uncommon uses to which concrete has been put in Belgium is the making of mushrooms for decorating gardens, and dwarfish figures of gnomes for supporting the garden seats. If the imagination were sufficiently elastic, it might be presumed that the gnomes had pillaged the mushroom garden at night and, to escape detection, had crawled under the seats where they became concrete images.

Strength in the Arms

Equality of strength in both arms occurs almost twice as frequently with women as with men, more men than women being stronger in the right arm than in the left.

A Powerful Magnet

What is described as "the most powerful electro-magnet in the world" is installed in the laboratories of Professor Becquerel, at the Polytechnic School of Paris.

According to a French scientist potassium must be added to the list of radioactive substances.

May Send Brigade To Train in Army

Government Considers Plan to Canadians at English Manoeuvres.

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—Special—An interesting military proposition is at present being urged upon Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, from different parts of Canada, to the effect that Canada should send over in 1914 a Canadian brigade to the English divisional and army manoeuvres. Since the Minister took control of the military affairs of the Dominion there has been greater co-operation with the English authorities in militia matters than ever before, and this scheme has been suggested to him as a forward step in stil further modeling the Canadian militia on the lines of the English soldiers in tactical matters.

Cut in Wages Of C. P. R. Workmen

Reduction of Four to Eight Dollars a Week with no Saturday Work

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—Considerable complaint is being made by the thousand workers at the C. P. R. Angus Shops, who will suffer a reduction in wages of from four to eight dollars a week by the shortening of their working hours from ten to eight, with no Saturday work. This went into force last Friday night.

Although C. P. R. Officials refused to confirm reports of it on Saturday a number of workers in the locomotive shops have testified that a printed notice of the reduction was posted up. Considerable hardships will be caused to the majority of the workmen, who are Englishmen for the most part. A resident of St. Germain street near the Angus Shops, told a press representative that he had been brought out under contract not knowing that a contract for services here made in another country was not binding.

This man has suffered a reduction in his wages, together with a thousand and others, and is powerless to protest, despite his contract.

The working week of 54 hours, which has prevailed at the shops will be cut down to forty hours under the new ruling, a reduction of almost 25 per cent. of the total week's time, and thus of the week's wages.

Although the thousand men affected by the reduction will feel the loss of their earnings very keenly, there is said to be no likelihood of a strike, as the C. P. R. Company has obtained an agreement with the Federated Trades Council that the hours of the whole staff may be reduced at the Company's pleasure.

Subscription Fund For Secretary Bryan

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 5.—Special—It is planned by Democrats of Texas to raise a large fund by popular subscription for the benefit of Secretary of State Bryan. The money will be paid over to him on the contingency that he agrees to abandon the lecture platform and devote his entire time to the duties of the State Department.

The movement was started a few days ago in Orange, Texas, and Democrats in that town have already pledged in writing contributions amounting to more than four thousand dollars to the fund. Subscriptions will be taken in other towns of the State, and John McKinney, cheif promoter of the idea, says he is confident as much as $50,000 or whatever sum Mr. Bryan may need as a supplement to his salary can easily be raised.

New Warden for Kingston Penitentiary

KINGSTON, Aug. 4.—A new warden of the provincial penitentiary is to be shortly appointed, and Dr. A. E. Ross, M. P. P., is at present the one who has selected for the position. Whether Dr. Ross will accept the post is not known, but he is being urged to take it. That he would make a good head of the chief prison of the Dominion there is no doubt.

Lieut.-Col. A. G. Irvine's wish to be retired is to be acceded to by the government. Several years ago Col. Irvine wished to be superannuated, but he was prevailed upon to remain in office. Then when friction arose over the appointment of a successor to Dr. J. M. Platt, Col. Irvine was induced to come down from Stoney Mountain, Manitoba, and assume control at Portsmouth until things quieted down.

Warden Irvine took ill shortly after he assumed office here, and had to secure leave of absence. At present Robert Creighton is acting warden.

Aull will Claim His Young Wife

Young Husband Still in Jail at Cobourg is in Defiant Mood—Father on the Scene.

COBOURG, Aug. 4.—Robert Aull, Jr., of St. Louis, is firmly convinced that his romantic run-away marriage with Miss Doris Reid, a well-known Toronto society girl, was perfectly legal in every particular. Furthermore, he intends to claim his wife when he gets out of his present unfortunate predicament, and is determined to fight against annulment proceedings, which his parents-in-law are said to have threatened to institute. In addition, according to his father, young Aull is passionately fond of his wife, and does not mean to allow her to slip through his fingers without a protest.

Aull received his preliminary hearing on the charge of passing a worthless cheque on R. Diaz Albertini, proprietor of the Arlington, before Magistrate Boggs in the Police Court today, and was committed for trial. He will be tried by his Honor Judge Benson some time this week. In the meantime he is living in state at the local jail under the care of a sympathetic and indulgent sheriff.

Aull arrived in Cobourg on July 16 and registered at the Arlington Hotel, the hostelry patronized by a great many society people. Having known Mrs. E. P. Bell, with whom Miss Reid was staying, in St. Louis, he was soon taken up by the best people. After meeting Miss Reid, Aull became a frequent visitor to the Bell's home, and on July 25 the young couple suddenly decided to get married. License and ring were purchased, and Clarence Doheny, a mutual friend, drove them to the Methodist parsonage in his automobile. After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. John Barfett, a well known and highly respected clergyman, the party started for Port Hope.

Intercepted the Runaway

In the meantime the Bells learned of what had occurred, Daniel Bell mounted his motorcycle, and by taking a short cut managed to intercept the automobile, forcing the elopers to turn back. Later on Mr. and Mrs. Aull boarded the train for Toronto, but Mrs. Bell took the same train and saw to it that the lady went directly home. Aull went to the King Edward Hotel. Before leaving the Arlington the young man tendered a cheque on the Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis, for $99.05 in payment of his bill. This afterwards proved worthless and Mr. Albertini had him arrested in Toronto.

Col. Robert Aull, Sen., who is a prominent citizen of St. Louis, arrived here yesetday morning about two o'clock in response to a telegram from his son: "I am in jail here. Come at once." He immediately held a consultation with F. F. Hall, his son's lawyer, and attempted to see the boy, but was denied admittance to the jail. Col. Aull is a jovial old gentleman of the Kentucky colonel type, and his chief concern seemed to be what sort of a girl his new daughter-in-law is.

"I haven't seen my daughter-in-law yet", he remarked, "but they tell me she's mighty a handsome young lady. What are her people like? Are they wealthy? Undoubtedly the boy has been a regular young fool, but now that he's married I'm quite willing to take his wife home and be a good daddy to her." The Colonel added that he was from Missouri, and had to be shown.

Father is not Worried

Col. Aull said he had lived in St. Louis for many years, and had taken an active part in municipal politics. He was at one time parks commissioner and president of several large organizations, among them the St. Louis Jockey Club and Fair Association, which has since gone out of business. He is an ardent horseman, and was more anxious to talk about the time a horse of his beat the world's champion trotter, than about his son's escapade. He paid little attention to the cheque episode.

He inquired anxiously as to the penalty for his son's offence, and when it was suggested that Canadian judges often allowed first offenders to go on suspended sentence he was greatly relieved. "I believe a short time on an industrial farm would do that boy good," he said "a little hard work is just what he needs to put him on his feet."

Asked if he had met Miss Reid's parents, he stated that he had not, and that if they wished to see him they would have to come and bring their daughter with them. He admitted that, though, the marriage was certainly not one of his choosing, he was prepared to make the best of it if his boy was satisfied and intimated that he would not be a party to an annulment. Asked if he would consider a divorce, Col. Aull replied: "Never. I do not propose to have any divorce scandal in the Aull family. We have had enough publicity already. But, do you know, coming up on the train I met some fine fellows. They were going fishing, and had about a ton of flies, live bait, and some of the finest Scotch whiskey and cigars I ever tasted. They invited me to go along, and I would have done so if I hadn't this thing on my mind. You have some fine, courteous people up here."

Society in Court

When Magistrate Boggs took his place on the bench in the Police Court yesterday, the sombre room presented an unwontedly gay appearance. The trial was the social event of the day, and the court was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the spectators. Men in flannels and brightly gowned women, including members of the smart sets of Toronto and many United States cities, thronged in to see the young man whose courtship, engagement and marriage took place within the space of eight days. Most of them knew him personally.

Young Aull looked fresh and well groomed when he appeared in charge of Chief of Police use. He declined to elect or plead, and the preliminary examination was proceeded with. A son of R. S. Albertini testified that he handed Aull a bill for $74.05. It was to cover this amount that Aull gave him the cheque for $99.05. He wanted the witness to advance the extra $25 in cash, but only $10 had been given him. At this point the defence case was greatly weakened by Albertini's admission that when Aull gave him the cheque he said that if it was no good to communicate with him at 617 Prince Building, St. Louis. This turned out to be his father's address.

Mr. Hall, the young man's counsel, put Albertini through a cross-examination. The witness said he had not deposited the cheque in a Cobourg bank, and had immediately wired the St. Louis Trust Company, absolutely ingnoring the usual methods of banking procedure. His reason for this was that he thought it would be safer.

Magistrate Boggs decided that there was enough evidence to warrant his committing Aull for trial, and he did so.

Both the young man and his father have made a great many friends here. Immediately following the trial a number of prominent society people came forward and shook hands warmly with both. There is a division of the sentiment in some quarters, however, particularly among the Americans, the Southerners believing implicity in his innocence, and the Northerners characterizing him as a "young four-flusher."

Young Aull is Popular

The young bridegroom has won the hearts of all the police officials and most of the townspeople. He is a tall, fair-haired young man, smartly dressed and undoubtedly well educated. He has apparently always been accustomed to plenty of money, never having settled down to business of any description. He is accorded many privileges at the jail. When seen by a reporter of The Mail and Empire he was enjoying a magazine and a cigarette after having disposed of a substantial dinner. While he chatted freely on any other subject he refused utterly to discuss his marriage or future developments of the case. "I will make a statement when I get out of this", was all he would say.

Miss Reid's parents have had a private detective here investigating the circumstances of the marriage. According to the marriage license, which was issued with all the usual legal formalities, Miss Reid is 15 years old. She is the daughter of Mr George P. Reid, former general manager of the Standard and United Empire Banks.

Though Colonel Aull is treating the matter rather lightly, he realizes the seriousness of his son's position, and feels it very keenly. "I'm afraid it will bring discredit on the name of Aull", he said, "a thing that has never happened before."

Men are just as sympathetic as women but they haven't the knack of showing it.

HOME WEEK AT HAMILTON

The city of Hamilton will be in gala attire next week when the big centennial celebration and the old home week will be held. The Hamilton old boys from all parts of the continent will be back for the week's reunion, and it promises to be far greater than the celebration held in the Ambitious City ten years ago. Judging by the advance program there will not be a dull moment during the week and the fun will start with the arrival of the Detroit old boys, accompanied by a band next Sunday. Bands from all parts will be there and there promises to be music on every corner during all hours of day and night. The streets have been given over to the big carnival shows of Patrick and Ferrari and the city has already assumed holiday attire in the matter of decorations. A big industrial exhibition will be held in the armories as well as an art exhibition, in which pictures of some of the old haunts will be on view as well as the work of Hamilton artists. An aviation exhibition will be given over the city each day and the city will be one blaze of electricity at night as neither the power companies nor the merchants have been saving in the matter of electrical decorations. Special single fare rates will be given on all railroads and a visit to Hamilton will be worth the while.

ford, Lake Ontario & Western Railway Company consented to abandon its approved location and to run over the right of way of the Canadian Northern on a track of its own constructed on the said right of way.

The present application of the Campbellford, Lake Ontario & Western Railway Company is for the approval of a plan showing the road practically on the right of way of the Canadian Northern within the city limits.

To my mind, there is no question whatever as to the advisability of approving of this location in the interests of the city of Belleville, as well as in the interests of traffic conditions generally.

Representations were made by the city that flooding has been caused by the construction of the Canadian Northern bridge. Ordinarily speaking, one would suppose that the more piers you have in the river the less chance there is for the water to get away; but it seems quite clear that there were floods in the same locality long before the construction of the Canadian Northern. The engineers of the Board report that, in their opinion, the piers of the Canadian Northern have had nothing to do with the floods in question, which are said to be entirely similar in character to those that previously took place; and I understand that representations are now being made by the city to the proper department for the construction of works which will narrow the river, increase the facility of the flow, and, in the opinion of the engineers, largely do away with the flood difficulties. In any event, the construction of the works of the Campbellford, Lake Ontario & Western Railway Company, which consists merely of the lengthening of the piers with the result that no greater surface of pier construction is exposed to the stream, cannot affect the situation one way or the other.

A plan was put in, on behalf of the city, showing the reconstruction of the Canadian Northern tracks from a point approximately fifteen hundred feet east of Church street to a point thirty-five hundred feet west of James street. The plan calls for the raising of the present bridge five feet, which would result in raising the tracks five feet on Front street, and four feet above the present grade of the railway on Pinnacle street, where the tracks are already two feet above the level of the street. This plan was prepared and presented with a view to obtaining a twelve-foot subway on Front street, and providing subways of the same depth on James and Front streets. The citys engineer estimated the cost of the work at $22,800.00. This estimate was carefully checked by the chief engineer of the Board, and an independent estimate was made by him, with the result that, in his opinion, the cost of the proposed raising of the railway bridge and the other changes necessitated thereby would be $40,000.00, instead of $22,800.00.

Pinnacle street is traversed by a Grand Trunk shunting track, which provides an important and apparently necessary facility for industries located on its line, and the water front south of the right of way of the Canadian Northern Railway.

As the matter now stands, a slight further raising of the Grand Trunk is necessary, and the Board has been advised by the representatives of the city of Belleville that the company could operate the said track if it were lifted four feet above its present grade, and would make no objection to the adoption of the city's plan.

On taking the matter up with the Grand Trunk, we find it opposed to the change, on the ground that the lift required by the city's plan would result in placing the Grand Trunk track five feet eight inches above the street level, involve heavy abuttal damages, and practically destroy the use of the track, adding that this line on Pinnacle street, is a very important and useful piece of property, providing the company's only means of access to certain important industries and to the docks at the mouth of the river; and that it will be of more importance in the near future, when the new dock to be constructed by the Dominion Government is completed.

Mr. Biggar, the company's general counsel, states that he has a thorough knowledge of the situation, and has no hesitation in saying that if the track were raised to the extent proposed, not only would it be useless for the purposes to which it is now largely devoted, but the damages to adjoining property would be very great indeed; and the Board's chief engineer also reports that the raising of the Grand Trunk track as contemplated would result in an unworkable condition, so far as the spur and adjacent team delivery track are concerned.

The adoption of the city's plan would also very largely call for a reconstruction of the Canadian Northern Railway company's layout in Belleville, to which the city consented, and, under the circumstances, would work an injustice to that company.

In any event, I do not think there is a necessity for a subway at James street. There is no traffic to warrant it.

I was of the view, however, that a subway should be ordered near Front street, as recommended by the Board's engineer. This recommendation of the engineer was based on the supposition that high water, as shown on the plan submitted, was flood water and not the high water which occurs in the spring and early summer—lasting perhaps three or four months—but merely the height of the temporary flood which would last for a varying period of from two to four weeks.

On this assumption, the engineer was of the opinion that the floor plan of the Canadian Northern railway bridge could be reconstructed so as to afford additional headroom, and that a subway could be built two feet deeper than the present subway near Front street; but, on receiving further information, as the result of representations made by the city of Belleville on the question of water levels, he has withdrawn his recommendation, and I think he is right in doing so. The height of the subway, at best, would be only eleven feet; and if the floor were covered with two feet of water for a period of three or four months in the year, it would be of very little use to anybody.

The engineer's report is as follows:

"In my report of June 16th, I stated that a subway of about 11 feet in height could be had. I was guided by the profile submitted by Engineer Evans for the city of Belleville, on which he marked high water level. I took that as the highest water at flood level and figured that it would be dry at ordinary low water level as shown on his profile; but I find that what he marked as high water is the ordinary summer level of the Bay of Quinte; and, that being so, a subway 11 feet deep would be flooded the year around. Hence, I think a subway at this point is out of the question."

Under the circumstances, I am reluctantly forced to the conclusion that no subway can be constructed, and that the level crossings must remain.

In arriving at this conclusion, I am not influenced wholly by the matter of cost. Over and above this and the fact that the city, rightly or wrongly, consented to the present layout, it is quite clear that, on the one hand, the subway asked for, if constructed at the best obtainable level, would be of comparatively little use—certainly not so useful as a well maintained and properly protected level crossing; and, on the other hand, the adoption of a new railway elevation would likely result in injury to some of the industries now located on the Grand Trunk line, and would disorganize the traffic of the Canadian Northern during the period of reconstruction.

H. L. DRAYTON, Chairman

I agree,

J. McLEAN.

There is no reason why the city should not be allowed to carry its water main across the tracks at the foot of Mary street. The city engineer can take up the exact location with the Board's engineer and the work done under the supervision of the engineering department of this Board.

A Lady Finds Help From Simple Foods

Civilization brings blessings and also responsibilities.

The more highly organized we become the more need there is for regularity and natural simplicity in the food we eat.

The laws of body nutrition should be carefully obeyed, and the finer more highly developed brain and nervous system not hampered by a complicated, unwholesome dietary.

A lady of high nervous tension says:

"For fifteen years I was a sufferer from dyspepia. I confess that an ilm properly regulated diet was the chief cause of my suffering. Finally nothing that I ate seemed to agree with my stomach, and life, at times did not seem worth living.

"I began to take a pessimistc view of everything and see life through dark blue glass, so to speak. My head became affected with a heavy creeping sensation and I feared paralysis.

"Palpitation of the heart caused me to fear that I might die suddenly. Two years ago, hearing Grape Nuts so highly spoken of by some estimable friends of mine, I determined to try it.

"The change in my condition was little less than miraculous. In a short time the palpitation, bad feeling in head and body began to disappear and the improvement has continued until at the present time I fine myself in better health than I have ever enjoyed.

"My weight has increased 20lbs. in the last year and life looks bright and sunny to me as it did when I was a child."

"There's a Reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter. A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

HALF BILLION U.S. CAPITAL TARIFF BRINGS TO CANADA

According to an estimate of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce the amount of American capital now invested in Canada aggregates the enormous total of half a billion dollars. Reciprocity with the United States as provided in the Taft-Fielding pact would have stopped the flow of capital from the United States to Canada. Many millions of the above total would have been lost to Canada with a corresponding loss in the employment of Canadian labor.

There has been a remarkable increase in American investments throughout the Dominion within the past few years. According to figures collected for the five years' period, 1905-9, inclusive of the amount of American investments was $279,075,000. In May, 1911, it was estimated that these investments were approximately $417,143,221. Since then, according to the belief of officers of the Government who have made a study of the subject, there has been an additional investment in the neighborhood of $80,000,000.

Recent reports on the subject from American consuls and other sources of information in Canada have not been collated, but officials are satisfied the estimate of half a billion dollars of capital invested is not far out of the way. While many of the investments are in lumber, mines, farms and natural resources of the Dominion, a very large amount of American capital has been sent into Canada in recent years to establish branches of industries already in operation in the United States or to develop new lines of manufacture.

Interesting details of American investments in Canada are given in a statement prepared by F. W. Field, sub-agent of the British Board of Trade at Toronto in 1911. His approximate total at that time was $417,143,321. He had previously estimated that the American capital invested in Canada was $297,000,000, and the higher amount represents a reconsideration of that estimate based on more complete information. ifflx3 oay eawtiirhss 7btatesnited. :vb-S u etaoin shr cmf vb b'zfifi ffl Sub-Agent Field gave these detailed estimates of American investments:

209 companies with an average capital of $600,000	$125,400,000
Investments in British Columbia mills and timber	65,000,000
Investments in British Columbia mines	60,000,000
Land deals in prairie provinces	25,000,000
Investments in lumber and mines in the prairie provinces	10,000,000
Packing plants	6,000,000
Agricultural implement distributing houses	8,575,000
Land deals in British Columbia	8,500,000
Municipal bonds, sold privately	27,000,000
Investments in Canada of U. S. insurance companies	43,293,221
Miscellaneous industrial investments	10,000,000
Purchase of city and town property	15,525,000
Investments in the Maritime provinces	12,850,000

That this capital has come to Canada because of the Canadian tariff there is ample proof, if proof were needed. Such proof can be found in the United States consular reports. A United States official, writing from Owen Sound, Ont., put it this way:

"Prior to the present protective policy of Canada, American firms made the goods at home and shipped their finished product here. In order to hold this business, it became necessary to establish American annexes here and manufacture the articles which they desire to sell to Canadians in Canada."

Speaking about good roads, this is the way an automobile tourist from Cleveland, Ohio, to Belleville, compares American and Canadian roads: From Cleveland to Niagara Falls, 200 miles, time 10 hours; from Hamilton, Ont., to Toronto, 40 miles, time 6 hours; from Toronto to Belleville, 113 miles, time 9 hours. He says the Canadian roads are the worst he ever travelled over. Who is to blame?

Grain Growers' Guide: "We admire Colonel Hughes for the stand he has taken on the liquor question in the volunteer forces and also in the permanent forces and we wish him every success in such work. There is no more reason why the Government should keep a bar room for the benefit of the militia than that the Government should keep a bar room for the benefit of the general public." This is refreshing, coming from a radical Liberal paper.

Peterborough Examiner: "In all the discussion over the outcome of the North Grey bye-election, one important, if vicious, factor, in influencing the outcome has been very much neglected. This factor is the influence of local issues being made the subject of corrupt tender of favors in consideration of political support of the government." To put it briefly, the Liberal party did not propose to swallow the Rowell temperance plank, and bolted. Government patronage did not enter into the contest.

After all the preparation for the home-coming of the Guelph old boys, the Mercury does not appear to be satisfied with the results. Listen: "The old boys, for whose special benefit the function was supposed to have been held, figured not at all in the proceedings. They will probably carry away recollections of decorations and noise, but it is doubtful if anything more permanent has been instilled into their memories." After all, Belleville's unpretentious, yet cheery greeting to her old boys, was the better way. There was more feeling to it.

WOMAN AND DRESS

Miss Ida M. Tarbell, the noted American investigator and writer says that women can lower the cost of living by changing their attitude towards dress. Her point of view is that men have simplified their dressing by discarding old-time frills and linen, while women cling to elaborate adornments.

Women, of course, could live more cheaply if they dressed more plainly. In fact, if they did not dress at all—we mean if they did not buy any clothes—the cheapness would be quite notable. We do not advocate such methods of reducing the cost of living. Women and girls are nice things. We like to see them looking pretty. Nice clothes help. Beauty unadorned is all nonsense in this climate.

Miss Tarbell is a very clever woman, but she appears to be a bachelor girl. What's the matter? Has she been reducing the cost of living by dressing like a frump? We don't believe women were made to look like fence-posts, even where they do they have to earn their own living. There is such a thing as waste, but there is also such a thing as taste, and we are not going to back up Miss Tarbell or anybody else who lends countenance to cutmudgeons who object to seeing a chic dress or a love of a hat unless somebody else pays for it.

NEWSPAPER MAN GOES NORTH

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 5.—The territory north of the Arctic circle will be invaded this year by Francis L. Geyer, newspaperman, scientist, and traveler, who is in Edmonton outfitting for an expedition to Esquimaux land, where he plans to spend two years. Accompanied by a guide he will stop in the Great Bear Lake district to study the earth formations in the hope that it will lead to the solution of several scientific problems. Geyer is a graduate of the University of Illinois, and claims to have visited every state in the Union and all the provinces in Canada. He has explored the wilds of Central Africa, the interior of South America and the various islands in the South Pacific ocean. On the present trip he expects to cover more than 15,000 miles, chiefly in the unexplored north country. He will report his discoveries to the scientific societies in the United States and Canada and possibly England and France.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Bob Roos Responsible for the Rescue—Both Girls Unconscious

Elsie Paul and Winnie Hollis had a thrilling experience while bathing at the west beach Friday afternoon, and narrowly escaped being drowned. The girls were unable to swim and had passed over the first sand bar, suddenly going beyond their depth. The girls were opposite the pavilion but their serious predicament was not noticed by the young men on the pier.

Bob Roos of the C. P. R. happened down at the beach, and noticed the girls floating in the water, face downwards. He readily understood that something was wrong and rushed to their assistance. Upon reaching the spot the water was considerably over Bob's head and he was weighed down by his heavy boots and and clothing, trousers in the water, and waded. He managed to remove his boots and back with the girls. Mr. Burney Skitch had just reached the beach at this stage and he hustled out, wading over his shoulders, and assisted Mr. Roos in bringing the girls the girls to shore. Charles Cancilla, the hero of many rescues, also assisted. Both girls were unconscious and Mr. Roos and Mr. Skitch worked diligently for nearly fifteen minutes before the girls showed the least signs of life. Their heroic work is very commendable and should be recognized by the Humane Society.

The young girls felt the effects of their experience for some time, but were able to go to their homes about an hour later.—Port Hope Guide.

"MY STOMACH IS FINE

Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Merkhuger, Waterloo, Ont., enthusiastically recommends Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach", she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.

SLIT SKIRTS NAUGHTY

Hobble-Made Woman Looks Like Hot Tamales

Denver, Aug. 4.—He looked surreptitiously around and said:

"I rather like to watch them."

Dr. Henry L. McCluskey, austere chaperona of the Boston Christian Endeavor delegation, which left the Albany Hotel for Chicago, declared that a rainy day and slit skirts couldn't harm his moral vision.

"No, sir; I beleve in comfort and ease," he said. "I think the hobble was immortal, because it was unnatural, uncomfortable and makes woman look like one of the hot tamales that are so popular out this way—tied up at both ends."

Dr. McCluskey and a party of nine women and six men stayed at the Albany Hotel on their way from the National Christian Endeavor Convention, which was held July 9 to 14, at Los Angeles.

Mrs. McCluskey was along, but not present at her husband's dissertation on feminine apparel and its evolutions. Dr. McCluskey is Treasurer of the Massachusetts Christian Endeavor Union.

"I never saw a split skirt until I reached Denver," he said. "I don't know what my verdict would be on the diaphanous skirt. When I get to Chicago I will have to look at one."

MANY FOXES TRAPPED

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 5.—Seven hundred and fifty-one live foxes, valued at more than $600,000, have been trapped or dug out of their nests in the fur districts north of Edmonton since the beginning of the season. The highest price paid for a pair of black foxes is $20,000. The animals were bought by C. J. Fleming of St. John, N. B., from a half breed Indian trapper at Lac la Brice. T. J. McMann of Edmonon, recently sold 51 fox whelps, all colors, for $26,000 to James A. Kane of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has fox farms in New York and Pennsylvania. The exportation of live foxes has become so active in northern Alberta that Benjamin Lawton, chief guardian, has been requested by provinicial government to recommend a closed season, the same as there is for other fur-bearing animals. This new law would prohibit the capture of foxes and whelps during the breeding season.

DOESN'T WANT CANADIAN WHEAT

How little the American market really means to Canada from the sandpoint of the wheat grower is shown in the United States crop reports for this year. These indicate that the wheat yield will again be over 700,000,000 bushels, or close to the tremendous yield of 740,000,000 bushels obtained last year. In the calendar year of 1912 the exports of wheat from the United States were 60,000,000 bushels, compared with 32,000,000 bushels in 1911. But exports for 1912 would include only a part of the exportable surplus of the 1912 crop, domestic needs having to be supplied after the harvesting, and a large part of the surplus being held over for export this year.

These figures mean that the United States this year will have an enormous quantity of wheat for export. This wheat must be sold in the world's market in competition with Canadian export wheat. The United States is a great rival of Canada as a wheat exporting nation. Yet the farmers of Canada were told that the market of ninety millions would furnish them with a demand for their surplus wheat and would mean money in their pockets. While that statement was being made the United States was actually exporting wheat to Canada.

REMARKABLE FLIGHT

Aviator Flew High to Avoid Strong Head Wind

A new flying record was made by the French aviator Gilbert. In less than eight and a half hours he flew from the north of France to Vittoria, in Spain, a distance of 512 miles, without once alighting. From Paris to Bordeaux, a distance of three hundred miles, he travelled at an average speed of 74 miles an hour, and during the latter part of his journey he flew at an altitude of 10,000 feet in an endeavor to avoid a strong contrary wind. After covering in under eight and a half hours what it takes an express train fifteen hours to accomplish, he was so little fatigued, that after a two hours' rest he resumed his flight and added 155 miles to his record—making 688 miles in less than eleven hours.

STOLEN RELIC WORTH A FORTUNE

Sacred Persian "Mihrab" Now in Possession of London Collector—Cost a Human Life

Stolen almost tile by tile from the Mosque of the Market Place at Kashan, the greater part of a Persian Mihrab, to which every Mohammedan worshipper makes obeisance, has found a resting place in London.

Rectangular in shape, measuring 9 feet 4 inches by 6 feet, the antique consists principally of silver and gold lustre tiles for which the Persians were famous, and was built into the wall of the mosque, pointing directly towards Mecca.

The bulk of the Mihrab is in the hands of Mr. John Richard Preece, who was formerly Consul-General at Ispaham.

Mr. B. W. Stainton, who was associated with Mr. Preece in forming his collection, says that in 1879 this Mihrab was intact, but on inspecting it again a piece had disappeared. Portions continued to disappear mysteriously despite the presence of guards, until it was nearly all gone. Probably the watchmen were in league with the robbers. One special guard was killed mysteriously at his post, and three others were drugged.

"In the early eighties a servant in the Government employ offered Mr. Preece a beautiful tile, but refused to divulge the source from which it was obtained and how. Through a period of nearly twenty years similar relics were brought to him and purchased. Then one day, being in the mosque at Kashan, he discovered that his pieces had been picked from the wall, and the Mihrab so depleted that the authorities were induced to sell the remnants to him."

There are parts missing, and the collectors holding them refuse to sell, so rare and beautiful is the work. The Mihrab comprises over ninety pieces, and the value placed upon it is from $75,000 to $100,000. The design is of a door within a door, and inscriptions in blue from the Koran are in three languages—Kufic, Karmati, and Naskhy. It was executed in the thirteenth century by one Hassan, and the art is not practised now amongst the Persians.

UNCANNY REMEDIES

Days When Viper Broth and Spider Pills Were in the Pharmacopœa

Quaint medical remedies which were popular in bygone days were described at the City of London School by Dr. F. M. Sandwith, Gresham Professor of Physic, in a lecture on "Drugs Old and New."

After pointing out that herbs supplied the first drugs, the lecturer described how animal products were accepted as medicines, some even remaining in the first English pharmacopœa published in 1618. Tiger's flesh and new-born puppies were among the old remedies. One book recommended a live spider to be rolled in butter and formed into a pill and then swallowed, as an antidote to jaundice. Vipers were held in high esteem, and a broth made from them was said to strengthen the sight. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries powdered mummies were prescribed.

In some of the older herbal works a striking fact was the constant recommendation of remedies for bruises, which gave some idea of the manners of the day. John Gerrard, who was chief gardener of Lord Burleigh's garden in the Strand, and had a garden of his own in Holborn, published a book in 1597 which recommended "Solomon's seal" for taking away in one night the blackness of bruises caused by falls "or woman's wilfulness in tumbling upon their hasty husbands' fists, or such like!"

Peer Sells Big Estate

Lord Joicey's Gregynog estate, Montgomeryshire, which comprises 16,000 acres, worth $60,000 a year net, was privately sold for $1,350,000. The timber alone is valued at $240,000. This was the property on which Lord Sudeley spent a large fortune. Lord Joicey also expended a very large sum upon the place after he acquired it. As a result it is one of the model estates in the kingdom, the 230 farms which it includes all being in excellent order. Although the property was disposed of, the tenants still have an opportunity of acquiring their holdings.

Famous Agitation Recalled

A famous incident of the long conflict between Berwick fishermen and Tweed bailiffs is recalled by the death of Mr. William Patterson, Berwick, who was one of two men who were wounded by a shot fired from a Government gunboat. Deceased was one of the crew of a fishing boat which, on ignoring the gunboat's order to lie to, was fired at, and Patterson was wounded.

May a man who has been selfish all his life has nohting to show at the final round-up except the ill will of his neighbors.

SPORTING NEWS

BASEBALL.

BROOKLYN MAY BE FINED.

Toronto, Aug. 4.—President Ebbets of the Brooklyn National League Club may be fined $500 by the National Commission for selling Pitcher Maurice Kent to the Toronto Club, of the International League, without first asking for waivers. Kent was claimed by Pittsburg, and reported to that club on the order of President Lynch. The National Commission is to call upon President Ebbets for an explanation.

The supposition is that Kent pitched a game for Toronto when he was here, but such was not the case. The Toronto Club bought Kent in the regular manner, and would have used him had he been eligible, but did not do so when the Pittsburg Club refused to waive. Kent was in Toronto for over a week, but sat on the bench all the time, even though the Leafs were hard up for pitchers.

LEAFS EXERCISE OPTION ON FIVE PLAYERS.

Toronto, Aug. 4.—The Toronto club has exercised its option on five young ball players now with clubs in leagues of a lesser classification than the International. The men are Pitcher Herbert of the Scranton Club of the New York State League, who is claimed by Milwaukee and whose case will doubtless be carried to the National Commission; Infielder Isaacs of the Scranton Club; Catcher Trout of the Peterborough Club of the Canadian League; Pitcher Kirley of the Guelph Canadian Leaguers; Pitcher Goulait, of the Wilkesbarre Club of the New York State League, and Outfielder Jones of the Scranton Club. These players were released on option to the respective clubs with which they are now playing. The options expire on the 15th instant, but the men will not report to Toronto until the close of the season in the New York State and Canadian Leagues.

JACKSON PASSES COBB FOR BATTING HONORS

Chicago, Aug. 4.—The pace set by Joe Jackson proved too swift for Ty. Cobb this week, and the Detroit slugger fell behind in the American League batting averages. Jackson pounded his percentage up to .408, but Cobb dropped to .396. The Cleveland man has played in 93 games, while Cobb has been in only 69. Dan Murphy, Philadelphia, is third in the American League with .378. Then comes Speaker, Boston with .351; Collins Philadelphia, .348; McInnes, Philadelphia, .333; Gandil, Washington, 332, and Lajoie, Cleveland, who ranks tenth with .331.

Charles McDonald, Boston, continues to be the real leader in the National, with .371, though Earl Yingling, Brooklyn, for 23 games, is hitting .393; R. Miller, Philadelphia, is fourth with .359, and Daubert, Brooklyn, fifth, with .319.

Pitching records to date show Wagner of Brooklyn the only undefeated hurler in the National League, with two games to his credit, though he has taken part in eleven. Humphries, Chicago, and Demaree, New York, are tied with nine wins and two defeats. Mathewson, New York, is next, with eighteen victories and five defeats, while Marquard, New York, is fifth, with fourteen wins and five defeats.

Boehling of Washington, who suffered his first defeat the other, day is ahead among the American League pitchers with eleven victories and one defeat up to the time of closing the unofficial averages for the week. His team mate, Walter Johnson, ranks next with twenty-three games won and five lost. Then comes Bender, Philadelphia, with sixteen won and five lost; Plank, Philadelphia, with fifteen and five, and Brown, Philadelphia, with thirteen and six.

SETS CASH ABOVE FAME.

Pittsburg, Aug. 4.—Honus Wagner, famed exponent of baseball, now refuses to be placed in the position of having his uniform "accepted" by the Carnegie Museum, as though it were something that had to be offered. When asked by his friend whether he would present his baseball suit to the museum, after he is through with it, he said:

"Well, if the Carnegie museum wants to pay me $15 for my suit, I guess they can have it. I have only two suits; one is in the laundry, while I am playing in the other one, and they are worth $15 apiece. I haven't thought about donating any uniform to the museum, so if they want one they'll have to come across with the fifteen bucks."

TOM WOULD BE AN UMP.

New York, Aug. 4.—Tom Hughes, aged and crafty veteran of many a diamond battle, who is a member of the Washington Club's pitching staff, has an ambition. Furthermore, it is a most worthy ambition and deserves support, Realizing that he is about at the end of the string as a big league twirler. Tomasee fain would be an Umpire.

"I'm about done as a pitcher," says Tomasso, "though I've got as much stuff now as half the pitchers in the American League. Now I'd like to be an umpire. I've been pitching ball for fourteen years, and surely in that time I've learned about all there is to know of the national pastime. If I get through this year I'm going to ask Ban Johnson for a chance to be an umpire."

In 1902 Bill Dineen and Tom Hughes were mates on the world's champion Boston Americans, piloted down the road to fame by Jimmy Collins. Dineen went to pieces earlier than Hughes, and Jimmy McAleer obtained a chance for him to show his skill as an umpire. Dineen has made good.

Hughes possesses what most of the umpires in this league today lack. He has sufficient height to look over the backstop's head and see the plate. Hughes is fast enough on his feet to get over plays on bases, too. That he has sufficient nerve to stand the gaff is known to baseball fans all over the country.

"I've watched umpires of all kinds for years," continues Hughes, "and I believe that the requirements are these: Knowledge of baseball, eyesight, common sense, and nerve."

LINERS.

"Amby" McConnell has been doing more hitting and more timely hitting than any man on the team during the past week.

The Canadian League season closes on Labor Day. It's anybody's pennant. The race is quite the best since the organization of the league.

If the Kelleys can maintain their present clip when they embark on a road trip, commencing today, they will come home pretty close to the front division. They have won five out of their last six games.

It is doubtful if there are two left-handers in the league with as good control as Lush and Hearne of the Leafs. Lush averaged only one and a half walks to the game last season, and Hearne has done as well this season.

The presence of Kroy and Pick with their speed, makes the Leafs look like a fifty per cent. faster team. It is not the policy of the manager to break up a winning combination, and Pick will probably be left at third base, although Bradley's suspension expired yesterday.

President McCaffery of the Toronto Club was in Guelph on Saturday watching the work of Pitcher Kirley against London. Kirley is the property of the Toronto club, having been signed while pitching semi pro. ball around New York. He beat the Cockneys 12 to 5 and pulled them out of first place in the standing.

JOE BOEHLING

Winning 10 games in a row is some considerable performance in a major league.

Earlier this season Fred Falkenberg won 10 games for the Naps, and was lauded to the skies as the "come back marvel." The work of the human string was splendid but, then Falkenberg was a veteran of many big league battles, as in deed are 96 per cent of the men who accumulate a long list of wins.

A little while ago the fans were gossiping about the wonderful performance of Joe Boehling, the left-handed star of the Washington crew. Boehlins work was so sensational that it threatened to become a scandal.

In May Clarke Griffith was bemoaning the fact that he did not have a first class left hander to balance his team, meanwhile Boehling was sitting on the bench with his ear to the ground.

Boehling was playing corner lot ball in Richmond last year, when he was discovered by Bill Peet a Washington baseball scribe.

Peet induced Griffith to sign Boehling, and later looking the lad over, Griff sent him to Chattanooga, where he played for a short time. Chattanooga shipped Boehling to Worcester, Mass., club, and there the boy struck his gait, winning 14 out of 22 games and batting .315.

Late in the fall Griffith recalled Boehling. Why he didn't start the kid the full route this last spring is a mystery.

THE RING

CHARLIE WHITE AFTER JOE RIVERS.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Ever since the afternoon that Joe Rivers hammered Jack White into unconsciousness in the Vernon arena in twelve rounds, Charlie White has been on his trail, eager to avenge the defeat of his brother. And now Charlie's chance has come. Abe Pollock, for years a referee in this city, now camping in Denver, has wired Nate Lewis, White's manager, offering him a ten-round match in the Colorado city with the Mexican, and Lewis lost no time in accepting. August 11 is the date set for the meeting, which is during conclave week in Denver, a time when some 100,000 visitors are expected there.

"The wire calls for White to meet either Joe Rivers or Tommy Murphy, but Pollock says he is sure Rivers will be White's opponent. Besides the desire to avenge his brother's defeat, Charlie wants to get back into Western territory and show that he is worthy of consideration when it comes to handing out matches that border on the championship.

White battled in Los Angeles some time ago against Danny Webster and his showing was poor. Since then he has been sidetracked by Tom McCarey and he wants to demonstrate that he is being held back from a chance to win the title.

New Orleans and Atlanta are willing to put White on against the best obtainable and offers are coming thick and fast to Lewis, but he wants White to battle in the west. New Orleans saw Joe Rivers, Ad Wolgast and Willie Ritchie battle, as well as White, and although Britton defeated him they are still firm in the belief that pound for pound he is the greatest battler in the ring.

White declares that he will win from Rivers and that that match will mean the first real step toward the championship.

Charlie and Rivers should make a good match, especially over the ten-round route, and if no obstacles are placed in the way of the mill, the hall, which holds 12,000, should be well filled. White will start west as soon as forfeits are posted.

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

Warren Talcott took a last look at the long counting room that had once been his, but was so no longer. Some men were erasing the sign, "Talcott & Co., Stocks and Bonds," from the glittering plate glass windows. He passed the elevator starter, who halted him by gently catching his arm.

"I've heard of it, Mr. Talcott," he said, his voice quivering. "Sir, my wife didn't sleep all night over it. She says there's a room for you under the roof you helped us save all your life long, if you'll take it."

"Thank you," nodded the broker. "Tell your wife it's such people as you that make a man think there's some good in the world."

Men turned and noted the tall, graceful figure as Talcott passed. There was always something royal in his bearing. Even with "Failure" written that day against his business career, a dauntless courage showed in his kindly, steady eye.

A bootblack whom he had started in business ran after him, winning the ever indulgent smile of the generous broker.

"Mr. Talcott," he said hurriedly, "I've got a savings bank book that says three hundred dollars. I want to loan it out, you see—"

"I see you are a good, loyal friend," interrupted Talcott, placing a gentle hand on the shoulder of the grateful cripple.

The speaker walked rapidly from the business center. Finally he sought the most secluded corner of an humble-restaurant and sat down—to think.

Frame and face relaxed as he drew out his pocket book. It contained only a few dollars, all that was left of a magnificent fortune. His mind ran back over the past few months. He recalled the warning of his doctor—overwork. He remembered how he had one day given a wrong order. Another when the floor of the stock exchange had gone all black before him, and he had made a confused error in business judgment and lost over two hundred thousand dollars. Then the verdict of the doctor, nervous collapse, and now—the crash.

"You Are Almost Rich Again."

Anyhow, he had paid dollar for dollar. He tried to think of hard work, a constitution rebuilt, but never again the mad rush for wealth, holding in the end only bitter dust and blight.

Talcott had brought half a dozen letters from the office. He opened them in turn. Five were of no consequence. The last one startled him. It announced that an old pensioner of his, James Gregory, living in another city, had died leaving him his entire estate—"apply at once to Dockkery & Bates, attorneys."

Twenty-four hours later the senior member of that firm escorted the broker to a secluded city court. In the center of a vacant lot stood a large covered wagon. It had windows like a house and was divided into three living compartments. Seated on the grass reading from school books were three small boys. Near by was a young lady of about eighteen. She was sewing and four little girls were copying her industry.

"Mr. Gregory has left you two horses and that wagon, with all hands included," said the lawyer, grimly. "In addition, here is the deed already recorded in your name, to a six hundred and forty acre tract of wild land a hundred miles from here, up near the pineries."

"And this is my legacy!" murmured the perplexed Talcott.

"Exactly. Miss Gregory will explain the details," and the lawyer left him.

Talcott advanced towards the young lady and introduced himself. He fancied he had never seen so kindly and peaceful a face. Her simple story was soon told. Her dead father, an eccentric, had taken in charge, gradually, some homeless orphans. For them and herself he had worked, traveling about the country in the wagon and doing odd jobs as a tinker.

When the broker asked her as to her plans for the future, she only looked helplessly and pathetically at him.

Warren Talcott did some thinking. Then, as if he had suddenly and refreshingly come to the threshold of an odd, new, inspiring life, he realized that his pensioner had made him his legatee, confident that his old friend would work out the problem aright.

They talked for over an hour. Bluntly Talcott told of his real situation. He suggested a plan. He needed rest, a change, the doctors had said. Here it was, ready made to order. They would go to "the farm," as he called it. It was their only tangible inheritance. He went away for a time, sold his watch and other jewelry, handed a roll of bills to Miss Gregory, and said:

"There is room for me with the boys. You must be the purse bearer and housekeeper. The motive of your father's life was to save these poor little outcasts. It is a noble purpose. I shall try to continue his plan."

Talcott went to sleep that night feeling the great load of a broken past lifted from his mind. The odd, the new, the unknown life attracted him.

He awoke with a headache the next morning. The reaction had come. By noon he had a fever, by nightfall he was delirious.

For him the next twenty days were a blank. He awoke to find himself, weak and emaciated, lying on a bed in the boys' end of the wagon. He glanced from the window. As far as his eyes could reach was a level emerald stretch—grass, flowers, trees everywhere.

Outside two of the boys were carrying a pail of water. They passed out of sight around to the other side of the wagon. From that direction there came the clang—clang of metal sounds. Talcott tried to arise. He sank back weakly with a groan. Instantly from the wagon living room a light form came into view. It was Miss Gregory.

Wonder-eyed and grateful, Talcott learned how the brave little woman had nursed him, had carried out the plan of the journey to "the farm." Here they were, the children industrious and happy, and oh! such grand fortune, and her eyes danced as she told him of it.

"A railroad is building right through your section," she explained, "and the wagon stands on the new town site. A man has been here daily to see you about selling him some of the property."

The man appeared next day. He looked Talcott over shrewdly. Then he said:

"I see you are a keen business man, so I'll talk sense. I am a land speculator. I'll give you ten thousand dollars for a quarter section, and fifty per cent. of what I make on another quarter section selling town lots."

"You mean," replied the broker, gently, "twenty thousand dollars and seventy-five per cent."

"I guess I've figured wrong," said the speculator. "You're up to snuff. Well, I'm ready to trade."

"And what is your plan now, Mr. Talcott?" asked the motherly guardian of the little coterie of children a few days later. "You are almost rich again."

"I shall build a nice roomy home," answered Talcott, "and we will all grow up with the country. My dear, good nurse and true friend, I have found hope and ambition where I thought there was nothing but despair. I have found love, too. Will you share the new home, as my wife?"

And when the blushing, lovable Audrey Gregory answered "Yes," Warren Talcott felt that he stood at the portal of a veritable Eden.

Little Lies.

I had something of a shock the other day. I told a man something in what I thought was confidence and he immediately went off and told it. When I saw him again I asked him what on earth possessed him! He said he was awfully sorry, simply didn't think. "But I can fix it up," he said. "The next time I see that fellow" (the one he told) "I'll simply say you didn't say it." "But I did!" said I. "Why, certainly," said he. "But I don't think so much of little lies. You simply have to tell them to get on in business." Well, he went on off, and I don't know just what to think about it. But this I do know, that the next time that particular person says such and such a thing is so, I may and I may not believe it. That's the answer, it seems to me, on the subject of lies, big or little. In the last analysis they may or may not be immoral. But they lower at once the credit of the one who tells them.

A reputation for telling the truth is like a bank account. You can even borrow money on it on occasion.—New York Press.

Four Great Sauces.

A Frenchman has declared that 'man has created the culinary art! he does not eat like an animal—he breakfasts, dines and sups."

The French are particularly eloquent on the subject of sauces. Among their famous chefs are recognized four great sauces: Spanish, Veloute, Bechamel and German. The Spanish and Veloute were known as far back as the seventeenth century. In the eighteenth they were modified by the masters of cookery, particularly by Careme, who was called "the Raphael of the Kitchen."

The Spanish sauce is composed of juices extracted from a mixture of ham, veal, chicken and pheasant. Veloute is similar, but is not colored. Bechamel is Veloute to which cream has been added, and the German sauce is Veloute plus the yolks of eggs.—Harper's Weekly.

FAITH IN THE NORTH

Peace River Man Looks for a Gold Rush Some Day

Big and bronzed, Sheridan Lawrence of Peace River, unfolded some interesting tales of the northland while on a visit to Winnipeg. For instance, he discovered to the world another Dr. Grenfell, another Dr. Luke of Labrador, in the person of a fine old man named Baldwin, who ministers to the wants to the settlers and the Indians and takes what they can give in return, perhaps a load of wood or the carcass of an elk, but more often his services are free.

That there will some day be a gold stamped to the Peace River is the prophecy of the northerner. In the sand bars of all the rivers there is gold, he said, but so far it could not be panned in paying quantities.

It is 600 miles by water from Edmonton to Fort Vermilion and measured by the map the distance between the two points as the crow flies is almost as great as between Moose Jaw and Edmonton, but here is the word of this man, who has lived at the northern point for over a quarter of a century, that grain planted later matures at the same time as the cereals of Alberta and Saskatchewan. The summer days are longer in the north, with more sunlight, hence the result.

"The conditions in the country are practically the same as when I entered it 26 years ago," said Mr. Lawrence. "Fur trading is the chief occupation. Good prices are paid and there is no want among the Indians. Independent traders have corrupted the morals of the tribes to a certain extent and they are not acorded the same credit as in the early days when they dealt exclusively with the Hudson's Bay, but the Indians are being taught some bitter lessons and they are improving. So far as I can see the Indians are decreasing somewhat in numbers."

In answer to a question as to how he came to go away up into that country where the mail comes in ten times a year, passing all the fertile lands of the west, Mr. Lawrence said that in the early days his uncle, E. J. Lawrence, was located at Fort Vermilion as a church missionary. This uncle induced his father to leave Frontenac county, Ontario, and go up there as farm instructor. They went via Calgary 26 years ago, traveling all the way in carts across an unbroken prairie to the Athbasca River.

A SKELETON FACTORY

Big One in Paris Has Almost Monopoly of Strange Trade

Making skeletons for a living does not seem to be a business that would pay very much, and yet there are a number of places where skeletons are made. In making skeletons it does not mean that they are made artificially by some composition resembling bone, but that they are "made" by removing flesh and ligaments, drying the bones, whitening them and assembling them, fastening them together with slender wires in place of the ligaments, which, of course, will not remain solid like bone, but disintegrate. In these places skeletons of almost everything, from a common tadpole to a human being, are made. There are places where artificial skeletons are made for various purposes, such as theatrical productions and the like, but this is done along with other work where all sorts of things, from imitation ivory paper cutters to massive pillars, are made.

The real skeleton factory deals in nothing except the genuine skeletons, and they not only sell these and fill orders for them to all sorts of medical men and institutions and schools, but they are also willing to "rent them" for any period.

The biggest share of the skeleton trade is carried on in France, the biggest "factory" being located in Paris, where there is a complete equipment and stock for furnishing skeletons of everything, even extinct animals, skeletons of fishes and men or elephants and rabbits and everything today that has enough of a skeleton to put together. So great is the business in this place that it has branches in London and Berlin, and it gets out great catalogues, and sends them broadcast, showing lists and cuts of their choice lots of skeletons.

Most of the human bones employed in the French manufacture belonged, in life, to criminals or to unknown persons whose bodies were unclaimed after death in hospitals or almshouses. After being utilized in the dissecting room the remains were removed to this factory.

The proprietor of this factory practically monopolizes this industry. The preparation of the skeleton takes many months from first to last, and is a very expensive process. There must be a thorough chemical treatment of the bones in the first place, to insure their hanging together and remaining in an unaltered state.

The preparation of skeletons is really far more important than one would think, as it provides thousands of medical students and others with the means of making a proper study of the construction of the human frame, and helps in the constant work of medical and surgical advance.

A Strange Belief

Among the superstitions that formerly prevailed was a belief in the efficiency of various parts of a human corpse when applied to the seat of disease. Thus Aubrey, an old writer, says: "'Tis certain the touch of a dead hand wrought wonderful effects. A painter, of Stowel, in Somersetshire, had a wen in the inside of his cheek as big as a pullet's egg, which, by the advice of me, was cured by once or twice touching or rubbing with a dead woman's hand (and contra, to cure a woman, a dead man's hand). He was directed to say the Lord's prayer, and to beg a blessing." He was perfectly cured in a few weeks. Aubrey also says, recalls the "Family Doctor," that a hunch-backed child was cured in the same fashion.

A French invention of phonograph records on a prepared cloth, which may be mailed like a letter, threatens to seriously rival stenographers.

THE RECIPE BOOK

Soup With Noodles—Vegetable or meat soup with noodles is relished occasionally. For noodles, beat one egg, and add a pinch of salt and flour enough to make a stiff dough. Roll out in a thin sheet, dredge with flour to keep from sticking. Next, roll up this thin sheet as you would a jelly cake and slice very fine. One half hour before the soup is served add the noodles.

Canned Rhubarb—Rhubarb may be canned in cold water. Fit freshly cut stalks into a clean jar. Let the water run full force into the jar for 15 minutes till air is excluded. Screw on the top while the jar is still under water. Be sure that it is perfectly air-tight. The contents should keep and be just like fresh rhubarb.

Stuffed Potatoes—Bake the potatoes. When they are done, take out of the oven, cut in halves and scoop out of their jackets. Mash with butter until they are smooth; pepper and salt. Put them back again into their jackets. Put them into the oven for a few minutes to heat and brown on the top.

Baked Hominy—Mash enough leftover hominy to fill an ordinary baking dish, after all lumps are eliminated. Add two eggs, one tablespoonful of flour, with one teaspoonful of baking powder, salt, pepper and about half a cupful of milk, to make a stiff batter. Put all this in a dish and bake three-quarters of an hour.

Bread Pudding—Pour two cupfuls of boiling milk over half an ordinary loaf of stale bread. Mash this mixture until smooth and add one tablespoonful of butter. Add three well-beaten eggs, when this is cold, one half cupful of white sugar, a little nutmeg, one teaspoonful of vanilla, and one cupful of mixed citron, seeded raisins and currants. Bake or boil about three-quarters of an hour. Serve hot, with or without hard sauce.

EAT PINEAPPLES

They Have Splendid Medicinal as Well as Food Value

The properties of the pineapple are extremely healthful, its contents of pepsin being of so high an average that, of all the fruits, it takes the highest rank among those possessing the qualities that aid digestion. It is a highly beneficial food-medicine, as well as a delightful fruit.

A quarter of a pineapple, taken at breakfast, affords more tonic than two grapefruits. A glass of the juice of a fresh apple, taken during a heavy meal, would furnish pepsin enough to make the after-dinner pepsin tablet unnecessary. Pineapple juice is a drink practically unknown to Canadians but the people of South America, where the pineapples often sell for less than one cent each, drink vast quantities of the fresh pineapple juice. With a little sugar, it makes the most palatable and soothing drink imaginable.

NOW IT'S LEAD EARRINGS

But They Are Worn Betweentimes to Make Ears Beautiful

Somebody has discovered that an ear, to be truly beautiful, must have a round lobe. It may be a perfectly good ear in its business relations, but unless it droops at the bottom it is of no use as an ornament. As might be expected, women are more agitated over this discovery than men. A society girl has even set about to improve the shape of her auricular appendages through the simple device for attaching weights to them. For this purpose she has had a pair of lead "sinkers" of the type that fishermen tie on their lines made into earrings. These earrings she wears around the house and at night, removing them, of course, when callers are announced. She has confided to her close friends that the result is all that can be desired and she expects soon to have a beautiful pair of ears.

FISHERMEN'S "SINKERS" WILL DO

Browned flour will impart flavor and coloring and make soups and gravies especially good.

RAISING STANDARD OF ESKIMO LIFE

Children of Far North Seemed Beyond Hope But Gradually Reformed After Years of Work

The first attempt at Christianizing the Eskimos at Herschel Island, where their chief settlements are situated, was undertaken in 1870 by Rev. W. C. Bompas, who later became Bishop of the diocese of Mackenzie River, says Mr. C. E. Whittaker, who has been working in the Mackenzie River district since 1895. It would be difficult to find a more degraded people than these to whom Mr. Bompas went. He found they were addicted to lying, stealing and stabbing. "They practised heathen dances, songs and conjuring, spells and charms. Their religion was very crude, being vague ideas of a spirit of evil, related to cold and death, amenable to exorcism at times, and a less definite idea of a good spirit, in relation with the sun."

As regards their dwellings, Mr. Bompas wrote as follows to a friend: "Go to the nearest well-to-do farmer and spend a night in his pig-sty and this is exactly like life with the Eskimos. The difficulty you would have in crawling or wriggling into the sty through a hole only large enough for a pig was exactly my case with their houses. As to the habits of your companions, the advantage would probably be on the side of the pigs and the safety of the position decidedly so."

Mr. Bompas was reticent regarding the prevailing customs of the tribe, but other observers report a shocking state of immorality, infanticide, polygamy and worse, while an utter disregard of life and property characterized them.

Improved Their Habits

This was the only direct attempt made to Christianize the tribe for twenty years, as Mr. Bompas never returned to them, but a gradual change came over them from observing the habits of the missionaries and Hudson's Bay Company officials at Fort McPherson, as well as the Indians who were now largely Christianized, and the grossest practices died out with the passing of the older generations. During the latter part of this period an immigration from Alaska took place of some members of another tribe, and, while now they no longer flaunted their immoralities before the public, within their own villages they became more degraded than ever.

When the next serious attempt to Christianize these people was made in 1892 by Rev. Isaac O. Stringer, of Wycliffe College, Toronto, he found a difficulty to contend with which had not been met with by his predecessors to any great extent. This was the appalling result which contact with non-Christian "civilization" now began to have on the people. From 1890 onward from ten to twenty-five ships a year cruised in the Arctic, and ten to fifteen frequently passed the winter in the harbor at Herschel Island. The average crew of these ships was about forty men, and neither officers nor men seemed to consider themselves under any restraint in their relations with the Eskimos.

Wallowed in Drink

Mr. Whittaker tells of having seen a sober population within an hour after the arrival of a whaling ship turned into a howling bedlam of drunken men, women and children. In addition to this, the officers and men not only by their example opposed the work of the Mission, but ridiculed and belittled the teaching of the missionaries.

Very slowly the influence of the Mission grew, chiefly through the work of the schools for children and men which were established. Finally in 1906 Mr. Whittaker was forced to leave Herschel Island, and in doing so he left the service books with the headsman of the Island, who with his young kinsmen alone had shown any signs of conversion, and this man promised to hold services every Sunday for those who would come. Like so many other cases where people have been thrown on their own resources the result was satisfactory in the highest degree, for they maintained the services without a break for six years with only occasional visits from missionaries in that time.

Influence of Missions

When Bishop Stringer in 1909 went to the Village of Kittigagyuit, where his earliest labors had been, the change that had come over the natives was astounding. He found them no longer careless but anxious not only to learn but to practice what was taught them. The first baptism among these people took place on this visit and was followed by several others, and in the year 1910 one hundred and thirteen became Christians.

An idea of the marvelous change which had taken place will be gained when it is stated that no case of theft had been heard of for years. Besides this the last murder was committed nine years ago and that murderer lives now without fear of vengeance. Infanticide ceased; polygamy is abandoned, and lying extremely rare. The weekly bath has become an institution, besides daily washing, and in place of their foul igloos, they have well ventilated huts, with three to eight times the air space afforded by the old dwellings, while the doors no longer open into a passage filled with dogs, but give access to the free air. It is interesting to note that Dr. Wilson, assistant surgeon to the R.N.W. M.P., says that he does not consider more than 2 per cent. of the Eskimos are tubercular, an extraordinarily small number considering the weakened condition of the race, owing to their contact with the whalers, and the diseases introduced by the latter.

THE FAMILY CAPITAL

Health the Most Important Factor of Everyday Life

Every wife ought to feel it her duty to take the best possible care of the family capital. The money? Oh, yes, that is the family capital in one sense of course. But in a broader, bigger sense, isn't the true capital of the average family the health of the earner of the income? There are few houses comparatively speaking, where the daily needs are brought from the proceeds of invested money. They are the outcome of invested labor—labor that, to bring in the money regularly, must be reinvested steadily day after day.

Few wives seem to understand this fact quite as fully as they ought. They are apt to use their capital a bit recklessly, making it work for cash returns all day down town, and then forcing it in extra use for social display during the evening. Very little capital of any kind will stand a double strain. Money used for flowers and gowns is not apt to bring in interest for the purchase of the prosaic but necessary pot roast. And as the good housekeeper looks to the providing of household necessities before she spends money on luxuries, to the good wife will look to her husband's health and strength before she spends a bit of either in the acquiring of social pleasures.

The wage earner of a family is of necessity that family's greatest cash asset. It behooves the women of the house to see that he is able to do his best work, with his strength unencumbered by mortgages to lack of sleep, unnecessary weariness or nervous strain. The wage earner of the family is, from the very fact of his being the wage earner, the most important person in it.

It is the duty of his home partner to keep his machinery, both mental and physical, up to its very best mark, or everyone concerned may suffer in that most tender spot of modern anatomy—the pocketbook.

AEROPLANE VS. AIRSHIP

The aeroplane has much greater elevation powers than the dirigible. It can climb to 18,000 feet, and then its endurance is about exhausted. The Zeppelin dirigibles can rise to 10,000 feet and then travel for twenty hours at that elevation.

The dirigible has an average speed of forty miles an hour, against seventy-five miles an hour of the aeroplane. But no aeroplane loaded with guns and ammunition has yet travelled at a speed greater than sixty miles an hour. This is the speed of the Zeppelins being built for the German War Office. The aeroplane that runs short of fuel falls to earth. But when a dirigible has no more fuel it becomes a mere balloon.

This is the reason the Zeppelins are being built larger. They can then carry enough fuel to enable them to run 500 to 700 miles into the enemy's country and return without alighting.

LADY TARRINGTON

one of the most beautiful women in England. As Eleanor Souray, she was maid of honor to Queen Alexandra during the reign of Edward VII.

PRINCESS MARY'S WILL

Rather a Self-opinionated Young Lady Is King's Daughter

Princess Mary is said to be the most determined lady in the royal household. Her Royal Highness is fast growing up, and she is forming her own circle of friends and her own manner of life.

The one point of dispute between her and the Queen is her hair. Princess Mary dislikes to have it falling about. The Queen will not allow it up, but a compromise was reached. Princess Mary usually ties it back in a small thick plait doubled up at the neck with a ribbon.

The King is amused at his daughter's strong will, which seems likely to overrule even that of the Queen's.

Among her girl friends are Lady Rachell Capell, the elder daughter of the Countess of Essex; both of Lord Curzon of Kedleston's daughters, and Mrs. George Keppel's second daughter.

A very special friend of the Princess is Lady Rachell Capell, of whom both Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra are very fond.

Found Glacial Boulder

A glacial boulder, weighing something approaching ten tons, was unearthed in a sandpit on Icknield street, Birmingham, and has claimed a great deal of attention from scientists. This huge block of volcanic ash, which is authoritatively held to have made a glacial descent from the Arenig Mountains in Wales, is the largest of several discovered in the Birmingham neighborhood. Boulders of similar origin discovered during the construction of the Cotteridge Park have been suitably preserved, and a notable specimen is a familiar object in Cannon Hill Park. Professor Lapworth pronounces the huge boulder to be an exceptionally fine geological specimen.

The Middle Child

Whenever there is company
And mother sends for us,
It's always 'bout the baby that
They make the biggest fuss
They say, "She's sweet as she can be!"
"Her hair, just see it curl!"
They never say such things to me,
'Cause I'm the middle girl.
And then they say to sister, "Why,
Is this the oldest child?
She'll be a woman by-and-bye!"
And after they have smiled
And held her hand, they look at me.
Mamma says, "She's begun
To lose her teeth," and then they laugh—
'Cause I'm the middle one!

Then baby speaks her little piece,
And sister's asked to sing;
But no one ever seems to guess
That I do anything.
Although my name is Marguerite—
And Marguerite means "pearl,"
Nobody thinks that I'm sweet,
'Cause I'm the middle girl.

When I grow up, and when I have
A family of my own,
I'll send up for the middle girl
To come downstairs alone;
And I shall let her speak and sing
And have a lot of fun,
I'll not deny her anything
'Cause she's the middle one!

Ald. Panter said the estimates had been carefully prepared and the rate would be the same as last year. The assessment was increasing, so were the expenditures. The Council would like to have lowered the rate this year, but the demand made by the Board of Education was lareg this year. He moved that the estimates as presented be adopted.

Ald. White considered that the appropriation to the Public Works department was too small, as there were great demands upon that department. He thought the appropriation should be $12,000 in stead of $10,000.

In answer to an enquiry, Ald. White said that up to the 1st of July, $3,600 had been expended.

Ald. Robinson—I think it would be difficult for Ald. White and his committee to expend the balance this year.

Ald. Panter asked Ald. White, as a favor, to get along with $10,000 this year. If he did this he would confer a great favor upon the Council and the citizens generally.

Ald. White stated that it was costing more for teams and labor this year and there were expenditures yet to be made upon machinery. There were certain streets which needed repairing this year.

The motion of Ald. Panter that the estimates be adopted, prevailed.

Ald. Wallbridge referred to the fact that the Belleville Gas Holder Construction Company wanted to proceed with the work of constructing the holder which was built some time ago.

The matter was referred to the Mayor, Solicitor and Ald. Wallbridge.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

INQUIRIES.

Ald. Robinson asked if householders are compelled to pay for the removal of garbage, if the garbage wagon does not call and they have no garbage.

Ald. Woodley—The bylaw says that all have to pay for the collection of garbage.

Ald. St. Charles asked if the city could be better lighted, especially Front street, next week when the Oddfellows are in the city.

Ald. Robinson—I will look into the matter.

Ald. McFee—Has anything been done about the arch on Front street near Mr. Roy's place?

City Clerk—It is going to be changed to an arc light.

Ald. Slater—What steps would be taken to cut down noxious weeds on vacant lots in the city.

Ald. Woodley—Mr. Arnott's attention might be called to this matter.

BY-LAWS.

Ald. Panter introduced a number of bylaws relating to the collection of taxes, adopting the estimates for general purposes, for the High and Public Schools and the Separate School.

The Council went into committee of the whole on bylaws, Ald. Panter in the chair.

The bylaws were passed through their various stages and numbered.

TAX BYLAW.

The bylaw relating to the collection of taxes provided for the payment of taxes as follows: At par from 1st of October to November 1st. From 1st of November to 1st of December, 2 per cent. added. From 1st of December to 1st of January, 4 per cent. added. After 1st of January, 5 per cent. to be added.

Mr. J. W. Holmes was appointed tax collector and the salary was fixed at $1,000 per annum.

A bylaw was passed discontinuing the sessions of the Council until Monday the 6th day of October, and provision was made for the payment of accounts during the interim.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

MOTIONS.

Moved by Ald. Robinson, seconded by Ald. St. Charles, that August 13th be proclaimed as the civic holiday for 1913 and that the Mayor is hereby requested to publish a proclamation to that effect in both city papers.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Robinson, seconded by Ald. McFee, that Ald. McFee and Robinson be a special committee to confer with the Board of Health for the purpose of looking into the feasibility of modifying the scope of the garbage bylaw.

Ald. Panter—A conference should be held with the Board of Health and have the provisions of the bylaw modified. The committee should meet with the Board. He instanced the fact that it was impossible for the garbage wagons to reach the north end of Front street without going outside of the city limits.

Ald. Robinson spoke in support of the motion, contending that the bylaw should be modified. The motion was adopted.

Ald. McFee moved, seconded by Ald. St. Charles, that arrangements be made for the holding of band concerts weekly on Victoria Park during August on Friday evenings, the concerts to commence this Friday evening.—Carried.

Ald. Panter moved, seconded by Ald. White, that Inspector Arnott be granted one week's leave of absence, and that the City Clerk be granted leave of absence on Wednesday afternoons during August.

Council adjourned until Monday, October 6th.

Fear Plan of Defence is Futile

Naval Manoeuvres Brought to Somewhat Abrupt Termination and Ships Return to Port.

LONDON, August 4.—Naval manoeuvres were brought to a somewhat obrupt end without striking dramatic incidents as in the first stage. The presumably decisive battle was fought on Friday.

The ships are now returning to their ports where they will give leave.

The manoeuvres show that the problems of Britain's defence require early and serious consideration. It is believed that when the story of the operations is told in the House of Commons, it wil be made clear that most theories of the supposed impractibility of an effective invasion of England will be shown to be wrong, and that something more serious than mere raids can be carried out with camparative immunity by an enemy despite the great fleet with which we can cover the North Sea.

PARIS DOCTOR SAYS

DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR ARE CAUSED BY A MICROBE—DR. SANGERBOND PROVES IT.

Dr. Sangerbond is the leading dermatologist of France.

To prove his theory that germs cause dandruff, he infected a guinea pig with these microbes and in a short time the hair from the animal's body disappeared.

Parisian Sage, which can now be obtained all over Canada, has an immense sale and is highly recommended by physicians in all parts of the world.

It is just because it is the only prescription or hair tonic that is absolutely sure to kill the dandruff germ.

It is guaranteed to cure dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

In warm weather it keeps the scalp clean and cool and free from obnoxious odors. Parisian Sage is a pleasant and dainty hair dressing that will put a bewitching charm and lustre into faded and lifeless hair in one week. It is distressing for any woman to have dull, unattractive hair and women so unfortunate should use Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage comes in large 50-cent bottles at W. H. Lattimer's and is sold by leading druggists everywhere. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every bottle.

A Lady who Has Never Been Kissed

Dr. Annie Quesnel, Delegate to Geologists' Convention, Member of Anti-Kissing League.

Dr. Annie T. Quensel, a noted zoologist of the Swedish university of Upsala, arrived in New York last week from Europe. She and her husband will represent the university at the international congress of geologists at the Normal school this week, and will be among the most interesting delegates.

Dr. Quensel does not believe in kissing. She will lecure on the subject in the United States on her return from Toronto, and she hopes her talks will have a good effect on the younger generation. The doctor is statuesque and strikingly pretty, and she has never been kissed, not even by her husband.

"My husband has never kissed me, and I have never kissed him," she added. "Neither of us have ever kissed anyone. We are both very active members of the Continental Antikissing League. We believe kissing is unsanitary and a menace to good health.

"In Europe agents of the league are assigned to the public parks, railroad stations and steamship piers, and whenever hey observe a couple who seem to be on the verge of kissing each other good-bye, they display a brass badge with the words 'Danger in Kissing'.

"It is then the agent's duty to separate the would-be kissers and deliver a lecture on the perils of osculation.

"We feel that if persons having been properly warned of the risk they run, persist in kissing, sufficient punishment is meted to them by the thousands of bacilli that will be left on the lips."

Wee Girl Run Down and Killed by Fire Department Salvage Waggon

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—Whilst returning to extinguish a blaze in a back yard rubbish heap, the firemen of No. 11 Slavage waggon yesterday morning ran down and killed little Dorry Cohen, the 13-year-old daughter of Abraham Cohen, residing at 371 St. Dominique street. The victim, who at the time of the accident, had just disembarked from a car at the corner of Ontario and Frontenac streets, was struck by the pole of the waggon, thrown to the roadway trampled beneath the hoofs of the horses and then run over by the wheels of the heavy conveyance, receiving injuries of such gravity that she died in an ambulance a few minutes later while being rushed at top speed to the General Hospital.

Far well Reception To Rev. Mr. Wallace

The farewell reception tendered to Rev. Robert and Mrs. Wallace and family in the Victoria Avenue Baptist church last evening proved to be a very delightful occasion.

Upon their arrival, the guests were ushered into the church parlor, where they were received by Rev. and Mrs. Wallace, Master Hudson Wallace, Mrs. (Rev.) C. G. Smith, and Rev. J. R Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church, Peterborough. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the church and these were of a very dainty and appetizing nature. After the refreshments had been partaken of by all present a programme of addresses and musical selections was carried out in the lecture room of the church. Messages of regret at their inability to be present were received from Mr. W. H. Wrightmyer of the Children's Aid Society, and Deacons Hitchon, Nurse and Mowry. These communications were read by the pastor, Rev. Chas. Geo. Smith, after which he made a few remarks, in the course of which he said that while all were very sorry indeed to lose Rev. Mr. Wallace, who had been not only a very valuable and estimable citizen, but also a strong support in all religions organizations in the city, he wanted this farewell reception to be a bright and happy occasion, and warned the speakers who were to follow that they were not to "rub salt into the wound" made by Mr. Wallace's leaving.

Addresses were also made by Rev. A. M. Hubly, on behalf of the Ministerial Association of the city; Mr. J. L. Hess, on behalf of the Y. M. C. A.; Mr. A. E. Bailey, for the Methodists of the city; Mr. C. S. Clapp, for the Sunday School Association, and Rev. J. R. Webb, on behalf of the Peterborough District Baptist Association.

Two addresses were read, one by Deacon Riggs, to Rev. Mr. Wallace, and one by Mr. W. B. Riggs, to Mrs. Wallace. Mr. Wallace was presented with a handsome solid leather traveling bag and Mrs. Wallace was the recipient of an umbrella.

In a few brief remarks Mr. Wallace expressed his thanks for many kind things said of him by the various speakers, saying that he really did not merit them, as he had only been the humble servant of God in all that he had done. On behalf of himself and Mrs. Wallace he also tendered thanks for the tokens of love and esteem with which they had been presented.

The musical numbers on the program included a trombone solo by Mr. Jack Cookson; a quartette selection by Miss Foreman, Mrs. B. Doolittle, and Messrs. W. B. Riggs and W. H. Faulkner; selection by the male quartette, composed of Messrs. Cook, Riggs, Faulkner and Riggs, and a solo by Dr. Dormer.

L. J. Thomas Instantly Killed

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—Special—When C. A. Thomas, 58 Langey avenue, attempted to pass a farmer's rig while driving his motor-car on the Kentucky road at eight o'clock last night, his car skidded on the moist grass at the side of the roadway, and, turning turtle, buried him and his brother, L. J. Thomas, beneath it, killing the latter instantly.

C. A. Thomas was picked up from under the car stunned, but he had escaped serious injury.

WEDDING BELLS

BLANCHARD—GIBSON

At the Presbyterian church, Melrose, on July 23rd, Miss Ethel Gibson was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Dr. Paul Drake Blanchard, of Lowell, Mass. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. E. Cameron. The happy couple left for a trip down the St. Lawrence, visiting Montreal, Quebec, and other places of interest.

The Sable Lorcha

By Horace Hazeltine

Copyright 1912, A. C. McClurg & Co.

For a long while there remained in my mind as legacy from the strange case of Cameron and the Sable Lorcha conspiracy a seemingly insoluble problem. On our return to America, my friend, in spite of all my urging, refused, with stubborn persistency, it seemed to me, to aid in the prosecution of those who, we knew positively, were implicated in the affair. Concerning Murphy, Yup Sing and a score or more of their satellites we could have produced evidence of the most damaging character. But Cameron was not so minded. He even went so far as to discourage my appearance against the former for complicity in the plot to take captive Evelyn and myself on the night of our Pell street visit. Indeed I have always believed that through O'Hara he was instrumental in securing Murphy's release And I know for a fact that he provided so generously for the young French driver of the electric brougham, who was so badly injured in that Pell street adventure, that the fellow returned to France a month before the trial of his assailant.

All these things, I say, continued to puzzle and disquiet me, long after the sharp edges of rancorous remembrance had been worn away. And invariably at such times there would recur recollections of those early days of the threatening letters and of that elusive something in Cameron's manner which I was never quite able to comprehend or explain.

The true interpretation was reserved for the night preceding my marriage with Evelyn, which, by the way, had, at her guardian's wish, been delayed for nearly a year because of what he chose to regard as her unseemly youth. The celebration was to take place at Cragholt and the house was already filled with kinsfolk and intimate friends, including most of the wedding party.

It was after midnight, and Cameron and I were alone together in his mahogany and green study; he at his writing table and I in the same adjacent leather chair in which I had sat a twelvemonth ago while listening to the story of the incised portrait.

As was not unusual we had reverted to that time and to certain of the incidents therewith connected; and I had been trying to make clear to Cameron, as I had already frequently tried to do, the peculiar difference between McNish's expression and his.

"In individual feature," I said, warming to my subject, "there never was in all the world before, I believe, such similarity. And in repose, the ensemble, I should say, was equally identical. But when it came to—"

And there Cameron checked me.

"Clyde," and his tone was strangely grave, it seemed to me, "you'll pardon my interrupting you, I know. I understand what you would say, probably better than I could from your putting it into words. And I want to tell you why I understand. Indeed I've wanted to tell you for a long while, but whenever I've got to the verge of it, I have balked."

He paused here to shake the ash from his cigar, reaching across his desk for a receptacle, and somehow the gesture reminded me of that of McNish as he had thrown out his arm which held the letter, and so exposed the telltale tattooing.

"I have never told you, Clyde," he resumed, his eyes turned on the glowing tobacco ember which he had just bared, "anything about my birth or my family. But now that you are to become one of us, in a way, it's only fair that you should know; for though Evelyn's mother was but my half-sister, still the girl gets the same blood through her grandsire."

"Yes," I said, "I know that. Evelyn told me that much. I know, too, that you were born in Scotland; and the very name of Cameron is a pretty good guarantee of family worth."

"My father belonged to a rather poor branch," he confessed, "and like many poor men he had a large number of children. There were ten, all told, and when my poor mother died, it became a serious problem how to take care of us little ones. I was among the youngest, not over seven, and I had a twin brother."

As he said this Cameron, who had been desultorily drawing figures on his writing pad with the end of a penholder, abruptly shot his gaze to mine and caught the quick question of my eyes.

"Yes," he said, without change of tone, "yes, you see, now, don't you?"

"McNish!" I murmured.

"McNish," he echoed. "Donald McNish."

"But," I began, "I don't quite—" and I thought of the letter from McNish's mother.

"Oh, it is clear enough," he went on. "Some of the children were put out to live amongst neighbors, and eventually, my father and the rest of us came to this country. The others he left behind, promising to send each month the money for their keep. Donald he left with a couple named McNish, who had no bairns of their own, and when the boy grew to be a big lad, and my father, who in the meantime had been successful here and married again, sent for him to come to America, word came back that he had been dead a twelvemonth."

"And your father believed it?"

"Oh, yes, for they returned the back pay he had forwarded, and sent a lock of my brother's hair, I think, and a trinket or two that had been his as a kiddie."

"Afterwards, though, you learned that he was still alive?"

"No," was Cameron's answer. "We never heard. Had it not been for that marked resemblance gathering me into the net spread for him, I should probably never have known. And, Clyde," he added, "ever since I learned of his having been there, in town, I have been wondering. Do you think it possible that he ever realized that he was in his brother's house?"

"Hardly," I said. "It doesn't seem likely, though; unless the name and the—He must—Oh, certainly," I stumbled, "he must have realized that we mistook him for—yes, for some one named Cameron. He answered to it readily enough; he even insisted that he was Cameron. And if his mind was clear enough to put two and two together, why, knowing that he had a twin brother in America, it would seem—" And there I stopped my floundering, for Cameron had risen to his feet, and smiling, tolerantly, was waving a hushing hand at me.

"Yes, yes," he said, "I've argued it all out in just the same way, dear friend. And yet we never can be certain, can we? Only I have thought, if he might have realized it, and have been able to have played the part, and stayed, and taken up my life and lived it for the rest of his, I might have gone on and taken his punishment to some purpose. For I have had more than my share of the good things, Clyde, and maybe if poor little Donnie had had even half my chances, it would all have been so very, very different."

He still thought of him as the child brother he had parted from long years ago in Scotland, and as such he would ever remember him. I was glad then that he had stopped me when I had tried to draw for him the difference in their faces. For it was such a difference! Looking at Cameron now with the lamp of true greatness alight behind those plain features, I marveled that I could even have seen a vestige of likeness in the brutal, soulless face of his twin brother.

And then, for the first time, too, I really understood.

THE END.

Mediation Policy Respecting Mexico

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Special—The initiation of President Wilson's policy of mediation with respect to Mexico was announced this afternoon, when secretary of State Bryan made public the fact that former Governor John Lind, of Minnesota, had left Washington late to-day for Mexico City, where he will be the personal representative of the President and adviser to the American Embassy.

REST IS NECESSARY FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Every Woman Should Relax at Intervals During Busiest Day

Repose settles very gracefully upon a housewife. The other members of the family do not always come home with the spirit of helpfulness and cheerfulness, and when a woman finds it necessary to be the pacifier or the encourager it will be a time for her to call upon her reserve power of strength. She therefore needs to store up energy for the unexpected, because emergencies are always having to be met in the household. If she does not plan for the unusual, the unusual is likely to be the "straw that breaks the camel's back." The wise woman will not fail to take a few minutes for rest several times during even her busiest and most taxing day. Indeed, it is on just such a day that she most needs to practise the beneficial gospel of relaxation. To relax—to let go the nerve, brain and muscle strain—for even sixty seconds is a positive gain to the entire system. Complete relaxation and thorough rest are most easily obtained by lying down and unreservedly yielding the support of the body to the couch. Thus to spend five or ten minutes in the middle of each day would enable many a worn and weary houseworker to accomplish more, with less fatigue than is otherwise possible. The foregoing suggestion is so remote from what many an industrious woman considers "her duty to her family" as to seem to her like theoretical nonsense. Nevertheless, it is body and brain saving, good common sense. Duty to one's self should lead women to take measures for saving health and strength while there is still a fund to draw upon.

Rest periods of fifteen minutes at intervals during the day are much to be desired in the housekeeper's program, and they should be taken before she has become so weary that fifteen minutes do not seem to count. A hard working professional man was asked how often he rested. He replied, as often as he had fifteen minutes to spare. Women do not rest often enough before they are utterly exhausted. Sometimes it seems easier to continue working than to stop, because the first experiences in resting are most uncomfortable; one dreads the let-down after utter exhaustion. Moreover, young housekeepers full of life and energy are tempted to work beyond their strength without planning for the reserve necessary for later years.

CARE OF THE FEET

Prevention Better Than Cure of Ingrowing Nails

An ingrowing toenail is very painful and often requires surgical attention for the simple reason that people are inclined to think of it as "only an ingrowing toenail."

The first sign of this trouble is soreness in the flesh beside the nail. The skin becomes very much inflamed. The nail presses down into the flesh and the sufferer experiences great inconvenience in walking or even wearing a shoe. This condition does not come all at once, however, and might usually be prevented if the individual attended to the nail as soon as the first symptom of soreness manifested itself.

Improper footwear is the commonest cause of ingrowing toenail. Shoes too narrow across the toes, or not long enough, or those with high heels which throw the toes forward so that they are crowded by the toe of the shoe are all first aids.

A wrong method of cutting the toenails may start the trouble. Toenails should be cut straight across, not trimmed away at the corners to follow the lines of the toes. If the latter method is used the flesh crowds in at the corners, and as the nail pushes forward it digs into the flesh.

The treatment for ingrowing toenails includes the wearing of broad-toed shoes; relieving pain and inflammation by the use of hot poultices of flaxseed meal or other soothing material; soaking the foot frequently in hot water.

If the condition is discovered early, push a very small bit of cotton batting under the side of the nail and keep the top of the nail cut very short.

Home Made Shoe Trees

Take a pair of thick stockings or socks that fit the feet, fill with sawdust, and sew up the top so that the sawdust does not come out. When you take off your shoes put them on these shoe trees. The sawdust will absorb the perspiration and keep the shoes in perfect shape. The sawdust can be changed when necessary.

As a Woman Thinks

A woman can do more to perpetuate her name by inventing a new coiffure than a man can by inventing a new hydro-plane.

With a four horse power engine a motor driven plow invented in England cuts a six inch furrow in excess of a speed of three miles an hour.

Kingston Church Choir on Strike

Queen Street Church Young Ladies Object to Wearing Gowns on Hot Sundays.

KINGSTON, Aug 5.—From what can be learned the young ladies of Queen street Methodist church choir will "go on strike" rather than don during the summer, the gowns which they have been wearing during the winter and spring months. They claim that they are too warm, and prefer appearing in white dresses for the services on Sundays during the warm weather.

The young ladies have left the uniform attire off since the warm weather arrived, and it appears that members of the congregation have insisted that the "fair songsters" put on the gowns again. Rather than do this one member of the choir has said that the young ladies will not go in the choir-loft. In other words, they will go out on strike. Sunday morning the threat was caried out. The only lady singer present was the salaried soloist.

Detroit Railway Case

DETROIT, Aug. 5.—The threatened trouble between Detroit and the Detroit United Street Railways Company, caused by the refusal of the company to grant three-cent fares on all city lines where franchises have expired, was halzed late to-day. The Street Railway Company agreed to nearly all of the important demands of the city. The offer of a local automobile company to furnish the city with one thousand machines for the transportation of passengers hastened the capitulation of the railway company.

ARE ADVERTISEMENTS TRUTHFUL?

They are.

First, because ninety per cent. of business men are honorable men.

Second, all advertisers have learned that it does not pay to fool the public.

Third, newspapers like The Intelliegncer keep a strict censorship of their advertising columns and exclude anything of a questionable character.

Merchants who advertise are building not for today but for the future. They expect to be in business for years to come.

They know they can only live by service.

When they advertise a thing they must have the goods, and the goods must be exactly as represented or it would be fatal.

There are no merchants in this city more deserving of your patronage than those who advertise in The Intelligencer.

TWO MEN WERE KILLED IN WRECK NEAR PARHAM

Construction Car Jumped Track on Trestle and Rolled Down Embankment—Four Other Cars Followed, Burying Victim Under Wreckage

J. Mitchell, Pontypool, Ont.

An Italian, whose name could not be ascertained.

The above fatalities resulted from a bad wreck which occurred about two miles west of Parham on the construction of the new C.P.R. line at ten o'clock yesterday. A ballast train going west, with engine behind, was crossing a small trestle when the front car jumped the track.

On this car there were about ten men riding. These men jumped and apparently went right under the cars. The rest of the men stayed with the car, which turned completely around and rolled down an embankment of twenty five feet throwing the men clear Four more cars followed this car and burier the two men who had jumped. Their bodies have been recovered and are fearfully mangled.

Trains This Year Over New Railway

(Special to The Intelligencer)

OTTAWA, Aug. 5.—Indications at present favor the beginning of traffic between Winnipeg and Cochrane, on the Transcontinental, on December 1st next, and between Winnipeg and Quebec by August, 1914. Between Cochrane and Winnipeg there is one lift of ballast over the entire line, and half of the line is in excellent running order. Except for a few soft spots, which may cause temporary delays, the roadbed is in condition to handle freight today if necessary. All preparations should be completed by December next.

Between Cochrane and Quebec 50 miles of track are laid. The track probably will be connected in November next, and the steel bridges erected in the coming winter.

Germany Plans New Squadron

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Berlin telegrams announce the creation of a contemplated special cruiser squadron which will be always available for the protection of imperilled German Government is about to enter a new phase of their naval policy, as for many decades practically all the German fleet have been concentrated in the Baltic and then overflowed into the North Sea.

The Daily Telegraph says that this report will only serve to emphasize the importance of the Rt. Hon. Mr. Churchill's scheme for establishing an Imperial patrol with the aid of various Dominions.

The Daly Telegraph adds: "Unfortunately at the moment when Germany is taking action to show her flag on the distant seas in powerful squadron, the British scheme is temporarily endangered by the adverse vote of the Canadian Senate."

Auto Tragedies Shock all Paris

Record-Breaking List Leads to Agitation for License Reform.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—As the result of the fearful number of automobile accidents which have been happening daily in this country for some time, and which last week broke all known records both as to number and seriousness, the public is in a state of approaching panic, and a wave of popular indignation is sweeping over Paris. People are asking by what extraordinary paradox it comes about that, while an engine-driver, all of whose movements are timed to a moment to avoid danger and whose path is carefully protected against the least obstacle, is obliged to pass a long and exacting training—technical, physical and moral—a chauffeur who drives as fast as an engineer on a road open to all, obscured by dust and windings, and is constantly responsible for four or five other lives, is required to undergo the flimsiest technical examination without any steps being taken to find out if he has sangfroid, a sound heart, or a sense of responsibility. People are protesting that this anomaly must not be allowed to continue, and, urging that not only professional chauffeurs, but all persons driving cars must submit to the most careful tests. Owners of automobiles who take parties of friends out should be especially obliged, it is contended, to carry permits, only obtainable with great difficulty.

Western Canada Crop Above the Average

WINNIPEG, Aug. 5.—"No country in the world but Manitoba can do things like this," said W. A. Matheson, Winnipeg, manager of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, in reference to a splendid sample of this season's wheat, received at the company's office this morning. The sample referred to was sent in this morning from Morden, Man., and was grown on the farm of J. Petroff.

It was cut on Friday, August 1, and grades No. 1 Northern, and the average yield of the big field is twenty bushels to the acre.

"The harvest this year is so good, and the prospects so bountiful, that all the available help will be necessary, both that in the cities and from outside, if the crop is to be garnered in anything like reasonable time," said J. Bruce Walker, Commissioner for Immigration, this morning in answer to a query as to the demand for labor in Western Canada on the farms.

BAD FIRE NEAR TWEED

House, Barn and Blacksmith Shop of J. Sullivan, With Contents, Burned

On Friday afternoon fire, thought to be due to a flash of lightning, destroyed the residence and the barn and contents of Mr. J. Sullivan, of Farnsworth Corners, near Tweed, and later spread to a blacksmith shop adjoining and also owned by M. Sullivan, and it was totally destroyed. As soon as the fire was noticed a number of neighbors gathered but the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to save anything. Several horses, which were in the barn, were liberated but rushed back into the fire and were lost. The buildings and contents are a total loss, and it is stated that there is little insurance.

Man Murdered At Montreal Point

Victim's Companions Badly Gashed by Perpetrator who Escaped

MONTREAL, Aug. 5.—While trying to prevent the hurried exit of a trespasser from a yard in Conway street, Point St. Charles, last night, Robert Rolston, a corporation carter, of 30 Conway street, dropped dead on the sidewalk with a knife wound in his heart, and Michael Mullin, a master carter, living at 38 Conway street, in an attempt to grapple with the murderer of his freind, was so badly gashed on the arms that he had to be hurried to the General Hospital. The murderer succeeded in getting away and the one survivor of the stabbing admits that he has not the slightest idea of what the man looked like.

With no thought of the terrible danger to which he was exposing his friend, Mullin asked Rolston to stand at the entrance of the yard of his stables, 38 Conway street, while he went into the stable to investigate the report that a man was prowling about inside. When Mullin went in at one door of the stable the stranger came out at the far door, and running across the yard in an endeavor to get to the street, was stopped by Rolston. Rolston's arms never reached the trespasser, for quick as a flash his arm was raised, and a second latter Rolston dropped stabbed through the heart. Mullin by this time had gone to his friend's assistance, who cried out that he had been stabbed, and had grappled with the murderer, but the knife was brought into play again, and Mullin was forced to relinquish his hold with knife wounds on both his arms that cut muscles and severed vital arteries.

Barking Dog Saved Drowning Man

MONTREAL, Aug. 5.—A little yellow dog, of no particular breed or distinction saved the life of an unknown man at the dock yesterday morning. He did it in dog fashion too—by yelping long and loudly. It was just after seven o'clock that the watchman on board the "Manchester Corporation" saw the captain's little canine disappear down the gangplank to the shed, on his way to see Montreal by Sunday. The guard made a swift break after the pup, for it is the captain's treasure, and woe betide the man who allowed it to come to grief. The animal fled along the wharf to the outer end; the man was in hot pursuit.

Suddenly from the water beneath the end of the wharf there rose a chorus of lusty howls. It was a human voice. Peering over the side the watchman saw a man floundering in the thick water of the slip. He raced back to the vessel, and, catching up a piece of rope, he hurried back to the rescue of the struggling man. He dropped the line, and soon hauled him up on the deck, where it was seen that he was but little the worse of his adventure. He admitted then that he had been pretty drunk, and had been lying asleep on the edge of the wharf. Evidently he had rolled over in his slumber and plumped into the river. He was sober enough, however, when he was hauled to terra firma again.

SIR DONALD MANN OPTIMISTIC AS TO CROPS

Trip Through West Country Satisfies Him That the Wheat Yield This Year Will Break All Records and Relieve the Money Situation — Harvest Two Weeks Earlier.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—Sir Donald Mann of the C. N. R., was in his office yesterday after a 16-day trip across the continent—Toronto to Vancouver and back. He was accompanied by Col. Davidson of the land department of the Canadian Northern.

Sir Donald said that in the course of his journey—and he went by the C.P.R. and returned by the C.N.R.—he had taken special pains to look at the country and size up the crops and to talk with people all along the road and to their officials in the west in order to size up the harvest situation. This was his 29th year's experience of the crops of the west, beginning in the early days with those of Manitoba and then extending his observations to Saskatchewan and Alberta as these provinces came along, and the conclusion he had arrived at after his late inspection, after the conversations he had had and after receiving reports from all their officials throut the three provinces, was that the crop of 1913 would be the best average crop ever known to the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. It would be a bumper crop.

There were places here and there where the crop was poor, but that was where the farming was poor; but over the most of the three provinces there would be a bumper crop and a good average quality as well; and the harvest would begin two weeks earlier than last year. Also the increase in the acreage would be at least 10 per cent. on what it was last year. The harvest was going on already at points and by Aug. 15 the three provinces would be in the middle of harvest work. The labor conditions were also better this year for the farmer, he said, as there was not such a demand for men in railway construction as in former years.

Sir Donald admitted that there was a financial stringency in the west, as in other parts of Canada and all the world over, but he certainly expected that once the harvest was begun, and the good crop was in sight, conditions would improve and that a lot of money would get into circulation.

AGED MAN IS BEATEN

West Toronto Is Scene of a Murderous Assault.

Hugh Hasson, Aged 65, While Camping on Humber River, Is Found Unconscious and Taken to Hospital—Crowd of Roughs Thought to Be Responsible For Crime.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—Set upon by thugs and brutally beaten with clubs while sleeping in a lonely bush on the banks of the Humber River shortly after midnight Monday, Hugh Hasson, aged 65, of 106 Edwin avenue, West Toronto, lies in the Western Hospital at the point of death. His horse wandered to a store on West Bloor street yesterday afternoon and led children back into the woods where his master lay unconscious. Hasson's skull is [illegible] his arm. [illegible] No hope is held [illegible] for his recovery.

The county police are making every effort to track down the guilty parties, but so far have not unearthed a definite clue, but the police are now working in a direction from which results are expected. No information could be secured from the man as to his assailants, as he has not regained consciousness since entering the hospital.

Between the Humber River and Jane street and just south of Bloor street, there is a lonely piece of scrub bush. This part of the district is so seldom visited by people that it has been termed Deadman's Bush by residents.

Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock a horse with part of his harness on, came out of the woods near Gough's refreshment parlors on Bloor street, near the east bank of the river. One of Mr. Gough's children atempted to capture the animal, but it ran back into the bush. The children followed and had gone about 200 yards when the horse stopped. A short distance off they found Hasson lying face down in a pool of blood. Help was secured and the man carried to the refreshment parlors.

When County Constable George Simpson arrived on the scene, about an hour later, he immediately sent for an ambulance and a doctor. The officer then went into the woods and located Hasson's camp. This consisted of a small place built between two trees and sheltered by heavy tarpaulins and leaves. Heavy branches were fastened around the trees.

On the inside of the rude tent were found several stones covered with hair and blood and several large pools of blood were near one end. Two cards, one from a liquor store and the other from Bedford's express, 22 Brookfield avenue, were found.

Altho County Constable Simpson and River Constable R. D. Skidmore tried to get the man to give his name, all he could mumble was: "They beat me with clubs at midnight; they beat me with a club over a tub at midnight." He could not utter any other words or explain about the tub. Once he said: "It was a stut man that clubbed me." A short time after he said that his horse kicked him.

As to how the man met with the injuries which will likely cause his death the police cannot discover, but there is no doubt but that there was foul play. But the reference the man made to a horse kicking him has led to a theory given by those connected with the case which is thought to be pretty near the truth.

Many people have seen the man in the Humber district before, but none [illegible] his name. As far as could be learned he was a roamer and spent his life camping.

On Monday afternoon he came along Bloor street with his horse and wagon and went immediately into the woods. At 8 o'clock Monday night he was seen fishing on the bank of the river near the Old Mill by Constable [illegible].

It is supposed that the man returned to his camp, and shortly before midnight, came back to the river. This is a favorite spot for canoeists to land, and the man may have been fishing [illegible] while one or two canoeists suspected that he was there to spy upon them.

In case the man had encountered trouble at the river bank, it is possible that he was followed by one or more men, a fight ensuing, in which he was struck down with a beer bottle, kicked and then struck with stones, the thug or thugs then leaving him for dead.

Another theory is that the stranger had considerable money on his person. It is known that he worked for gardeners occasionally while passing thru the country, and he may have been held up in his tent and beaten with the [illegible] to [illegible] over his property. No valuables were found on his person when searched.

Should the man die, the aid of the provincial detectives will be invoked. The police hope that he will regain consciousness long enough to describe those who set upon him, and to tell of the affair.

WAS NEAR DERRICK

Witness at Whitby Gives Evidence Against Gamble.

Preliminary Hearing of Charge of Conspiracy Against Labor Man Elicits Testimony That He Was Seen to Act Suspiciously in Vicinity of Rope Which Had Been Tampered With.

WHITBY, Aug. 5.—In order to give Mr. Hartley Dewart time to go into his case, the crown this morning granted a week's adjournment of the trial of Stead Gamble, business agent for the Structural Ironworkers' Union, on a charge of injuring a rope that was to be used in scaffold work. Since the first hearing the charge has been amended by placing a value of $20 on the rope, so as to make the offence indictable.

Magistrate Jephson of Pickering this morning heard several witnesses, among them being William Black, engineer on the derrick at the Dixie bridge. Black swore to seeing Gamble talking with the men on the job in the vicinity of the derrick. He stated that he saw Gamble and a man named McCuaig sitting on a box near the derrick and observed Gamble's hand moving as tho he were spilling something out of a bottle and a minute or two afterwards he threw something away, which he supposed was a bottle. Then Gamble and his companion started throwing stones and sticks at the place where the bottle, which was produced in court, had been picked up.

J. J. Rogers, chemist, of Toronto University, gave results of a test of the rope. The samples submitted to him contained sulphuric acid, which had corroded and destroyed the fabric. Traces of sulphuric acid were also found in the bottle submited to him.

Joseph Jordan, a fireman on the job, Charles Douglas, timekeeper for the Hamilton Bridge Co., and Joseph Deschayes, an employe of the bridge company, corroborated Black's evidence about Gamble being around the work. The magistrate refused bail in ordering Gamble to be put back for a week.

FIREMEN HURT

Eight Members of London Department Thrown Off Truck.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 5.—(Can. Press.)—Eight firemen of the London Fire Department were more or less seriously injured at 3 o'clock this morning, when No. 2 auto fire truck was rammed by a locomotive at the William street crossing of the Grand Trunk Railroad while speeding to a fire.

The men had not a second's warning. The engine carried the truck along the track for 60 feet, when it was overturned, the men being buried beneath the hose. When the crew were taken out Fireman Percy Summers was found so seriously injured that he was taken to the hospital. The others were badly bruised, but are on duty this morning. The truck was a new one and valued at $7500 and was completely demolished. There was no insurance on it.

SENTENCES LIGHT

Corrupt German Officers Let Off Very Easily.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—Light sentences were imposed on the officers and men of the German Ordnance Corps who have been under trial by court-martial here for several days on charges of betraying military secrets, the acceptance of bribes and insubordination.

All were found guilty. Lieut. Tillan was sentenced to two months in prison, Lieut. Schleuder and Lieut. Hinst to four months each and Lieut. Hoge to 43 days. The first three lose their commissions, but Hoge remains in the army.

Chief Clerk Pfeiffer of the ordnance department was sentenced to six months in prison, Non-Commissioned Officer Schmidt to 2 1-2 months in prison and Non-Commissioned Officer Droese to three weeks' confinement in the barracks.

MADE NIGHT RAID

Inspector Rowell Successful in Blind Pig Expedition.

COBALT, Aug. 5.—(Special.)—Inspector Rowell, the new head of the provincial police in Timiskaming, accompanied by Provincial Constable J. Lefebore and Town Constable Sharpe, succeeded last night in landing a blind pigger in the Montreal River district, and another alleged one is under arrest.

For a couple of years the police and plainclothes men have been trying in vain to stop the importation of whiskey into this district and Silver Centre in South Lorrain. Several complaints were filed by the mines in the district, but the police and spotters were baffled. The party started out yesterday afternoon and went down Lake Timiskaming and up the Montreal River to the Gillies power house and then after dusk they stole into Lorrain and arrested Robert May and Arthur Valland. The police seized a quantity of whiskey and May was convicted and sentenced to four months.

At Gillies the officers waited until daybreak to accomplish their mission, but it was a successful one, and it is believed will put a stop to the daring illegal importation of whiskey which has been going on in this mining centre. Valland will be tried today.

Verdict Rendered on Death of R. Farmer

The inquest to enquire into the circumstances of the accident to Robert Farmer, which caused his death, was concluded last evening before Coroner Dr. Boyce. The evidence was brief in its nature and to the effect that Farmer was not seen upon the G. T. R. track when he was struck by shunting cars.

W. J. Pennell, sworn, testified that he was a brakesman and was on the west end of the train. Witness saw the deceased after the train struck him, but not before. He was evidently struck with the footboard of the engine. After the accident had happened the ambulance was summoned and the victim was taken to the hospital.

The evidence of T. Fraser was similar to that of Pennell.

James McGlashon testified that he was employed as a call boy at the G. T. R. station and on Friday night last saw Farmer walking on the track known as the yard engine track. This was about an hour before the accident. He appeared to be under the influence of liquor. He was alone. Witness said good night to the man, but he did not answer.

Dr. Yeomans testified that he was a practicing physician and medical officer for the G. T. R. He saw the deceased, Robert Farmer, at the hospital on Friday evening, August 1st. The deceased died on August 3rd as the result of injuries received in the G. T. R. yard here. He was unconscious at the time. On Saturday morning he partially gained consciousness and said his name was Robert Farmer. This was all he did say.

Some other evidence of an unimportant nature was given, and after a few words from Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, and the Coroner, the jury retired and brought in the following verdict:

"That Robert Farmer came to his death as the result of injuries received in the G. T. R. yard in Thurlow Township, by being struck by the footboard of a G.T.R. engine."

Religious Liberty Will be Ensured

(Special to The Intelligencer)

BUCHAREST, Aug. 5.—At the Balkan peace conference to-day M. Majoresco, president of the conference, read a note from the United States Government expressing a desire to see inserted in the Treaty of Bucharest a stipulation securing civil and religious liberty to the populations inhabiting territory which may be ceded or annexed. M. Majoresco remarked that such liberty was the law in every country participating in the peace conference, and all the heads of the various delegations agreed that it would be superfluous to think of inserting such a special clause in the treaty.

Wims & Co.'s New Store at Montreal

With a neatly put together half page advertisement in one of the Montreal papers, Wims & Co., formerly of this city, launched their new mercantile enterprise in that city last month. The lines of goods are similar to the business conducted in Belleville, and that the firm, with its habitual snap, will succeed, is a foregone conclusion. The store is located at 261 Laurier avenue, a growing section of the Canadian mercantile metropolis, where Mr. P. J. Wims and son William, will be pleased to serve "old customers as well as new." Doubtless many friends from this section will call at the new store when in town, and buy from force of habit. The North End Weekly, announcing the opening, says:

WHY ONE DEALER LOCATED HERE

We never tire of reminding our readers of the continuous growth of the North End and of Outremont residentially and commercially. Dealers have come from all parts of the city, and usually with an up-to-date knowledge of store service and public requirements, place before the people the pick of the markets at prices no higher, and often lower, than those of down town dealers.

And the opportunity for the retailer to meet a growing demand of generally high grade merchandise in this end of the city is being recognized by business men farther afield than our city limits. One of the latest arrivals to the business ranks of this locality, Mr. Wims, who was lately the proprietor of one of the largest provincial dry goods stores of Ontario, states that, before deciding upon the North End of Montreal, he went right through to the Pacific Coast searching for the most progressive residential community, and ultimately the North End of Montreal won out. It is nice to hear a succesful business man, as well as a globe-trotter, saying the same good things about the North End as we have always said.

Creditors Looking For Kingston Debtor

Where is S. P. Stratton, the Englishman who represented the Canadian Railroad Accident company in Kingston since the spring? He has disappeared leaving a number of creditors behind. About a month ago he was identified by a local insurance man and cashed a cheque on the Union Bank of Montreal at one of the Kingston banks. That day he paid a board and lodging bill for himself and wife, and left the city. He had not been seen since, with the exception of $15 he paid this account in cash, and gave a cheque for the difference. The cash he received by cheque at the local bank was $15. Both cheques were forwarded to the Union bank in Montreal for collection, but the local parties were advised that Stratton's account there would not cover the amounts.

SOME YANKEE HOT AIR

United States manufacturers are busy just now telling about the factories which they will establish in Canada. This is mostly bluff. There have been a largo number of branch factories established here, and the good work will go on. But such talk as is being made by Governor Foss, of Massachusetts, Senator Smoot, and others, says the Canadian Courier, tends only to becloud the issue.

The United States manufacturer wants President Wilson to use his tariff reform policy to secure a lowering of the Canadian tariff on manufactured goods. They see their own tariff tumbling down and the Canadian tariff staying up, and they do not like the spectacle. President Wilson could not make such a deal with Canada at the present time. The present Canadian Government would not discuss reciprocity in manufactured goods just now, and it is almost certain that if the Liberals were in power today they would adopt the same attitude. Canada's tariff on manufactured goods is just about one-half that of the United States, and until their rates are reduced to our level there is small chance of a fair reciprocity discussion.

United States sales to Canada have increased in recent years out of all proportion to their purchases of Canadian goods. This is proof that Canada's tariff is not too high to prevent United States manufacturers selling freely in Canada. Canada much prefers to have these foreign manufacturers establish branch factories here. The present Canadian tariff must stand for some years, with a few slight modifications made necessary by exceptional circumstances.

President Wilson knows the situation. He is not likely to listen to the outcry which the United States manufacturer is making with regard to the heinousness of the Canadian tariff or the crime of lowering the present ridiculous duties imposed by the United States Government on imports from other countries. His tariff reform bill will go through in spite of such opposition.

SAVING THE PEOPLE'S MONEY

The Minister of Militia and Defence as a result of the gross neglect of his Liberal predecessor in office, has been compelled to try and save some of the ammunition manufactured by the Quebec arsenal. An experiment in the form of regrinding will be tried. The ammunition so saved will be tested at Petewawa to see if the experiment is successful, and incidentally to obtain data for the guidance of the authorities in the shell factory. These tests began on August 4.

Another interesting change which will be made at Quebec will be the establishment under the control of Col. Hartson and the inspecting staff of a packing establishment. Hitherto the arsenal has boxed the ammunition, sending for test cartridges selected by itself. In future the cartridges will go out of the arsenal in bulk, loose, and the inspecting staff will make their own selection for testing, and on being satisfied, will themselves box the cartridges.

Major F. D. Laferty, R.C.A., has been appointed superintendent of the arsenal. Major Laferty did well in South Africa, distinguishing himself for hard work, intelligence and executive ability. In his addition to his record in the field, he holds the highest technical qualifications possessed by any officer in Canada in regard to ordnance manufacture. He recently spent two years at Woolwich, taking the usual ordnance college work for one year and in the second year qualifying himself for taking the severe "advanced course."

When the Liberal press talks of expenditure it ought to remember that much of it is caused by the mal-administration and the neglect of their leaders while in office. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been wasted by them in the Militia Department when an investigation such as that instituted by Col. Hughes would have saved the money.

LIBERALS WOULD BLOCK OCEAN FREIGHT ENQUIRY

The Daily Telegraph, the new newspaper in Montreal, which declared that it was founded to fight the battle of the people against privilege, lost no time in commenting upon the decision of the Borden Government to look into ocean freight rates. Did it express pleasure? Did it encourage this effort to find out whether too large a share of the producer's money goes into the pocket of the ship-owning middle man?

Not quite. It found difficulties. "Mr. Meighen," it said—for this is a subject to which the new Solicitor General has paid attention—"has a lot to learn yet about transportation. He has evidently quite overlooked the fact that Canada has no jurisdiction over shipping outside of the three-mile limit. He seems also to be unaware that steamships are not compelled to follow the same routes, as trains are, but are free to pick and choose traffic routes of any of the Seven Seas. What Mr. Meighen will realize, when he has given the matter more attention, is that most of our ocean traffic is eastbound, and that so long as this is so, westbound traffic is bound to be dearer. Ships cannot travel light for nothing. He will realize, too, that ocean tariffs are fixed on a world basis, and that even if Canada did succeed in forcing steamships to cut their rates, she has no guarantee that those steamships will stay with her, like the trains. They will go where they can get the most profitable business."

In a word, the Daily Telegraph instantly threw cold water on the proposal—discouraged it—sneered at it. Mark you, it is so far simply a proposal to investigate. The Daily Telegraph, the Simon-pure organ of Liberalism (and Montreal capitalism), the personal organ of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, at once prints the ship-owners' side of the case and attacks the proposal even to investigate.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Government showed signs of the same influence. In 1910 it had an idea that it would investigate the ocean freight rates, and made a suggestion to that effect to the British authorities. The British Government promptly and cordially agreed to help with an investigation. Then a strange thing happened: the Laurier Government dropped the subject like a hot potato. It had not the courtesy to answer the despatch of the British Government, though that Government cabled twice to know why Canada had dropped the project.

Now, why did the Laurier Government drop the idea of investigation so suddenly? And why does Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Montreal organ fly to arms as soon as an inquiry is proposed? Is the Montreal Street Railway interested in ocean steamship lines?

The need for such an investigation was pressed upon the Laurier Government by the late Chairman of the Railway Commission, their own appointee, Judge J. P. Mabee. This was in 1910 when the rise in rates had evoked protests from Boards of Trade and prominent merchants all over Canada. Mr. Richard Grigg, now Commissioner of Commerce, was then British Trade Commissioner in Montreal. Mr. Grigg prepared a memorandum on the ocean freight question, observing that the rise in rates constituted an impairment of the British Preference.

On February 12th a vigorous and plain-spoken memorandum was forwarded by Chairman Mabee of the Railway Commission who pointed out that the land haul was only one-third of the export wheat journey, and that if reductions of land freights were beneficial, reductions on the two-thirds distance across the ocean would be doubly so. "Every reduction made on land," said Judge Mabee, "gives the ocean carrier the opportunity to add to his charges." As to the method of control, the Chairman said, "An international tribunal consisting of the English Railway and Canal Traffic Commission and the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, or certain defined members of these Commissions could, by joint legislation, easily be empowered to control all these matters. Many details would have to be provided for, but there is no doubt Acts could be framed applying the general principles of railway rate controlling legislation to the ocean carrier."

The Laurier Government apparently thought there should be an investigation and representations were made to the British Government along that line. Then something happened. The Laurier Government hastily and completely changed its mind. When the British Government signified their willingness to go ahead with the investigation, the Laurier Government did nothing, said nothing, and let the whole thing drop.

CURRENT COMMENT

The differences between the Bulgarians and the Greeks and Servians over boundaries appear very trifling when compared with the number of lives that were sacrificed in the war over them.

The Borden Government is going to have the increase in ocean freight rates reduced or justified. But there isn't going to be any help from the Laurier politicians who talk against the "big interests" and work for them.

The promised big reduction in the public debt has taken place. You will now hear the Liberal editors shouting that the people are being over-taxed. Is there any way of satisfying a Liberal in Canada? Yes, office.

Connecticut is to try the experiment of abolishing free lunches. New York tried it during the early stages of the Raines law and repealed the prohibition when it was found to serve no reformatory purpose. The only duty of the state is to see that the food is clean.

Brantford Courier: "The Toronto Globe reaffirms with much emphasis that it still sticks to reciprocity, and hopes to see it adopted next election. Some kind friend ought to take the organ aside and inform it in gentle terms that the movement is good and dead—in fact was still born."

• • •

United States capitalists are pouring money into Canada for the employment of Canadian workmen. If they had got away with their little reciprocity trick, with the simple help of Laurier & Co., they would have used this money for the industrial development of their own country.

Montreal Herald: "It is rumored that Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, may take up his residence in Montreal. We don't want Johnson; he is not a desirable citizen, but if he is bound to come, we have one or two citizens of some years standing—to mention no names—whom we will be willing to trade for him."

Montreal Herald: "The emergency produces the man. The summer of 1913 bade fair to come to a close without one good, big, original whopper of a fish story until an obscure individual in Coaticook rose to national fame by picking up an eleven pound bass just after it was struck by lightning. We think that will about do for this year." Is this a joke?

Manitoba Free Press: "The Liberal defeat in North Grey has started a very brisk discussion as to the political wisdom of the policy of banish the bar which is avowed by the provincial Liberal party in Ontario. The nature of the controversy confirms the diagnosis made by the Free Press at the time of the election. It was the temperance people, much more than the Liberals, who were on trial in North Grey. They were tried and they were found wanting." It was the temperance people under the wing of the Liberals, and the combination was rejected.

WHEN MELBA WAS SNUBBED

Local music lovers in Ottawa and other Canadian cities, are greatly anticipating the visit of Mme Melba toward the end of next month, especially as she is conisdered to be at her best this season.

Mme. Melba's first appearance on the operatic stage was in Brussels, as Gilda in "Rigoletto." From the first she was announced as a "star", and the result more than justified this unusual course with a new singed. Mme. Melba had had but three stage rehearsals, but her success was emphatic, and the morrow found her famous. European managers hurried to Brussels to hear her, while the Belgian papers accepted her as a singer born to greatness. On this occasion Mme. Melba sang in Italian instead of French, the official tongue of the Brussel's stage, but this fact was overlooked by the critics in their enthusiasm over her glorious voice.

Mme. Melba's second opera in Brussels was "Traviata". Referring to this appearance Mme, Melba has said:—"How little I then realized the pitfalls and difficulties of the career I had chosen. The opinion of the management and the criticism of 'Rigolette' had been highly gratifying, so I was given the leading role in 'Traviata'. The vocal demands of this part, although so heavy, I could reasonably fill, but the stage requirements were exceptionally exacting for a novice, and one of the papers the next day dwelt upon my evident inexperience. This was the first paper I saw, and although the others were full of generous encouragement, I could not forget the snub. I cried almost incessantly for a week. Then I took heart again and threw myself into my studies with fresh vigor."

It took Mme. Melba a surprisingly short time, however, to perfect herself histrionically, as she already had vocally. To-day she is regarded not only as the foremost singer of the operatic stage, but one of the greatest of living actresses.

Mme. Melba's third Belgian appearance was in Donietti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." Her previous success were further emphasized, while her singing in the Mad Scene made an extraordinary impression. Next came Delibes' opera "Lakme", which she sang in French; an achievement which necessitated six hours' daily study of the language under a leading instructor. To-day there are few more perfect masters of the French language than Mme. Melba. She closed her season in Brussels in "Hamlet", a performance which led the composer, Ambroise Thomas, to call her "the Ophelie of my deams."

What This Sectional Firepot Means to You

The "Sunshine" has a straight-sided semi-steel firepot, extra heavily ribbed and made in two sections. The two sections allow for contraction and expansion—which prevents cracking. The heavy ribs and semi-steel give extra strength and added radiating surface. Ashes cannot adhere to the straight sides which assures an all-over clear fire. This means the greatest heat from the fuel consumed.

These are some of the advantages of the Sunshine Furnace. Our agent will be pleased to show you others, or write for booklet.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

THE RING.

WELLS BEAT IRISH CHAMPION

London, Aug. 5.—Bombardier Wells knocked out Pat O'Keefe, welterweight champion of Ireland, in the fifteenth round of a bout held in the Blackfriars district last night.

IS UNDECIDED

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 5.—Willie Ritchie has been offered matches on Labor day with Tommy Murphy at San Franscisco, and Freddie Welsh at Victoria, B. C. He has not decided which offer to accept.

RIVERS AND CROSS HAVE SIGNED

Los Angeles, Aug 5.—Leach Cross and Joe Rivers were matched late yesterday for a 20-round bout on Labor Day at Vernon Arena. It is a part of the present plan to have the winner of the Cross-Rivers match meet Willie Ritchie on Thanksgiving day provided the champion retains his title on Labor Day.

LANGFORD TO FIGHT JOHNSON

Boston, Aug. 5.—Sam Langford, the Boston tar baby, through his manager, Joe Woodman, today confirmed the rumor that he had agreed to meet Jack Johnson in Paris this fall to settle the question of the heavyweight championship of the world. According to the announcement, the fight is to go 20 rounds. Johnson is to receive a $30,000 guarantee win, lose or draw, and Langford is to receive 25 per cent. of the gross receipts. Leading fight promoters estimate that the fight will draw more than $100,000 at the gate.

PUTS BAN ON JACK JOHNSON

Brussels, August 4.—Jack Johnson may soon be without a country to fight in. England does not want him. He cannot return to America because of the sentence for white slavery hanging over his head. France harbors him, but not enough to allow him to mix with the guests in first class hotels. Now Belgium has put the ban on him.

Following the announcement that the champion was to give boxing exhibitions in Belgium, the minister of justice yesterday issued an order that all boxing contests in the future should be investigated. This move was made to prevent faking in matches. The hue and cry against Johnson's exhibiting in Belgium became so great, however, that the minister of justice was forced to issue another edict. To-day he put the lid down on all boxing. No further matches whether between blacks or whites or mixed, will be allowed to be staged in the kingdom.

GRANEY PICKS LIST OF THE GREATEST FIGHTERS

Eddie Graney, the San Francisco referee, has given out a list of the world's greatest fighters. Graney has refereed or been connected in some way with scores of the most famous fights on record. Here is Graney's classification:

Greatest heavyweight fighters—Peter Jackson and James J. Corbett.

Best Welters—Joe Walcott and Tommy Ryan.

Best lightweights—Jack McAuliffe and Johnny Herget.

Best featherweights—George Dixon and Terry McGovern.

Greatest bantam champion—George Dixon.

Hardest hitters in the history of the ring—Bob Fitzsimmons, Joe Choynski and Kid McCoy.

Gamest men he ever saw—Joe Choynski, Jimmy Britt, Bat Nelson and Jack Dempsey.

Best trainers and seconds—Billy Delaney, Spider Kelly and Tim McGrath.

Most successful managers—Billy Britt and Billy Nolan, Britt getting more publicity for his fighter than any other manager, Nolan more money.

This is an interesting list. Possibly Graney's leaning toward Corbett as one of the two greatest heavyweights might be explained by his personal friendship for the ex-champion, who was born and brought up in the same part of San Francisco that developed Graney himself. Corbett's record is not startling. He made great fights against Choynski Peter Jackson, John L. Sullivan and Charles Mitchell. But he weighed 192 to Choynski 178! Sullivan was past his prime; Peter Jackson had a sprained ankle and stood on one spot, pivoting on one foot as Corbett danced around him for 61 rounds; Mitchell weighed only 142 pounds. After this Corbett was beaten by Fitzsimmons, Sharkey and Jeffries in turn. It doesn't look like the record of a "greatest champion"

"Dempsey was the greatest middleweight when weight is considered," says Graney. "When he beat Billy McCarty for the championship he weighed only 139 pounds." Of negro boxers, Graney says: "Of all the greatest colored fighters, no others equaled Peter Jackson, Joe Walcott and George Dixon."

The gamest thing he ever saw was in the Corbett-Choynski fight on a barge in San Pablo bay. Joe had been badly beaten up. His legs became cramped so that he could hardly stand. Both eyes weer closed tight. In the interval before the twenty-fourth round Jack Dempsey whispered to Graney, suggesting that they had better throw up the sponge. Choynski, swaying in his corner, groped around and finding Graney, leaned over and whispered into his ear, "Don't let them throw up the sponge, Eddie; I'd rather be killed than that." Corbett won in the twenty-seventh round.

"Either," declares Graney,, "could have whipped any man in the world at that time, barring only Peter Jackson. Partly as a result of that battle, Corbett never fought above 178 pounds afterwards; Choynski above 165. I have often wondered what these men might have done afterwards in the ring if they hadn't fought each other.

BASEBALL.

BROOKLYN LANDS RUELBACH

Brooklyn, N. Y. Aug. 5.—Word was received in Brooklyn to-day that Bill Dahlen, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Johnny Evers, of the Cubs, made a trade in Chicago yesterday whereby Pitcher Eddie Stack goes to the Cubs in exchange for Big Ed. Reulback. The trade takes effect immediately.

WON'T LAST LONG

New York, Aug. 5.—Joe Boehling, Clark Griffith's young southpaw, will not last long in the big leagues, in the opinion of Frank Chance, manager of the New York Yankees.

"Four out of five balls Boehling throws are curves," said Chance to-day. "He will be through in a couple of seasons. It doesn't matter how strong a man is, he can't confine himself to a curve ball and stay in fast company long. Griffith might as well use him all he can now, for he won't have many seasons."

PREMATURE PUBLICITY KILLS BIG DEAL

Pittsburgh, Aug 5.—Too much publicity, it is alleged, spoiled the proposed player deal between the Brooklyn and Cincinnati clubs. Because Garry Herrmann is said to have given out the details to a certain Cincinnati newspaper before the transfer was anywhere near completed, Manager Dahlen of the Superbas became peeved and called everything off.

It seems that Dahlen's first proposition to Joe Tinker was an even trade of Elmer Knetzer for George Suggs. Knetzer is on Brooklyn's ineligible list, because he refused to report this spring. The National commission refused to allow the Kretzer-Suggs deal because Knetzer is barred for playing outlaw ball with the federal league.

Then Dahlen made the proposition of Suggs for Moran. Tinker asked also for a pitcher, and Stack was agreed upon, but when Dahlen saw the story in a Cincinnati paper, he felt that he had not been fairly dealt with and called things off.

That's Dahlen's version of it, at any rate. Another story has it that the deal would have gone through, but for the interference of Mr. Ebbets. The Brooklyn magnate has aways claimed that Dahlen had free rein in dealing with the players, but he usually sticks a chubby finger in the pie when one is about to be cut.

ATHLETICS.

BOTH MADE RECORDS

New York, Aug. 5.—Patrick McDonald the traffic policeman and Matt McGrath a former fellow officer, both heroes of the Olympic games, are unofficially credited with new world's records in the shot put and hammer throwing in the exhibition games at the Police Traffic Squads Benevolent society yesterday. McDonald put the 16 pound shot an even 53 feet, two feet better than the record, and McGrath threw the 16 pound hammer 190 feet 10 inches, exceeding the record by 3 feet 6 inches.

JOHNNY EVERS

"The brains of the infield," Johnny Evers, second baseman of the Chicago Cub team, has been called. Evers is a great ball player; one of the greatest infielders of the day in fact. Despite his crabbed disposition he is popular with his teammates, if not with outsiders with whom he comes into contact.

PLAYED FOR SPORT

First Professional Baseball Team Got Insignificant Salaries

In 1869 the first profession ball club in the world was organized. It was the famous Cincinnati Reds, the pioneer paid baseball club, in whose existence the game as it is to-day had its inception.

In 1869 this club played through the entire season, from March 15 till November 15, and never lost a game It finished the season with a standing of 1,000. Its pay roll for the year, including every cent that went to the players in salaries, was $9,500.

There were 10 players on the club of which one was a pitcher, Asa Brainard, and another was a substitute The average salary per player was less than $1,000, or, to be exact, $950 The highest paid man was Georg Wright, the shortstop, who got $1,400 Captain Harry Wright got $1,200 fo his share. The pitcher, who wen through the season with a clean record, got $1,100. Six men drew $800

And Hans Wagner in more moder times was paid a cool $10,000 for ga loping around somewhere betwee second and third, hitting the ball an running the bases. Ty Cobb is sai to get $12,500. Some difference!

Here's the salary of the first professional ball club, taken from the ledger of the treasurer:

Harry Wright, captain	$1,20
George Wright, shortstop	1,40
Asa Brainard, pitcher	1,10
Fred. Waterman, third-base	1,10
Charles Sweasy, second-base	80
Charles Gould, first-base	80
Douglas Allison, catcher	80
Andrew Leonard, left field	80
Calvin McVey, right field	80
Richard Hurley, substitute	80

Sentimental Burglars

Sentiment is believed to have deterred burglars who broke open the safe in the station ticket office in Lachine Que., from carrying off a handsome silver tea set in a silver-mounted case which was part of the express matter stored in the safe. The police found that the case had been broken open but that its contents had been left untouched. In it was a card showing that the tea set was a birthday gift to W. Walls of Lachine from his mother, and it is thought that even the temptation to take the silver was overcome by the message of love written by the mother on the card. They took 23 cents in cash and the station agent's watch.

How to Store Bread

It is well known that one of the chief causes of embarrassment to those who make and sell bread lies in the knowledge that loaves which may be left on hand at the close of a day will be regarded as stale on the following day, and as too stale to be saleable on the second day after being baked. Sir William Ramsay recently pointed out a way to change this, and by a process which is now regarded as a very simple and ordinary one—that of placing loaves at night in a small cold room or refrigerator, in which they may be kept until the following day.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursion—This Year's Wheat Crop will be the Largest in THE HISTORY OF CANADA

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greaest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

Spain Brought Us Horses.

The Spaniards were the first to bring horses to this continent, though the paleontologists tell us that the rocks abound with fossils which show that equidae were numerous all over America in the eocene period. It is a singular fact, however, that there were no horses in America when the first Europeans came hither.

WEATHER FORECATS FOR AUGUST

BY IRL R. HICKS

A regular storm period covering the 2nd to the 7th, having its centre on the 4th, we may expect all the phenomena usually attending such periods at this season of the year. The influences of the Mercury and Venus periods will also be felt in the storm and changes at this time. The moon will be new, or in conjunction with the sun and earth, on the second, in perigee, or nearest the earth, on the 3rd, and on the celestial equator on the 5th, all of which will, to a marked degree, intensify storm and seismic disturbances during this period. A wave of excessively high temperature will appear in western sections as early as the 1st, the barometer will fall to very low readings, cloudiness will rapidly ensue, and storms of rain thunder and wind will organize and start on their eastward march cross the country. On and touching the 3rd, 4th and 5th dangerous storms are probable, and no reader of these consequences, especially in northern and northwestern parts of the country. Harvests in the northwestern states will be endangered by great hail storms on and about the days named. Black and ominous clouds, with phenomenal lightning and thunder, even where there is little or no rainfall, will appear at this time. Our hygrometer is the thing to consult, if you wish to know how much rainfall is coming with the clouds, at this period or any other storm period. Change to much cooler from about the 6th to 9th.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 10th, 11th and 12th, being at the centre of the mercury period. Tendency to thick, general cloudiness, with light, drizzling mist and rain for several days, is characteristic of these mercury disturbances, causing heavy sleet in cold weather. Good rains and heavy storms attend these mercury periods when combined with other astronomic causes. Much cooler weather often follows mercury storms.

A regular storm period is central with the full moon on the 16th, covering the 4th to 26th. Marked rise in temperature, and falling barometer will be advancing from the west on the 14th and 16th, and threatening, August thunder storms will strike many and wide sections, as they move eastward across the country. Heat, with rain, hail and thunder will reach a maximum over central to northwestern states on and touching the 19th. By this time earth's autumnal equinox will begin to make itself felt, and equatorial, or West India hurricanes would not be an unusual result. It will be wise to watch barometric conditions in all the gulf and south Atlantic coasts regions at this time. These West India storms sometimes do their most destructive work in August, as the sun sinks southward toward the equator, just as they do in February as the sun approaches the Venral Equinox. There is a vast difference in watching and being prepared, even when no such storms appear, than in paying no attention to the matter and being surprised and overwhelmed by a great cyclone. A seismic period in which you will feel or read about earthquakes is central on the 16th, reaching from the 13th to the 20th. The usual high barometer, attended by westerly winds and change to cooler will push close behind the western sides of these storms.

A reactionary storm period will centre on and touching the 22nd and 23rd, leaving but little intermission between this and the preceding period. Cloudy and threatening conditions will continue into this period, increasing into more decided and general storms of rain, thunder and wind on and about the 22nd and 23rd. The regular change to rising barometer and cooler will succeed these storms.

A regular storm period will extend from the 25th to the 30th, having its centre on the 27th. We will name the 27th, 28th and 29th as dates on which disturbances will culminate, being preceded and followed by the usual first and last stages of a regular storm period. Your barometer may render you a vitally important service at his and other August periods. Remember, all we have said about August storm and weather may be true with much less rainfall than you would wish. An earthquake period is central on the 31st, covering the 28th to September the 4th. Look for many and severe quakes and volcanic outbursts. Readers will take notice that there are three eclipses from August the 31st, to September the 29th—a partial eclipse of the sun on August 31st, a total eclipse of the moon on September the 15th, and a partial eclipse of the sun again on September the 29th. This gives us two eclipses of the sun within one month, or at two successive new moons, and an eclipse of the moon at the full moon which intervenes between the two eclipses of the sun. All these, it must be remembered, are in the midst of the autumnal equinox, bringing the moon on the celestial equator at the times of the eclipses. Under this astronomic condition, we venture to forecast phenomenal earthquakes, valcanic activity, tidal waves and hurricanes, all within and near the compass of the three eclipses.

WESTERN CANADA

A BUMPER WHEAT CROP

THOUSANDS OF MEN REQUIRED

This Year's Harvest promises to be be the largest in THE HISTORY OF CANADA

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

Never call any man a liar to his teeth unless they are false.

CHURCH FUNDS VANISH

Priests Alleged to Have Disappeared With Them

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Aug. 5.—That their pastor, Rev Andrew Ryczek had absconded with about $100, the funds of the parish, is the report made to their bishop in Scranton, Pa., by the worshippers in the Independant Catholic church of this city.

The priest has disappeared and the parishoners state that he had in his possession that amount of cash, the property of the church, when he went.

The life of the church has been one of strife since its organizers came here several months ago. The parishioners are all Polish, recruited, for the greater part, from the Church of the Sacred Heart, Roman Catholic.

At the first meeting a factional disturbance occurred and the police were compelled to the quell the riot with clubs.

Rev. Ryczek came here as pastor. The funds of the church were low and at his request a bazaar was held. The directors say he never made an accounting of the money received through the bazaar and they claim he never accounted for money he collected from his flock.

FIRST HUNGER-STRIKERS

The hunger strikes of the suffragists represent the revival of a very old and once widespread custom, known in the East as dharna (or dhurna) baithna, or "sitting dharna." This custom was once very common in India, but is now almost obsolete. It was chiefly resorted to in order to force payment of a debt. The creditor would sit at the debtor's door and taste no food until his claims were satisfied. If the debtor allowed the creditor to starve it was believed that he laid himself liable to supernatural punishment, especially if the starver happened to be a Brahmin; accordingly, Hindus of lower caste would sometimes engage a Brahmin to starve for them. The custom was much abused, being used to levy blackmail upon persons who were not debtors at all. It also gave rise to various analogous practices, for instance, that of certain beggars in the Punjab, known as "strap-riggers," who twist a leather strap around the neck and throw themselves on the ground before a shop until alms are given them. Again, in order to obtain compliance with some demand a person would threaten to commit suicide or kill one of his own children unless his wish was granted. All such practices are forbidden by the Indian Penal Code.

An identical custom once prevailed in Ireland, and is frequently mentioned in the Brehon laws. It is recorded that St. Patrick "fasted upon" Loegaire, the heathen over-king of Ireland, until the latter embraced Christianity, and in accordance with the superstitions of the times the king and his family felt it incumbent upon them to fast at the same time until this test of endurance was won by the saint.

HUNGRY LAW MAKERS

Embarrassing Rules Prevailed for Time in Commons' Tea-room

The new regulations of the Kitchen Committee of the British House of Commons with reference to the particular classes of eatables that may be supplied in the members' tea-room have been revised, but in the interval there were some heartburnings and amusing experiences. Two members coming down from one of the Committee rooms decided to have tea together, and therefore repaired to the tea-room. One of them ordered tea, toast, and fruit, the other called for tea, bread and butter, and a boiled egg. It transpired, however, that eggs were no longer available in the tea-room, so the two members retired to the dining-room, where they were dismayed to learn that tea was no longer served. Here was a problem for statesmen, and they proceeded to solve it by directing a waiter to collect the different refreshments in the different rooms and convey them to the smoking-room. The waiter did so, but at the entrance to the smoking-room he was stopped by the superintendent with the announcement that eggs and fruit were not allowed to be supplied in that room. The hungry and thirsty legislators vainly sought to discover any person in authority who could tell them where and when and under what conditions they could eat what they wanted to eat, and, baffled at every point, they at last decidedd to confine their repast to tea and toast. One of them was heard to say something about the advisability of "hanging the Kitchen Committee with their own red tape."

ORDER OF THE THISTLE

Knighthood Conferred by the King on Lord Haldane

The King directed that Lord Haldane of Cloan be appointed a Knight of the Thistle, in succession to the late Earl of Crawford.

The Thistle is one of the most coveted orders of knighthood, and dates back several centuries. Its Knights number twenty-three. They include the King and the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Agyll, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Marquis of Zetland, Lord Aberdeen, and Lord Rosebery.

A Generous Prince

The Crown Prince of Germany decided to spend the profits from the sale of his book, "From a Sportsman's Diary," in providing a three weeks' holiday for one hundred boys attending the Berlin elementary schools. The boys were selected from the poorest class, and were quartered in the barracks of the Prince's regiment at Langfuhr, near Dantzic, which locality combines the advantages of country and seaside.

Famous Men's Hair

Locks of hair from the heads of three men famous in English literature were sold at Sotheby's. That of Milton realized only $14.00, Dean Swift's brought no higher bid than $9.00, and the tress of Dr. Johnson was knocked down for $7.10.

A French invention of phonograph records on a prepared cloth, which may be mailed like a letter, threatens to seriously rival stenographers.

BROCKVILLE'S WHITE WAY INAUGURATED.

Brockville, Ag. 7.—Special—Brockville's new white way was inaugurated last night with the turning on of seventy-three cluster lights placed on both sides of King street between Park street and Kingston Bridge.

The 41st Band gave a promenade concert, and thousands of people were on the street.

The poles have all been removed from the north side, and with the new pavement the street presented a pretty appearance.

"Wild West" Woman Visits Odgensburg

OGDENSBURG, Aug. 6.—A great deal of excitement was caused on the principal street of this city yesterday, by the appearance of a woman dressed in Wild West style and carrying in a cartridge belt a loaded revolver. She had been granted a license to carry the gun some time ago by Recorder Corcoran, when she stated that she worked at nights and was afraid to be on the streets at a late hour without a means of defence against some persons, whom, she claimed, persisted in annoying her.

She gave her name as Laura Jones and address as Division street. She was disarmed and taken to the police station. She showed the Recorder the license he had granted her, and he immediately revoked it and tore up the paper. He said, while tearing up the license, that "he did not grant the license for the purpose of giving the woman a right to hold a minature Wild West show on the city streets and that he had given it to her with the undersanding that it was to be used in self-defence only."

NEVER KISSED? ABSURD! SAYS MRS. A. QUENSEL

Charming Lady from Sweden Laughs over the Reports That She Belongs to the Continental Anti-Kissing League—Attending Geological Congress.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—Special—We read that Dr. Quesnel and Mrs. Quesnel of the University of Upsala, Sweden, who are in attendance at the International Geological Congress here, were strict adherents to the rules of the Continental Anti-Kissing League, and that they had never kissed one another nor anyone else. When we asked for Mrs. Quesnel at the University yesterday afternoon, and were told "Why, I don't know where she is, but there is her husband," we glanced about us, selected from the group of busy men a cadaverous appearing individual who looked as though his wife might never kiss him, and said:

"Ah—yes, I see—that gentleman!"

Our feminine intuition would have told us instantly that he was the one!

"Oh, no, no," corrected our informant, "The tall one."

"Oh!"

He was tall, indeed, and extremely good looking, and we began to disbelieve. When he began to speak to us, in delightful English, with just enough foreign accent to add charm, our doubts doubled. But when we had taken his advice, hied us to Annesley Hall and beheld Mrs. Quesnel, we knew the story was untrue.

"Oh, those absurd stories," she laughed; "there isn't one word of truth in them, not one."

"How dreadful!" we sympathized.

"Oh, no, not dreadful," this lovely lady replied, "only funny."

"But however, did they get such a story?" we wondered.

"I cannot imagine," with a shake of the head. "It isn't as though there were one atom of truth in it. I have not even spoken to a reporter before, excepting one German in New York, to whom I said only a few words because I could not escape him. But that sort of thing—oh, it is absurd. Some people say 'Why do you not deny it?' But what is the use? I say, let them have their fun; it really doesn't matter,"

What Mrs. Annie T. Quesnel really is, is a very beautiful and charming young zoologist from the University of Upsala, where her husband is professor of zoology.

"I am only here on my husband's account," she explained. "I just came today, but he has been here since June, preparing for the Congress."

Toronto Honored By General Booth

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—Commissioner David M. Rees, head of the Salvation Army in Canada and Newfoundland has returned from London, England, where he has been in conference with Bramwell Booth. The coming visit of the New general to Canada and the Canadian representation at the International Congress to be held in London next year, were among the important items under discussion.

Toronto will be the first city at which General Booth will conduct public gatherings on the American continent and the demonstrations to be arranged for this occasion will be the largest ever held by the Salvation Army.

Next week Commissioner Rees and Colonel Maidment, the Chief Secretary, will leave for St. John, Nfld., to conduct the annual congress.

CANADIAN MINISTERS AT COMMITTEE OF IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

London, Aug. 6.—The Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, and the Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, attended yesterday's meeting of the committee of Imperial Defence over which Premier Asquith presided.

Kick Shins of Man With Slit Trousers

PITTSBURG, Aug. 6.—A martyr to fashion, W. Leffingwell Doak, a member of the North Side gentility, was mobbed by a gang of newsboys in Fifth avenue. Doak was the first wearer of the prophesied slit trousers.

When the boys saw the innovation they gathered about Doak, voicing complimentary criticisms. Finally they began to jostle him and kick him in the shins. At sight of a policeman they scattered.

Doak's trousers were of a light check material. The slit extended from the bottom outside to about six inches from the knee. Bright green hoisery of the length women wear were disclosed.

At the national convention of tailors at Cedar Point, O., last week, it was predicted that slit trousers would come into vogue.

Passenger Dead Conductor Asks In Vain for Fare

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A young and well dressed man swung abroad a trolley car in Newark last evening, and for a brief time sat in a rear seat, then got up and moved forward in the car where the wind swept in refreshingly through he open front door.

He leaned forward, resting his arm on the back of the seat in front of him and then rested his forhead on his arm. The other hand he clasped against the side of his face. When the conductor, John Manning, approached to collect his fare, the passenger gave him no heed.

Maning called out, "Fare, please!" The man still remained motionless.

Then Manning shook the man. The arm, released from the pressure of the passenger's head, suddehly flew out and struck the conductor full in the face.

Manning, indignant, reached for the seated man to eject him from the car, but the hand he put forward stopped short. For the head of the man in the seat was lolling queerly forward on his breast and Manning saw that his eyes were staring.

"Why, the man is dead!" said another passenger, and several women passengers, hearing it, became hysterical.

As the car on its journey to Hackensack was passing through Kearny, the conductor stopped it in front of the home of Dr. George Marks. The physician said the man was dead, and from a superficial examination thought heart disease had killed him.

The body was removed to the morgue, and through papers in the pockets the man was identified as John Lentz, twenty-eight years old, a well-to-do business man, of East Rutherford. He had just established a home of his own in Prospect place, Rutherford, where a few weeks ago he took a bride.

LORD ROCKSAVAGE WEDS.

London, Aug. 6—Lord Rocksavage, heir of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, and Miss Sybil Sassoon were married at a registry office today.

Lord Rocksavage, who is thirty-one years old, is a sportsman of note, and is very rich, while his bride is accredited with having a fortune of $10,000,000 in her own right.

Not A Farmer Has Complained

Conditions, Therefore, in Mid-Saskatchewan can be Held Nearly Perfect.

YORKTON, Sask., Aug. 6.—With the weather ideal, harvesting almost here and the grain looking in splendid shape, the western farmers and business men are chirping up. They are not only becoming optimistic over the outlook; they are becoming enthusiastically so. All that the west asks now is about two weeks more of good weather. Even although the weather is good the west is still nervous and will be until the binders start humming. The west does not forget that last year the weather was fine until August first, when it turned cold and wet. They still fear a repetition. For bad weather now would upset every prediction.

During the past week I have been all through Northern Saskatchewan, and I found the crops generally good. In some places they are later than others. Along the main line of the C. N. R. from Warman to Canora, the crops are only fair and they are late. It will take three weeks from now to ripen them properly. Along the line from Warman to Battleford the crops are more advanced. A little further south in the Yorkton district the crops are as fine as any place in the west and harvesting will be in full swing by August 18.

When you can't find a farmer with a kick on the crops, you can take it for granted that they are just about perfect.

George Stoer, Lineman Killed at Oshawa

OSHAWA, Aug. 7.—(Special).—Mr. George Stoer, a first-class lineman, and foreman of a gang working on the wires of the Seymour Power Company on Simcoe street south was instantly killed when he came into contact with one of the live wires. These wires carry the electricity from Trenton which supplies the town.

Stoer was working on the pole altering one of the wires, when, it is thought he slipped and his hands touched a wire and he fell across it, having a hole burned across his chest.

THE MANUFACTURER WHO HELPS YOU.

Mutual is the interest of the retailer and manufacturer.

They both live through service—the better the service the more they prosper.

Service consists not only in having what the people want, but in letting them know you have it.

Consumers are newspaper readers. Every reader of today's Intelligencer is a possible customer.

They may want the very thing that you have—but if they don't know you have it—the want is unsatisfied.

The short cut from factory to consumer is through consistent, definite newspaper advertising in which the name of a reputable retailer is linked. Such advertising reaches the people at once.

It reaches them at the psychological moment when they want the goods.

It sells the goods, profiting manufacturer, retailer and consumer.

Merchants and manufacturers interested in local advertising for nationally distributed articles are invited to write to the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, World Building, New York.

CONTRACTORS CHARGED

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—Fallon Bros. of Cornwall, who have the contract from the Dominion Government for the construction of a causeway across the Kingston harbor, have been summoned to the Police Court by one of their employees, who charges that they are working their men ten hours instead of eight, as required by contract with the Government. The complainant refuses to accept his pay cheque, and the charge is non-payment of wages.

A PUZZLER

A Chapman lad submits the following query:—"Sir—If a fly flies toward the front end of a railway coach travelling 50 miles an hour, does the fly have to fly 50 miles an hour to keep from being swatted by the rear end of the car?"

Miss Flo Robinson, English Esquestrienne, with Sells-Floto Circus

Oh! You Circus Day

Next to Dominion Day and Christmas comes Circus Day. The big Sells-Floto struck town this morning. It came down the Grand Tracks in two sections. A vast army of small boys (as well as a few of the older ones) served as the reception committee.

The work of unloading required but a few minutes when the trains were forsaken for the circus grounds on Pine street, where the savory smell of the cook house soon pervaded the atmosphere. All during the morning the grounds were alive with interested spectators watching Billy Curtis, the master mechanic, (the circus doesn't permit him to be called boss canvasman) erect the various tents which, by the way, are carried on a huge wagon built in the shape of a spool from which the tents are unrolled.

Shades of Dan Rice! Can you imagine a circus tent being erected and wafted to the merry winds in four and a half minutes. That is what Billy's machine does and it is worked by a gasoline engine. At promptly 11.00 the "gorgeous, golden, glittering street pageant" took place, however, the streets were crowded at an earlier hour. When the parade moved through the business streets to the music of the five circus bands, including the Denver Boy Scouts Mounted Band on coal-black steeds, as well as the perennial steam calliope and a giant mechanical organ on wheels, the curbstones were lined with interested spectators. It was a great parade—that's what everybody said. Sells-Floto have always carried good horses, beautiful cages, dens and circus trappings, but this season they seem brighter and better than ever. Such horses have seldom been seen on the streets of Belleville before.

As to the performance, there was something doing in the three rings and the large steel arena all the time. Mlle. Lucia Zora, the lady elephant trainer, whose photograph graced the pages of Collier's Weekly a few weeks ago, gave a wonderful exhibition of her ponderous pets, and dainty Margaret Recardo was as much at ease with a troupe of performing lions and tigers as the average woman is in her home. The Devlin Zouaves and the Royal Scots Pipe Band of Toronto are real circus novelties that won rounds of applause. The Australian Waites in bull-whip manipulation gave a wonderful exhibition with whips ranging from 6 to 75 feet in length. Among the feats accomplished by the wonderful pair of artists is the discharging of a pistol at a distance of 60 feet by the aid of a crack of the whip.

Clowns—well, there were forty of 'em. Their burlesque included a suffragette parade and speech and an aerial wedding which was ludicrous. One of them dressed in a real Parisian gown seemed to find many suitors before the performance started and a Parcel Post clown carrying everything from a package of pins to a real live baby, searched the entire tent for Mrs. Newlywed. Take it all in all, the circus is up to the Sells-Floto standard which is the "best of everything."

PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM TORONTO JAIL

New Claremont Street Police Station Is Scene of a Daring Escapade When Notorious Men Forced a Steel Bar Without Other Inmates Knowing It —One Recaptured.

TORONTO, Aug. 6—Working so quietly that nobody heard them, two notorious criminals forced a steel bar off the jail window at the new Claremont street police station last night and dropping 20 feet to the ground below, made their escape. Altho the station police were after them almost before they had left the yard, the crooks managed to elude their pursuers and vanished in the darkness.

Both men are well known to the police and detectives in Toronto. They were registered on the slate as William Goodman, aged 23, 521 Dufferin street, and John Gallagher, aged 28, 156 Strachan avenue. The twain showed surprising skill in the manner they broke jail, evidently possessing a lot of knowledge thru detention in almost every station in the city. Detectives were scouring the city for trace of them at an early hour this morning, but so far they have not been recaptured.

Altho Goodman and Gallagher are men with records they were not held on serious charges. Goodman was arrested yesterday afternoon at 1.45 for frequenting a disorderly resort. Gallagher was arrested on a charge of vagrancy at 5.30, which means that he is suspected of something more serious. They were taken to the station and after being searched were placed in the "cage." This is a large steel structure in which men held on light charges are placed. Probably as many as twelve are often together at the same time and there are bunks on which they may sleep.

The "cage" at Claremont street police station is shaped like a half-square, one part running in behind the regular cells. Consequently a man might move over this corner and could not be readily seen until the guard had passed around the cells and looked in from the other end of the cage.

Over the top of the cage and about twelve feet from the floor are placed the window ventilators. These are constructed of small windows, and all work together by means of a steel device operated by a handle from the outside. The windows can all be opened by the guard without passing into the cage. The glass on the ventilators is interwoven with fine wire and protected again by steel bars which form spaces about five inches wide and seven inches long. On the outside of each ventilator are placed three upright steel bars and one cross bar, allowing a space between of about seven inches in depth and about ten inches in width.

After climbing up the cage and squeezing thru between the open ventilator and the wall the crooks reached out and by sheer strength forced one of the upright bars out, making a space of seven inches in depth and twenty inches wide.

At 7.45 Patrol Sergeant Griffith, who [illegible] pursued the relief. They left the station about ten minutes later. He then went into the cells and saw that all the prisoners were there, and everything appeared safe and sound. He then returned to his desk in the forward part of the building.

A short time later Constable Judge, on station duty, went in and inspected the prisoners. They were all there. He had been out of the cells about 15 minutes, and the sergeant was just entering the names "Gallagher" and "Goodman" on the report when a well-dressed young man rushed in the station from Claremont street and shouted: "You had better look at the north side of the building. I think someone is escaping." This was at 8.30.

Constable Judge ran out the front door and to the north side of the building. Sergeant Griffith went out the side door and to the south side. Both men met at the rear of the station. The birds had flown. They had disappeared in one minute. Sergeant Griffith ran back to the station to prevent any others from escaping.

Enquiries in the neighborhood resulted in people being found who saw two men pass down Claremont street. Further than that, they could not be traced.

Celebrated Golden Wedding.

GALT, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—William Williard and his wife, both born here and continuous residents for sixty-nine years, celebrated their golden wedding today. Guests to the number of fifty assembled to commemorate the unique event, every branch of the Williard and Hambly families being represented. The groomsman and bridesmaid of fifty years ago, Mr. Thos. Grills, Harriston, and Mrs. Walter Laidlaw of Galt gave interesting reminiscences of the wedding. The celebrants were presented with a purse of gold.

Long Deadlock Ends.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—The Iron Molders' Union of Brantford and the Buck Stove Co. are no longer at odds. Four years ago the molders went on strike, the battle between union labor and the company proving a strenuous one. The shop has now been declared an open one by the union. Hartley's Foundry, at which a strike was recently declared owing to non-union work from Hamilton being accepted, has been placed in the same class.

Aged Woman Burned.

ST. MARY'S, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Mrs. Jennie Foster of Granton, aged 79, was burned to death when an oil stove she was lighting caught fire. Mrs. Foster lived alone and was getting her breakfast on an oil stove. She was filling it when the oil took fire. Seizing the stove in her apron she tried to throw it out the kitchen door, when her apron and skirts took fire. The neighbors, called by her screams, found her clothes burning freely. Dr. Land was called, but she sank rapidly and died a short time afterwards.

To Assess Officials.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—City Solicitor Henderson, in reference to the income tax on government officials here, has advised the assessors to make an assessment, despite an adverse ruling some months ago in the county court by Judge Hardy. Assurance has been given that in the meantime the attorney-general will take the matter to the court of appeals for final settlement.

Suspected of Robbery.

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—This afternoon Henry Merrick, post-office inspector, received word from Sudbury stating that Jack O'Brien, a former Kingstonian, had been placed under arrest by a government detective, charged with having a hand in the sensational mail bag robbery at the outer station early on the morning of Jan. 22. The bag, which contained registered letters and cheques valued at over $1000, was stolen while it lay on a truck waiting to be put on the train for Montreal. O'Brien was suspected at the time and detectives have been following him ever since.

Steerage Rates Cut.

HAMBURG, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.)—The Hamburg-American and the Austro-American steamship lines today announced a reduction in their steerage passenger rate to Canada, in order to meet the cut in the rate made by the C. P. R. last June.

BODY PLACED IN BARREL

It Fell Out of Box in Which It was Shipped

A number of the newsboys who meet the early morning trains over the Grand Trunk railway witnessed a gruesome sight on Tuesday morning. It appears that the body of a man who had been killed at Belleville was being sent to Queen's Medical College and had been packed in a box. Unfortunately the box had been opened at the G. T. R. junction and body had been picked up and allowed to sit on a barrel in the express room. The dead man had no relatives in Canada and unclaimed bodies go to medical schools unless friends bury them—Kingston Whig.

TORONTO, ONT.

G. T. R, Sixteen Ontarios Eight

A goodly number of spectators yesterday afternoon gathered at the agricultural park to witness a baseball match between the G.T.R. and Ontario teams. It was anticipated by many that the game would be close and exciting, but it proved to be otherwise. The Ontarios were somewhat weakened by the absence of some players, while the Grand Trunks were considerably strengthened. In the first innings the G.T.R. team secured five runs and the Ontarios could get only one player over the plate. This gave the railway men a decided lead, which they further increased in the second inning, when three runs were made. In the eighth innings, which the G.T. R. took, they piled up sixteen runs, while the Ontarios, in their nine innings were only able to pass seven players over the plate. There is no question but that the best team won, their fielding being far superior to their opponents' and they also batted the leather more freely. A man named Denning from New York was umpire, and some of his decisions were certainly "raw," apparently occasioned by the fact that he was not altogether conversant with the game, or was unable to see well. In this respect both teams suffered more or less. At times some good plays were made by members of both teams. Fred Goyer pitched for the Ontarios, and L. Cowan, said to be from Gananoque, did the twirling for the Grand Trunks. Both pitched good ball. The line up of the teams was as follows:

G. T. R.—S. Symons, c.f.; M. Simmons, l.f.; L. Gerow, r.f.; T. Fegg, 3b.; D. Simmons, 1b.; R. Muir, s.s.; W. Simmons, 2b.; G. Baker, c.; L. Cowan, p.

Score by innings:

G. T. R.	5	3	0	2	1	1	1	3	x	—16
Ontarios	1	2	0	3	0	1	0	0	0	— 7

TRENTON GIRL MISSING

A young girl disappeared from her home in Trenon, Ont., the other day, and the occurrence has caused a sensation in the town, as no reason can be assigned for the girl's disappearance. Chief of Police R. J. Moffatt, has sent out a description of the young girl, which is as follows:

Age 14 years, height 5 feet, weight 109 pounds, complexion fair, hair a light brown, gray eyes, with slight cast on left one. She was dressed in a tan colored skirt, black waist, blue jacket, sailor hat, black band, she also carried an umbrella. The girl was guilty of no crime.

MR. JOHN L. NEWTON INJURED

Mr. John L. Newton had a very close call on Saturday evening as he was driving across the railway tracks and leading a horse behind.

The horse behind became frightened and jumped right into the conveyance, frightening the other horse. In an instant the rig was upset and both horses with Mr. Newton were thrown to the ground. Before the animals could get away some men seized them, others helped Mr. Newton to his feet.

He was badly shaken up and received some nasty cuts on the head. It is not expected that these will prove serious however for which we are all very thankful—Tweed News.

PETERBOROUGH EXCURSION

Reports from the excursion to Peterborough yesterday, under the auspices of Holloway street church, are to the effect that there was a large crowd, and a most enjoyable time, the lift locks of the canal proving a most interesting attraction. So far as one can learn, the event passed off without a mishap, the return being made at an early hour, reaching Belleville about 7 o'clock.

ALLEGED THEFT

A complaint was made to the police yesterday, that a door had been taken away from a G. T. R. car which was on a siding near the canning factory on Pinnacle street. Upon invesigation the door was found upon Mr. George Whalen's premises, and he was arrested on a charge of theft. The case will come up to-morrow and in the meantime Whalen is out on bail.

A PLEASANT OUTING

Christ Church and St. George's Sunday School excursion to Twelve O'clock Point yesterday was a very successful affair, the three trips by the America, morning, afternoon and evening, netting a handsome profit for the societies. The Sunday School students and the older ones as well, enjoyed the bracing breezes of the point, the day being cool, and while the sky was at times threatening, there was no rain. The moonlight was an especially enjoyable event, the roomy steamer going up the bay, and taking on such of the passengers as had remained at the Point, returning to the home dock at a seasonable hour.

Graduates of O. B. C. in Demand

Miss Mabel Ketcheson of Sidney, whom we mentioned in yesterday's paper, and who has gone to Toronto to fill a position in the C. P. R. office, is a graduate of the Ontario Business College. Mr. I. L. Moore, the assistant principal of the O. B. C., informs us that the demand for the graduates is now greater than at any previous period. The banks, the insurance companies, the railways, the construction companies, express companies, the legal offices, publishers, merchants and manufacturers are constantly making requests from all parts of Canada and from the United States. There is no way by which a young man or woman can be so thoroughly equipped, at so little expense and in so short a time, for a successful business career, as by a course at O. B. Enters Complaint Gets Into Trouble

Sidney J. Lucas last evening went to the police station and made a complaint that he had been robbed of a sum of money. He named John Potts as the party who had taken the money. The latter was subsequently apprehended by the police, but upon investigation it was ascertained that Potts did not take the money and that Lucas had not lost any money. The outcome of the affair was that Potts was exonerated from any suspicion of theft and Lucas is at present in the county jail. He is charged that he procured by false pretences a set of harness from Mr. A. Graham of this city. The case was called in police court this morning but was not ready to be proceeded with, and was enlarged for a week. In the meantime Lucas will in all probability have to remain behind the bars unless he is able to secure substantial bail.

The Apex Club's Trip to Presqu'isle

One of the most enjoyable excursions of the season, at least pronounced so by the three hundred or more who took in the event, was yesterday's trip to Presqu'isle in the steamer Aletha, under the auspices of the Apex Club, of the Tabernacle church. It was a charming sight to observe the smiling lassies, attired, in sailor costumes, moving among the on-coming throng prior to the departure of the boat, handing out the tickets and pocketing the cash, until the stipulated number was reached and the call of enough was sounded. The gang plank drawn in, and the ropes thrown off, the prettily decorated steamer was loosed from her mooring, and Captain Sara Harrison at the wheel, under instructions from the trusty pilot, Capt. D. B. Christie, headed for the beautiful trip up the bay to Presqu'isle.

Closely attentive to her arduous duties was first mate, Miss Edith Owens, while second mate, Miss May Williams, was ever on her job. Careful for the financial and detail clerical work, Miss Ethel Palmer, instructed by the genial regular purser Collier, soon mastered her duties. Down in the power department Chief Engineer, Miss Hanna Harrison, gave orders to her assistants, with the result that good speed was kept up; assistant engineer, Miss Grace Foxton, bossing the fire brigade in her usual gentle tones.

Meanwhile the aristocracy of the boat, i e., the passengers, were enjoying the beautiful scenery, the orchestra, after not a little difficulty in transporting the piano to the upper deck, rendered sweet music, harmonizing perfectly with the cheeriness of the occasion. The picturesque 'isle was reached at 5 o'clock, where an hour and a half was spent in lunching and pleasures for which the resort is famous, the return trip starting at 6.30, during which music and singing entered into the evening's enjoyment, the whole passing without a ripple of discord, the occasion commended by all for the admirable manner in which it was conducted. While the conduction of the excursion was in a way under the management of the young ladies, great credit is due Captain Christie for his kindly thoughtfulness for those placed in his care, which was commended by those aboard. Purser Collier's smiling countenance being an inspiration to all. The home dock was reached at 9.30. In a word, the outing was an unqualified success, and the young ladies of the Apex Club scored one more success. It was unanimously voted that Captain Christie and Purser Collier of the Aletha, should have charge of a like occasion next season.

LIBERAL GOVERNMENT SHIRKED THIS DUTY

How the Liberal party with its loud protests for the good of the people has been tried and found wanting is written in the official files at Ottawa. There it can be seen that the late Government deliberately shirked its duty to inquire into the question of ocean freight rates though the British Government was willing to enter into negotiations. The Conservative opposition in 1910 time and again endeavored to have the Liberals take the matter up. There was some correspondence but the matter ended there. But the Conservative Government has sent the Chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners to England to negotiate, and a report will be made on his return. The late Mr. Justice Mabee, chairman of the Railway Board, and appointed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and a man, who was respected and admired by all parties, suggested a scheme of joint control of rates.

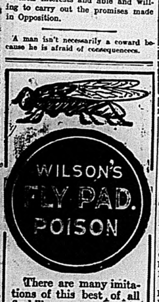
His memorandum was forwarded to the Colonial Office by the then Government. The Imperial authorities at once fell in with the suggestion of a joint investigation but the Canadian Government dropped the whole matter, neglecting even to reply to the communications forwarded on the subject by the Colonial Office.

The British Government is now and has been for some time ready to take the ocean freight rate question up with the Dominion Government. Records now on file here show this and furnish a complete refutation of the contention put by the Opposition last session, that the rise in rates complained of at that time took place subsequent to the change of Government. The increace in rates was brought to the notice of the Laurier Government early in 1910. At that time merchants and boards of trade were complainng, and Mr. Richard Grigg, new commissioner of commerce, then resident British trade commissioner to Montreal, drew up a memorandum showing that the rates had materially risen and observing that this constituted an impairment of the British preference.

In February, 1912, the chairman of the Railway Commission, the late Judge Mabee, signed a vigorous memorandum, pointing out that if the control of land rates was beneficial to the public, the control of the ocean rates would be much more so, the land journey being only one-third of the distance. "Every reduction made on the land haul gives the ocean carrier the opportunity to add to his charges," said Judge Mabee.

The people of Canada were laying the foundation for more benefits than they ever imagined, when they threw out the Liberal party on September 21, 1911. They elected a party devoted to their interests and able and willing to carry out the promises made in Opposition.

A man isn't necessarily a coward because he is afraid of consequencees.



There are many imitations of this best of all fly killers.

Ask for Wilson's, be sure you get them, and avoid disappointment.

ON THE HIGH ROAD OF PROSPERITY

Every month that has passed since the defeat of reciprocity justifies the action of the people in that respect. Never was the trade of Canada better, and with every prospect this year for a bumper harvest, the tide of plenty will roll on. Figures just to hand, and which cannot be gainsaid by the specious arguments of the Liberal press, tell the story.

The total trade of Canada so far is about 10 per cent. ahead of its record of last year. During the month of June last the aggregate trade of Canada, including coin, bullion and foreign merchandise handled, was $93,800,852, as against $86,757,585 in June, 1912. The increase is $7,043,267, or 8 per cent. For the three months ending June 30 the total trade of all sorts was $258,130,854, as against $237,212,779 in the first quarter of 1912-13, the increase being $20,918,075, or 8.8 per cent.

Deducting coin, bullion and foreign goods, the aggregate trade in imports entered for consumption in Canada and domestic goods exported was $91,576,431 for June, and $250,479,846 for the three months, as against $82,834,080 and $229,242,321, respectively, in 1912. The increases are $8,737,351, or 10.5 per cent. for June, and $21,237,525, or rather over 9 per cent. for the three months period.

But more cheering than all is the noteworthy increase in exports. The figures show domestic goods exported in June amounted to $33,619,425, as against $29,246,770 in June, 1912; the increase is $4,372,655, or 11 per cent. For the three months exports of this class were $83,520,276, as against $76,226,776 in April, May and June of 1912, the increase being $7,353,500, or about 9.5 per cent.

For June, 1913, and June, 1912, the principal heads of the exports were:—

	1913	1912.
Agriculture	$15,492,137	$11,454,678
Forest	4,323,636	4,605,549
Mine	4,721,731	4,428,705
Animals and their produce	3,600,000	3,811,463
Manufactures	3,863,356	3,617,442
Fisheries	1,600,803	1,327,074

There was an increase of four millions in agricultural products alone. For the three months' period the principal increases are: Agriculture, $3,953,080; manufactures, $2,133,955; fisheries, $896,854; the mine, $414,682; animals and their produce, $371,533, and the forest, $263,511. The heaviest exports in the first quarter of the fiscal year have been in round figures: Agriculture, $40,000,000; the mine, $11,700,000; manufactures, $11,500,000.

Turning to imports, the total for June, excluding coin and bullion, was $57,957,006, as against $53,587,310 in June, 1912, the increase being $4,369,696, or 8 per cent. For the three months' period the total was $166,959,570, as against $152,975,545, the increase being $13,984,625, or 9 per cent. Dutiable goods in June were $37,836,560, and free goods, $20,120,446, as against $34,134,417 and $18,852,893 respectively. For the three months period the dutiable goods were $110,389,143 and free goods $56,570,427, the corresponding figures in 1912 being $101,150,548 and $51,824,997 respectively.

Liberal pessimists who argued that the defeat of the Laurier policy would be the down fall of Canada's position in the markets of the world are surely answered. The Borden policy of the development of Canada along her own national lines is having a beneficial effect.

CURRENT COMMENT

An exchange says: "A New York man ate eight and three-quarter pounds of beefsteak at one sitting. How long will the vulgar rich continue to flaunt their wealth in the faces of the poor?"

Ottawa Journal: "Correspondent writes to ask what has become of the battleship New Zealand, which recently paid a visit to Victoria. Answer: The ship has probably gone to search for New Zealand's lost autonomy." Wrong again. It is searching for imperial Laurierites, but they are as scarce as hens' teeth.

Ottawa Journal: "The motor boat is rapidly displacing the canoe as a means of pleasurable transportation in summer. This is well enough, as the canoe has too often been a death trap." The motor boat is all right when some fool ignoramus is not attempting to show what he doesn't know.

Montreal Herald: "The high cost of living is responsible for much loss of faith in human nature. We catch ourselves wondering whether the canners' strike in British Columbia is or is not being engineered as a preliminary step to boosting the price of tinned salmon next winter." Find out what the fisherman gets for his product, and then estimate the middleman's profit. The dealer who makes the most should be swatted with a brickbat.

Wonder if the Ottawa Journal scribe is just married, or an anticipant bachelor. Listen to his prattle: "Dr. Quesnal need not kiss. Her husband need not kiss. But the average opinion will be that they do not know what they are missing by not kissing, no matter what they believe they are missing in the way of diseases. Anyway, we think kisses are worth the risk. There's lots of fun that is worth more than the possible danger."

Montreal Herald: "It is said that the revival of the whipping post for certain offences against women in England has gone a long way toward wiping the white slavers out of the country. The lash is a very degrading and brutal punishment and one hesitates to commend its infliction, but if it is really doing what is claimed for it in England, let us by all means adopt it here. Something effective is pretty badly needed."

AMERICAN RATES AND RAILWAYS

Local railway officials will secure a crumb of comfort and encouragement when they read what Mr. J. H. Haslam says about European Railways as compared with Railways of this continent. There may be some question as to the superior efficiency of our Railways, but most readers must know by this time that the rates on the whole are higher in Europe than they are in the U. S. and in Canada. In making his comparisons, Commissioner Haslam, who is Chairman of the Commission to investigate Agricultural Credits, also European Wheat Markets, does not take into account the fact of the higher cost of producion, the higher rate of wages paid to trainmen, enginemen and all who help to move the world's freight. If this were one, the showing of American Railways would be even better than appears from this short statement. In a column article cabled from Europe to the Hearst newpapers of the U. S., Mr. Haslam, over his signature, said:

"European railway systems are not as highly efficient as ours and charge much higher rates, both for freight and passengers."

MOTHER'S VACTION

A Short Story at Timely Season

In the early spring, when mother began to look fagged out, we all assured ourselves that it was due to the severe winter we had passed through and that when spring decided that it was unnecessary to sandwich in a winter day now and then she would be herself again.

Of course we realized that she wasn't well, and, time and again cautioned her not to work so hard and overdo herself, yet if dinner happened to be a little late when father, the boys, Edith and I got home, we asked with frowns we did not try to conceal and in a most preemptory manner, "Why?" And after dinner, though we had been quite concerned at mother's canary bird appetite, Edith did not hesitate to come to her with a messaline waist that required such careful darning before she could don it to go to the theatre with Bob Shorley, nor was I at all backward at calling out to the kitchen, where mother hurried to finish the dishes, that my princess slip just had to be pressed before I could wear it under my embroidered lingerie, and that if I did it myself, tired as I was from my afternoon at the Sunshine club, I would be a perfect rag when I appeared at the Byford's dance. Then, as usual, Tom discovered that he had only one shirt fit to wear, though there must have been a dozen in his chiffonier, and that the buttons in the neckband had simply been pulled to pieces, so "Just yank them together, will you, mother?" And always in the midst of mother's flurry to get us started in proper shape, father kept calling to her to hurry up and read the paper to him.

Oh, yes long before the doctor told us so, we knew mother wasn't well, but that she could—to use Tom's expression—"be put out of business" for any length of time was something we never dreamed of, because in our estimation mother was altogether too reliable for anything like that. So we received a dreadful shock one evening when, just as she finished straightening up the dining room, she gave a queer little cry and crumpled up on the floor very white and still.

The doctor told us she was simply worn out and must have a vacation without saying or knowing how that feat was to be accomplished. Mother protested that, aside from the expense, it was impossible for her to leave home and, really, when we came down to hard facts, we could not figure out how home could get along without mother. Nevertheless the doctor kept dangling that vacation before us, mother crept around, a pale little atom, trying to do for us as usual—Edith and I had so much on our hands just then—and Aunt Margaret.

We all had the greatest respect for Aunt Margaret and Aunt Margaret's advice, although we had often resented her insinuation that we "put too much upon mother."

"Doctors are always so ready with their advice, Aunt Margaret," I said to her, irritably, on the night of her arrival. "We all know mother needs a vacation, but when it comes to going away from home——"

"Why should she go away from home?" Aunt Margaret's voice was most matter-of-fact.

"Why?" My exasperation was quite apparent. "Haven't I just told you that the doctor insists upon a vacation?"

"Well," was the answer, "there is such a thing as a home vacation. What your mother wants is a rest cure with a little amusement thrown in now and then. I think the latter would help immensely." For a moment Aunt Margaret's eyes looked strangely accusing. "For years your mother has been making a drudge of herself. It's about time you people found out all your mother has to do, and if she'l put herself in my hands I'll be glad to assist in the eye-opening. And in her usual domineering way, Aunt Margaret proceeded to take charge of mother's vacation.

She started out by insisting upon Edith giving up her "slumming fad," as she put it, and spending her mornings at home. Then I was informed that after my music lesson in the morning I would have to forego my sewing at the Sunshine club in the afternoon. "You will charity at home a little bit," Aunt Margaret said, grimly, and as mother seemed to fall in with her plans in a most unaccountable manner, I gave in gracefully.

I know it seemed strange to Edith getting up in the morning when the alarm clock went off at 6 to prepare father's and the boys' breakfast, later Aunt Margaret's, her own and mine, later still carrying mother's to her bedside, because Aunt Margaret would not hear of her arising before ten o'clock, then tidying up the nine-room apartment under constant interruptions at either front or back doors. I know how hard it was for me to accustom myself to stay at home in the afternoons and look after the mending (goodness, there's a pile of it for six people!) finish ironing what our laundress had not time to do, marketing, planning dinner and roasting myself in preparing it.

"My gracious," Edith said once, "where does all the work come from? Mercy!" And on the top of it all Aunt Margaret insisted upon our finishing shirtwaists we were having our mother make, saying, when we rebelled, that it was time we did such things for ourselves, that there was such a thing as "riding a willing horse to death." Really, Aunt Margaret can be quite vulgar at times!

Having settled mother's rest cure to her satisfaction, and when a little color had crept into mother's cheeks the amusement end of the vacation was taken up, although mother said she felt so like a new creature she thought she ought to get into harness again. But Aunt Margaret was adamant, and soon Edith and I found ourselves alone the whole blessed day, while mother was taken to exhibits at the art institute, or a matinee full of "life and laughs," or to hear a world-famed orchestra that mother told us afterward she had often longed to hear.

"I wouldn't give my home vacation for all the summer resorts in creation," she said one night at dinner, and seemed such a happy, new little mother, we couldn't keep our eyes off her. "And the beauty of it is, I can stay places without wondering if it is time to put the vegetables on and if I hadn't better get up and rush home so dinner will be ready on the dot. Oh, it's just fine, and such a change!"

We all looked conscious, I know, and as mother rambled on happily, so different from the pale, silent little mother we were used to, it came to me how very right Aunt Margaret had been. Mother had indeed, needed a rest—a change!

The same thought, I feel sure, was passing through Edith's mind, for, as I saw her watching mother, of a suddenness her eyes filled with tears and she became very much occupied with her dessert. Something stirred in the boys also. In the midst of mother's glowing description of an orchestra concert Tom said: "Mother, wouldn't you like to go to the theatre tomorrow night?"

Mother looked up dazed. One of our greatest actors was playing there. "Why, Tom!" she gasped, "that's lovely of you, my boy, and I appreciate it, but there's some one else you want to take there, isn't there, dear?" Mother's smile was knowing.

We had finished dinner when Tom put his question, and now, before he answered mother, he went and stood behind her chair. His arms went around her neck, his cheek rested on her lovely gray hair, and there was such a wonderfully new thoughtfulness on his face as he said softly: "It will be you or nobody, little mother."

"It seemd to be a general eye opening that evening. Even young Jim offered to wipe the dishes for me when he saw me take the dish towel out of mother's hands. "I don't believe mother should work so hard ever again, do you?" he asked, when we had the kitchen to ourselves.

"I don't," I replied with sudden new firmness.

"And—and," very shyly, "I can't take her to any bang-up band concert or to see a swell actor, but maybe she would like to go to a picture show with me some time, eh?"

"Just wouldn't, Jimmy!" I exclaimed somehow, with a choke in my voice. "Ask her and watch her smile."

Neither was father to be outdone. When Jim and I left the kitchen we found he was getting ready to take mother to call on friends. Always when she had asked he had grumbled that it was too far—that, anyway, mother looked too tired. When they had started, Edith, without consulting me, asked Aunt Margaret to preside at a family council. It was unanimously decided that mother's vacation should be for all time.

"We will let her do the little things," Edith summed up. "Mother wouldn't be happy otherwise, and in some way we must let her feel, without it being so, remember, that the great responsibility is still hers, but when it comes to the hard work——"

"You and I will be at the front," I put in quietly.

"And amusements?" Aunt Margaret questioned. Don't let your mother's life become actually drab again."

"And——" Jim looked at me with a siletn appeal in his eyes. "'Tain't much, but don't forget picture shows. It's the best I can do yet, but just wait a while!"

So we sat around talking it over, waiting for mother, that we might tell her of the year round vacation we had planned, that was so royally her due.

Count Boni Ready To Take New Wife

Told Friends in Rome he Would be Free Soon and go There on His Wedding Trip.

ROME, Aug. 5.—Every mail has brought to the Supreme Tribunal of the Segnatura and the Sacred Roman Rota hosts of documents regarding the Gould-Castellane case.

Persons who have examined the evidence think that the Rota will confirm its last sentence of annulment of marriage, and say they do not understand why the Duchess de Talleyrand should oppose the annulment, especially on the ground that it would render her children illegitimate, when it is known that the church law maintains their legitimacy.

It is understood that the Pope, who takes especial interest in the case, has expressed his satisfaction on hearing that the Duchess is bringing up her Catholics under the guidance of ecclesiastical tutors.

When in Rome last time Count Boni de Castellane told a friend that at the beginning of 1914 he would be free to remarry, and would come to Rome on his wedding trip.

The Duchess has written this letter to the Giornale d'Italia:

The unanimous cry of indignation and surprise at the enormity of the sentence of annulment of the marriage contracted by me with Count Boni de Castellane, is the best proof to contradict all lies and inaccuracies of the several and too complaisant witnesses brought by the Castallanes to the last trial of the Tribunal of the Rota. It was held unknown to me, and I was not defended. Indeed, I only knew of it when it was spoken of in the press. I could deny all, but I would have morally to destroy the father of my children, and to speak of his family. I do not wish that any public defence of mine should one day fall under my children's eyes, and they would have to blush for their father and his relatives.

I could give the lie to the witnesses and particularly to some of them, who seem to have assumed the profession of witnesses for the annulment of marriages.

I could reveal all the falsity and contradiction of which this case is full with all the malignity and absurd basis on which it stands. But all this I shall reserve to set forth before the ecclesiastical tribunal.

It has been said that I wish to prevent the Count de Castallane from remarrying with a religious ceremony to avenge myself; but this is a malignant insinuation on the part of those who well know that my only motive is the sentiment of maternal affection. What do I care if Castallane runs after all the American heiresses and if he marries a lareg fortune. My intent is great and holy—the moral education of my children, since if tomorrow the Count Boni should marry a new fortune he would be able to take awwy my children, who would grow up in the school of—(what shall I call it?)—living with a father so gallant. It is to save them from such an example that I thought it my sacred duty as their mother to keep my children under their priestly tutor, who brings them up in the Catholic religion in conformity to the promise I made when I married, and which I have always maintained.

Britain's Naval Base at Bermuda

Admiralty's Plans Said to Have Been Grossly Exaggerated

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Washington reports of Great Britain's intention to establish a great naval base at Bermuda are regarded here as a gross exaggeration and misconception of the Admiralty's plans relative to the naval utilization of the island.

It is admitted that the Admiralty is taking measures to increase the British squadron in those waters and to develop Bermuda as a dockyard and coaling station, but it is declared that this is merely to remedy a mistake that was made under Admiral Fisher's regime.

Bermuda, it is argued, has been a British possession since 1609, long before the Monroe Doctrine existed, and it became a regular coaling station in 1869 and was made the headquarters of the North America and West Indies squadron years ago. Under Lord Fisher's naval redistribution scheme, owing to the naval pressure in Europe, the number of ships that had headquarters at Bermuda was reduced, but the dockyard was always maintained.

So far as is known, all that the Admiralty now intends to do is to station four armored cruisers in the West Indies during the winter months. No battleships are going there. The armored cruisers will return home for the manoeuvres every summer, but the small cruiser Hermione will always be on the station. However, it is admitted that instead of a commander, who has hitherto been in charge at Bermuda, a rear-admiral will be placed in control. It is desired to "show the flag in a part of the world where Great Britain has important interests which certainly will not become of less importance when the Panama Canal is opened to traffic."

The Daily Mail, while stating that the Admiralty's measures are in no wise directed against the United States and that it is "pure delusion for Americans to discover any menace," points out that the strengthening of the British squadron is due to two causes. The first is the approaching opening of the Panama Canal, which will be largely used by British shipping. This shipping will require protection in case of war, and Bermuda is an admirable base for a squadron giving that protection.

The second cause is the recognition by the Admiralty of the importance of giving greater protection generally to British shipping plying between the United Kingdom and the United States. In the recent manoeuvres the Red fleet, representing an enemy, succeeded in dispatching a large force of cruisers to attack the Blue, or British trade in the Atlantic. Such strategy would certainly be attempted in actual warfare and if it were to meet with success a fleet based at Bermuda would be required.

EPIDEMIC AMONG THE GRAND CIRCUIT HORSES

Typhoid Influenza Cripples the Stables at Kalamazo and Small Fields and Tame Racing are the Results —One Race Called Off.

KALAMAZOO, Aug. 6.—An epidemic of typhoid influenza threatens disruption of the Grand Circuit. Nearly one-half of the horses here for the big line meeting are under the care of veterinaries and the opening of the fifth meeting of the racing season was a sorrowful affair, only 15 horses answering the bell which summoned them to the post in three events carded for the afternoon's sport. Forty-six horses wer scheduled to take part in the programme but over half of them are sick and unable to race. In the New England string of Walter Cox there are eight that are under the weather, while Thomas Murphy and Lon McDonald have seven each that are confined to the barns. Other stables are similarly afflicted and there is a spirit of grave apprehension among all trainers.

Yesterday's events were tame affairs in consequence. Cheeney won the 2.07 trot in straight heats, best time 2.08 1-2. There were but four starters in this race and neither Ruth McGregor nor Robert Milroy were able to make the Texas mare extend herself. Cascade was distanced as usual in the first heat. Five started in the American Hotel pacing stake, purse $3000, and the Cox stallion Cable was best at all stages of the race, winning easily in three straight heats, best time 2.05 1-4. The 2.15 class pacing saw six in action but there was nothing to contest for first money but Tommy Murphy's wiggler, Strathstorm, that won in three heats, best time 2.07. The 2.16 trot was declared off altogether because nearly all the field of 19 horses eligible to answer the bell were confined to their stables by sickness.

Australian Runner Breaks Worl d'sRecord

MANCHESTER, Eng., Aug. 6—At a professional athletic meeting here yesterday, Jack Donaldson of Australia, world's champion sprinter, broke the 300-yard running record made by H. Hutchins, winning by half a yard in 29 3-4 seconds. Hutchins' time was 30 seconds, and had stood since 1884.

G. Cummings did he mile-walk in 6 minutes, 23 seconds, which beats the amateur record of 6 minutes, 25 seconds, made at Toronto June 4, 1910, by George Goulding and equals the professional record of W. Perkins, England, made in 1874.

BASEBALL.

COOMBS IN UNIFORM

Philadephia, Aug. 6.—Jack Coombs appeared on the field yesterday at Shibe Park, for the first time since April 11, when he went to his bed with typhoid fever. He has been working hard on his farm at Kennebunk, Me., and pitching between times to his brother. "I weight 182 pounds," the "invalid" told his manager and eager questioners, "and I never felt better in my life. The last two weeks I've been pitching every day My arm is in good shape, and I'll be ready to work in a game any time the team needs me.

MULLIN IS NO LONGER A ROYAL

Montreal, Aug. 6.—President Lichtenhein, who has some deals in view, left town with the Montreal club. Before leaving he admitted he had received an offer of $5,000 for Gilhooly, and had turned it down. He did not think he would sell the outfielder unless he could get a certain sum and two players. "If I sell Gilhooly we will lose Frank Smith or Burns by draft, so if a good offer is not forthcoming I shall stand pat and take a chance by losing one of for the draft price (2,500), and save the others for next season.

While away the president will try to get a pitcher to replace Geo. Mullin, who left the team on Saturday morning wihout giving noitce. Mullin's only grievance was that he was kept on the bench. He will probably be sold to some other club.

TORONTO CLUB GETS KENT

Toronto, Aug. 6.—President Dreyfuss, of the Pittsburg Club, is an obstructionist. Twice within the last six weeks he had stood between the Toronto Club and players they wanted. it was Dreyfuss who refused to waive upon Meyer, and prevented Benny from coming here when Brooklyn was prepared to let him go. Last week he came out with a declaration that he had not waived upon Pitcher Kent, and that player, after enjoying a week's board at the expense of President McCaffery, was turned back to Brooklyn who sent him to Pittsburg. Now it has been discovered that Dreyfuss wanted him for some other club, and the Dodgers promptly called him back, and he will join the Leafs at once.

GANDIL WORTH BIG PRICE THAT WAS PAID FOR HIM

Chick Gandil, first baseman, who received an automobile from Washington fans this week, was sold last season to the Washington Club by Montreal for the largest price ever paid for a player in the International League.

President Lichtenheim. who made the deal, received $6,000 in cash and four players, Cahsion, Becker, Akers and Cunningham. Failing to deliver Cashion Washington paid an additional $1,050.

The agreement also provided that any or all the three players could be returned at $2,500. Becker and Aker were sent back, and Washington paying $5,000 more, consequently Montreal received $12,500, and Cunningham, for Gandil, or the equivalent of $15,000.

The purchase of Gandil proved a good investiment for the Washington Club. After he joined the club won nineteen consecutive games, and has been a winner again this season. Ed Barrow when he was manager of the Montreal club, bought Gandil from the Chicago Americans for $1,500.

One of the first things a young man should learn is to take a hint.

THE RING.

FREDDIE WELSH TO TACKLE CHAMPION WILLIE RITCHIE

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 6.—The next lightweight match with a title of the ring at stake will be for the championship of the word. Willie Ritchie, the American champion, made this a certainty yesterday when he agreed to meet Freddie Welsh champion of Great Britain and Australia in Vancouver, B. C., for twenty rounds, on Sept. 1.

Welsh already has one decision over Ritchie awarded in November 1911, when Ritchie substituted at the eleventh hour for Ad Wolgast, then the champion, who was stricken with appendicitis on the eve of a match with Welsh. Ritchie had never fought a long-distance bout then, and went into the match untrained. His showing won him much support.

Articles stipulating the weight and division of the purse will be signed as soon as Ritchie returns from a hunting trip into the mountains, whither he left yesterday. If Ritchie wins at Vancouver his next battle will probably be with Leach Cross in New York for ten rounds no decision, in the latter part of September. His best offer, he says, named Cross though others had been suggested.

Except by a knockout the title could not be in peril in a match with Cross, and according Ritchie feels fairly confident that on Thanksgiving day he will return to San Francisco for twenty rounds , either with Harlem Tommy Murphy or Ad Wolgast.

HORSES STOLEN FROM CAMP

A. L. Heeman, Chief Constable of Grafton, has furnished the police with a description of four horses stolen from Morley's camp near Grafton on Sunday last. There was a black team, aged 9 and 12 years, one with a docked tail and the other with a small patch of white on the hind leg; a grey mare, agede 12, nearly white, and a brown horse of 8 years with small white star on forehead.

Just a as woman quits worrying about her own age she begins to worry about that of her unmarried daughter.

NEW LIGHT THROWN ON BRADDOCK'S END

Brave General Long Misrepresented—Did His Best Under New Conditions—Shot by a Friend

More than one hundred and fifty years after his death, facts concerning General Braddock are coming to light, and will somewhat alter the conception we have received of this British General through Thackeray and other historians who have dealt with him. Mr. Wilfrid Powell, the British Consul-General in Philadelphia, has been unsparing in his efforts to unearth information concerning this commander, who all of these years has rested under an imputation that now appears to have been baseless. From Thackeray we learned that Braddock was a typical British bulldog, brave to the limits of human gallantry, but rough spoken, ignorant and stubborn.

Perhaps the most interesting fact brought out by Mr. Powell is that Braddock was killed by one of his own soldiers, and not by the Indians, as has been supposed. It is related that in 1804, when a gang of men began to make repairs in the Braddock Road, near Uniontown, Pa., an old man from a nearby cottage approached them and said, "Be careful, or you will disturb the bones of the bravest man I ever saw." When questioned by the laborers, he continued, "Right under where you are digging is the body of General Braddock. I shot him. I am Tom Fassett." After awhile some bones were found wrapped in a silken scarf. They were identified by Fassett and others as the remains of the British General, and later on were reinterred under a great oak tree. The spot is still known and recently it was decided to erect a monument to Braddock's memory.

His Last Battle

The story Fassett told about the Battle of Monongahela, in which Braddock fell, has not been recognized by the historians, but there is every reason to believe that it is the most authentic account of that stricken field. Braddock, as might have been expected of a soldier who had received all his training in Europe, knew nothing about the Indian style of fighting, but found himself called upon to lead a mixed force of colonials and English troops against the Indians and the French. Braddock seemed to realize that the methods in which he and his men had been drilled were not best suited to the enemy he was about to meet, but he said to Washington, "The British soldier has been taught, to fight shoulder to shoulder. I cannot at this time alter this method. We will do our duty, and fight as best we can." So he went into the battle as a lamb to the slaughter. Concealed in the woods, the Indians picked off the British troops by the score, while they themselves suffered hardly any losses. The British could not even see their enemies, but with fatal courage stood their ground. and refused to retreat from the veritable crater of fire that ringed them in. Washington and his colonials fought with more knowledge, and therefore with better results, but Braddock refused to take shelter, and, according to old Fassett, it was plain that unless some desperate move were made the whole command would be annihilated. So he conceived the notion of wounding his General, in order that the command would descend to Colonel Washington, who would order a retreat.

Killed by a Friend

Fassett fired at Braddock, with the idea of wounding him, but the ball passed through his arm and into his body, inflicting a wound from which he died soon afterward. Fassett's plan was successful, in that it led to Washington bringing the remnant of the expedition safely out of the ambuscade, but the life of the brave General was sacrificed. At Washington's orders the body was buried in the road, and the little force was marched across it again and again in order that all trace of the grave might be concealed from the Indians. So successful was this move that later on Washington himself was unable to locate it, and nobody but Fassett knew precisely where Braddock had been buried.

Montreal's Narrow Streets

"Montreal is wrongly built," said Dr. Louis Laberge, Chief Medical Officer of Health of that city. "The streets are too narrow, and do not let enough sunlight reach the ground for the prevalence of good health. The sun is a good decomposing force. If it is allowed to shine on the ground the heat penetrates several feet and in the night it evaporates and breaks up all the putrescent vegetable matter. With our narrow streets this cannot be done. It is certainly a most serious problem for us to face. It cannot be remedied without the spending of much money."

THE FLAG'S SUPREMACY A WOMAN'S TRIBUTE

Canada's High Station Won by Toil and Uncompromising Devotion to Duty

At a meeting of the Daughters of the Empire in Winnipeg a fine address on "The Supremacy of the Flag" was given by Mrs. J. A. Henderson. A few brief extracts are given:

"In our early history we have a panorama of shadowy forms. Indians and explorers, missionaries and Jesuits, hunters and trappers, soldiers of France and soldiers of England moving over half a continent in canoe and through centuries of conflict in time. These were followed by the United Empire loyalists, who came to Canada because they stood by the old English tradition and the old flag. These people were incidentally the founders of the English part of the Canadian commonwealth.

"To preserve for us the British ideals and principles, they suffered hardships, dangers and difficulties so severe and so numerous as to have a permanent place in any history of the world's patriotism. Their patriotism caused the sacrifice of home, country and possessions. With this sentiment and loyalty they soon learned to love the land of their adoption. Their hardships in this new land were many, yet in the midst of it all they felt, no doubt, that they were laying the foundation of a great British colony amid these scenes of forest and waste. The strain of "God Save the King" ringing out through the long years made the lonely and painful life endurable, and the sight of the old flag gave them new strength and more endurance to continue the fight for king and country.

"In order to keep our flag supreme, we, as Canadians, as daughters of the Empire, must see that we build the new nation on a loyal foundation; see that the traditions of the flag are taught and impressed on the youth of our land. They should be taught that empire has been obtained by hard struggles and our commercial position by indomitable pluck, that the world at large sleeps better at night because the Union Jack is supreme on the see.

"It is our duty and privilege to continue the work of patriotism of these loyal founders, and to assimilate the foreign peoples which are entering our gates by the thousands every year. Under the Union Jack every nationality on earth enjoys the same protection and shares the same citizenship. We should foster and guard our foreign population jealously. If we show an interest in them the first few years of their lives, they may make even more loyal citizens than many of our native born. It is our duty to assimilate them with our civic and national life. Do we look with indifference upon the tremendous task which is facing us?

FAT IS NOT STRENGTH

Exercise and Moderate Eating Necessary for Health

Don't load the body down with fat. Eat according to your needs; not according to your likes. Outside of "looks" which are sometimes in and sometimes out of fashion, obesity is a hindrance to the enjoyment and comfort of life.

When a person grows fat, each organ gets its portion. The consequence is often serious if these fatty deposits grow so large as to interfere with the normal action of the organs. Shortness of breath, palpitation, bronchitis and other unpleasant and unnecessary difficulties are occasioned. The two great causes of obesity are too much food and too little exercise. Strong able-bodied persons with a moderate amount of time should make it a duty to take enough exercise in the open air to regulate their weight.

Persons who are obliged to sit or stand all day should endeavor to eat strengthening foods—but not fat-producing foods. It is particularly necessary that persons who are disabled should take great care in choosing their diet. Fat is not strength.

For the Guest Room

A special calendar for the guest room will prove a godsend to many a hostess. This calendar consists of an eleven by fourteen inch panel of red morocco, mounted in easel manner and fitted with a small daily calendar which may be replaced at will, and below this is printed in good sized and perfectly legible gilt lettering "Breakfast," "Luncheon," "Tea," "Dinner," "Last Mail Leaves," and "Special." Directly opposite to each one of these legends is a space fitted with a sheet of white celluloid, on which may be inscribed the times of the meals and the departure of the last mail and any special item of information which should be brought to the guest's attention.

That girl who admitted she was twenty-five in 1900 must be nearly thirty by this time.

"I ATTRIBUTE MY CURE SOLELY

And Entirely To Taking "Fruit-a-tives"

HULL, QUE., DEC. 24th. 1908

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. I could not digest my food and everything caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally, I had the good fortune to try "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy, I steadily improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds, and this is more than I ever weighed even before my illness.

I attribute my cure solely and entirely to "Fruit-a-tives" and can never praise them too much for saving my life. To all who suffer from Dyspepsia and Constipation, I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous remedy"

BLAMES WOMEN FOR MORTALITY RATE.

London, Aug. 6.—The present high mortality in London, the Rt. Hon. John Burns, president of the Local Government Board, declared yesterday, is due to the fact that women increasingly are entering into all phases of commerce and industry and official and administrative life.

"They themselves must realize,' he said, "that as far as their offspring is concerned this fact is attended with considerable disadvantage to the community and the race as a whole."

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

CONVENTION BEGINS

Six Hundred Geologists at Big Congress in Toronto.

Scientists of International Fame Who Have Been Making Investigations All Over Ontario For Some Days Get Down to Work — Important Monograph on Coal Supply.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—With much shaking of hands the twelfth International Geographical Congress was informally opened last night in the University College building, Queen's Park. Over 600 members arrived in Toronto during the day and were directed to rooms where they may find lodging for the next week. The congress was opened officially today at noon, when Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, chief justice of Canada, welcomed the delegates and members at a reception in convocation hall.

"The earth's crust is continually changing shape," he continued. "It is only a shell and if you draw a cross-section of the earth on a sheet of paper it is as thin as the thinnest pencil line."

"What of the inside of the earth then?" the professor was asked. "Is it molten or solid?"

"That is still a disputed point," averred the geologist. "But the evidence of earthquake shocks seems to indicate that there are at any rate no gases in the centre, and there can hardly be fire without gases. It has been shown that earthquake shocks are transmitted right thru the earth as well as around the crust. Some people are now coming to the conclusion that it is sold and cold all thru."

At this point J. W. Spencer of the United States delegation came up and joined in the conversation.

"The World wants to know whether or not the continent of Lamuria ever existed," said Prof. Cole. "You can tell him. You are an authority on those things."

"Why, yes, so far as we can tell," Mr. Spencer replied. "Lamuria was where the Indian Ocean is today. In comparatively recent times—that is within twenty-five thousand years or so—this continent was a great many hundred feet higher than it is today."

"And Atlantis, is there any proof of its former existence?"

"No absolute proof. But a ledge of rock is to be found in the centre of the Atlantic about three hundred and fifty miles wide and a thousand miles wide, which, in my opinion, must have been exposed at some past time."

"Do you attempt to fit into your investigations the universal flood story which runs thru all folk-lore and religion?"

Mr. Spencer declared that the flood was likely of only local significance, as if the Mississippi were to burst its banks and flood a great area. In the days before history and myth became separate such an event would by constant retelling become magnified in importance until its local origin would be forgotten.

Interesting Fossils Found.

GALT, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Twenty delegates of the International Geological Congress, to be held in Toronto, were in town today, investigating the rock formation of the river and vicinity. They made several interesting fossil discoveries.

FRUIT MEN AMALGAMATE

Important Step Taken by Brant County Growers.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—A movement of more than passing interest has lately been consummated within the County of Brant. For some time past the apple interests have been divided among three associations. These have now amalgamated under one name and charter, namely, The Brant Fruit Growers' Association, with head office at Burford, Ont.

The directors for 1912 are as follows: Col. J. Z. Fraser, Messrs. W. M. Metcalf, F. M. Lewis and W. J. Dickie of Burford; C. W. Gurney and Horace Henderson of Paris; Delbert Wilson and Norman Edmonson, Brantford, and J. W. Clarke of Cainsville. From these the following officers were elected: President, Col. J. Z. Fraser; first vice-president, Delbert Wilson; second vice-president, F. M. Lewis; secretary-treasurer, W. J. Dickie.

The interests of the association will be taken care of by a managing committee of three. In uniting the various fruit growing interests of the county under one organization, it is the intention to bring Brant County to the front as a fruit growing section.

Charged With Bigamy.

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Charlotte Meeks, aged 23, was arrested this afternoon with a five-months-old baby in arms. She is accused of bigamy by Stuart Meeks of Rochester, N. Y., who came here, called at her apartments on Ontario street and informed her he was about to get a warrant for her arrest. Four years ago the woman was married here to Patrick J. Brennan of Kingston.

Meeks says he was married to her at Cloyne, Ont., nine years ago, when she was just 14 years of age. The babe in arms was born since Brennan has been living with the woman. The latter had four children by Meeks, so it is claimed.

Church Society Helps.

BERLIN, Ont., Aug. 6.—(Special.)—The city council has decided to raise $20,000 among local citizens to complete the local improvements already contracted for, and the first offer was received this morning from the Young People's Society of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, who are taking a block of $2000 for one year, bearing interest at 5 per cent.

Grass Fire Near Explosives.

GALT, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—In Jackson Park is stored a large quantity of dynamite used by the board of works. A grass fire broke out today, and the fire brigade had hard work keeping the flames from reaching the spot where the explosive is stored.

Germans in Danger.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.) A despatch from Guaymas to the German chargé d'affaires here says the streets of Guaymas are barricaded, the harbor is closed and the city is in a complete state of siege. The despatch adds that the German colony regards itself in danger.

McCOWAN MAY RESIGN

M.P.P. For East York May Become Sheriff of County.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—A rumor around the parliament buildings was to the effect that, at a cabinet meeting yesterday, at which Sir James Whitney, Hon. J. J. Foy, Hon. W. J. Hanna and Alex. McCowan, M. L. A., for East York were present, it was decided that Mr. McCowan should succeed to the shrievalty of York, made vacant by the recent death of Sheriff Daville. It was also decided, according to rumor, that a writ for the by-election in East York should issue almost immediately.

ALEX McCOWAN, M. P. P.

George Henry, former reeve of York Township, and a prominent farmer of Criole, who has been active politically in the Conservative interest, is mentioned as a probable nominee of the party in the event of Mr. McCowan's retirement.

Mr. McCowan has represented East York in the legislature, since the general election of 1905, when the riding, a traditional Liberal stronghold, was redeemed, Mr. McCowan having a comfortable majority over Walter Scott of Markham, the Liberal candidate. In 1908, J. W. Curry, K.C., unsuccessfully contested the seat and in 1908. Reeve Annis of Markham was Mr. McCowan's opponent.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.)—It became known today that the Duchess of Connaught, wife of the governor-general of Canada, was seized with a sudden illness at Cowes last Tuesday, which caused much anxiety. The duchess was much better today, and it is expected that she will completely recover from her indisposition within a few days.

Saved Drowning Man.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Hearing a splash in the Grand River behind his house shortly after midnight this morning, Charles Marshall rushed out to see the disappearing form of a man. He jumped into the water and by a heroic effort he saved the life of Charles Davis, who had missed his way home and had fallen into the water from the railway bridge. It required members of the fire department and a doctor to bring Davis around.

Four Escaped Death.

GALT, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Aldermen Fewings, T. Barrett, J. S. Clark and W. A. Smith, four well-known Galt citizens, had a thrilling experience in an auto. They were returning from an outing, when a tire blew out. The machine dashed into a ditch and turned turtle, throwing the occupants every way. Ald. Fewings was pinned under the car and sustained nasty cuts about the head and face. The others escaped with only a scare.

MYSTERY UNSOLVED

Police, However, Have Clues to Authors of Hasson Crime.

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—It is certain now that Hugh Hasson, the aged man who was found terribly injured in the Humber woods on Tuesday afternoon, came to his injuries as the result of foul play. Hassan lies in the Western Hospital in the same condition as when he entered it, and he cannot recover, it is stated. A new clue has been found by the county authorities, which it is hoped may prove of assistance in tracing the crime to the guilty parties.

Accompanied by the son of the unfortunate man, County Constable Geo. Simpson yesterday afternoon went to the lonely bush on the eastern side of the river, near Bloor street, and again examined the tent and the surrounding scrub. Hidden in a bush not far off the officer found a suit case with 12 empty beer bottles. These were all moist, showing that they had not been empty long.

County Constable Simpson firmly believes that Hassan was struck down with a beer bottle and then hit with the V-shaped stone found in the tent. The theory that the horse kicked Hassan and caused his injuries is absolutely scouted by the police and regarded as ridiculous.

Altho Hassan has been unable to give any particulars himself, the county police have a pretty shrewd guess as to the exact circumstances leading up to the brutal assault. Another man was at the tent on the Monday night, and his connection with the deed will be ferreted out by the officers."

So many wild statements have been made by Hassan while in the hospital, that not much importance is attached to any of them. He seems inclined, however, in his conscious moments to keep the whole affair secret, and this lends substance to the police theory.

Hassan's son told the police that his father drank occasionally, but seldom to excess.

Known in Guelph.

GUELPH, Ont., Aug. 6.—(Special.)—The man Hassan, who was brutally assaulted in the Humber woods, is believed to be the Hugh Hassan who formerly lived at the corner of Thomas street and Edinburgh road, Guelph, and for many years carried on a successful teaming business here. About twelve years ago Mr. Hassan, with his family of one son and three daughters, removed to Toronto, where he has continued in the same line of business. He lived here for many years.

AIRSHIP SCANDAL

French Manufacturer Has Been Using Backers' Money.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The sensation caused by the arrest yesterday of Armand Deperdussin, a widely-known builder of aeroplanes, was considerably heightened today by the statement that out of $6,400,000 advanced to him by the Comptoir Industriel et Colonial, his chief backer, it is alleged that only $900,000 was utilized in actual aeroplane construction.

It is alleged that the balance of the money was recklessly squandered in other directions and the newspapers contain stories of sensational expenditure on pleasure. It is further alleged that Deperdussin tried to obtain further financial assistance by presenting a forged order for a large number of aeroplanes.

Before a magistrate yesterday he confessed to many of the charges against him, but estimated his assets as $4,000,000 against $3,000,000 liabilities.

In an interview this afternoon the director of the Deperdussin aeroplane enterprise stated the business will be in no way affected by the arrest, neither will the affair have any detrimental effect on carrying out the contract which the firm had on hand for the French army. Ample financial assistance has already been secured.

The Deperdussin aeroplanes have been among the most successful, Vedrines having used them in many of his record flights. Deperdussin has been considered the foremost patron of aviation in France, which earned him membership in the Legion of Honor.

DOUBTFUL OF LIND

Mexico City Not Very Hopeful of Emissary's Success.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—Unfavorable comments appearing in Mexican papers today relative to the sending here of ex-Gov. John Lind as special representative of the United States are based more on the question of the personal fitness of Lind than the motive of the president in assigning him to come to Mexico. Doubt is expressed that any real good can be accomplished by his presence. It is also said that friends here of William Bayard Hale believe he should have been allowed to continue his mission under the same credentials that have been accorded Mr. Lind.

Washington despatches printed in Mexican papers today are held to manifestly do an injustice to ex-Gov. Lind's standing and attainments.

Thus Mr. Lind will begin his work in Mexico under a heavy handicap.

U. S. SHOULD REPLY

Ought to Build Up Rival Base Near Bermuda Station.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy Meyer arrived in Berlin last night from Kissingen, where he had been taking the cure, accompanied by his wife and daughter. He refused to talk about affairs in Mexico, Panama and Nicaragua, but gave a written statement:

"In regard to Bermuda, if England should decide to send a division of four cruisers it would not necessarily make Bermuda an important naval base, but it does demonstrate the possibilities. Irrespective of England's action our government should be alive to the importance of developing Guantanamo as a naval base instead of further developing unimportant bases on the Atlantic coast, which are of no strategic value and only serve to gratify the constituents of some congressman or senator."

Incendiary Sentenced.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Flora Riley, who set fire to a barn belonging to James Hartley, was this morning sentenced to serve a term in the Alexandra Industrial Home for Girls, Toronto. The sentence was that she was to remain there until she was 21, but Magistrate Ball pointed out to the girl that if she behaved she would be let out in a short time.

A WOMAN SOLDIER

Of Irish Birth She Fought In Many Battles—Dressed as Man

Albert D. J. Cashier, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Quincy, Illinois, was discovered upon being admitted to the hospital of that institution, to be a woman, and the remarkable fact was established that for over fifty years she had worn man's clothing and concealed her sex. More than that she fought through three of the hardest battles of the American Civil War and innumerable lesser fights.

"ALBERT" CASHIER

Now she draws a pension, and with feeble mind and body is waiting for the last roll call.

Her life is a mystery. She was born in Ireland on Christmas day, 1844. She is said to have crossed the Atlantic in boy's clothes as a stowaway. Soon afterward she entered the United States army. Even her name is unknown. She called herself "Albert Cashier," but all attempts to trace her identity have failed. She enlisted Aug. 6, 1862 at Belvidere, Ill., in the 95th infantry, and was discharged Aug. 17, 1865. She did farm for two or three years at Belvidere, then disappeared. The next 40 years are her own secret. She is thought to have worked in a factory somewhere. Finally she became an automobile chauffeur and worked in that capacity until a couple of years ago, when her declining health made it necessary that she be cared for in a public institution. Only then was her secret discovered.

for many months, but if you continue squeezing your blunt fingertips, eventually they will have to succumb to the inevitable and taper.

A daily massage for the hand that chaps easily is imperative, as only in this way can the skin be kept smooth as satin. After you have kneaded and rubbed and frictioned your hands for several minutes at night with cream-smeared fingers, coat the skin lavishly with cream. Then draw on a pair of gloves two sizes too large. When this treatment has been taken several nights in succession, your hands will cease to be rough and scaly.

Chamois for Dusting

A chamois wet in cold, soft water, then wrung out dry, is excellent to dust with. Rinse often.

A few pieces of bacon, spread on top of and baked with macaroni and cheese adds spice to the dish.

JAPAN'S NATIONAL ANTHEM

Of all the national anthems, the Japanese, it is said, is the most poetical in expression. Here is a translation of it into English verse:

"Until this grain of sand,
Tossed by each wavelet's freak,
Grow to a cloud-girt peak,
Towering above the land;
Until the dewy flake
Beading this blossom's gold
Swell to a mighty lake—
Age upon age untold
Joy to joy manifold.
Add for our Sovereign's sake."

HIS OWN DETECTIVE

Jeweller Disguised Himself and Succeeded in Tracing Stolen Pearls

Charles Gys, a Paris jeweller, who was swindled out of three pearl necklaces by a man named Braun, by his own exertions succeeded in finding the thief and recovering the pearls.

Braun pretended to Gys that he had a customer for the necklace, but decamped when they were entrusted to him, ostensibly abandoning his wife and children. Mme. Braun exhibited great grief at being deserted, but M. Gys had a suspicion that she was aware of her husband's whereabouts, so he had his hair dyed, donned a false beard and ragged garments and, completely disguised as a typical Parisian mendicant, posted himself outside her residence and shadowed her when she went out.

Three days passed, and then, with her children she went to the railway station and took the express for Vienna. M. Gys was in the same train, and on reaching the Austrian capital he saw Braun awaiting his family on the platform. He followed the party, and learning that, besides being a swindler, Braun was a deserter from the Austrian army, easily induced the authorities to issue a warrant for his arrest.

Captured after a vain endeavor to use a revolver, Braun confessed that he had pledged the necklace for $4,900 to three Parisian moneylenders. Continuing his researches, M. Gys found the bank in which Braun had deposited this money, secured evidence to show that the three moneylenders were Braun's accomplices, and had them arrested, and eventually traced the pearls.

Dominion Building In London, England

The following unique, yet admirable suggestion by our fellow-townsman, Col. W. N. Ponton, is worthy of consideration by the Dominion Parliament at its next session:

E. Guss Porter, Esq., K.C., M.P.
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—As president of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade, composed of sixty-five Boards of Trade in Ontario, and representing nearly 11,000 members, I would ask you to be kind enough to lay before the Honourable the Minister having the matter in charge at Ottawa, the present advisability of purchasing in London, England, a property centrally situated, and with future possibilities, for the purpose of erecting a building or buildings similar to those now being constructed by the Commonwealth of Australia and occupying a strategic position of equal importance to that chosen by our sister Commonwealth. Every business man who has visited London has been impressed with the importance of this step as a factor in trade and commerce, in immigration, and in the future development of imperial relations, and we cannot too strongly urge that the present opportunity should be seized before the available sites are taken up either by other Dominions or by large commercial companies, who are negotiating for them.

All the provinces of Canada would no doubt centralize about this focus of Canadian interests and administration. At present they are disintegrated, and one has almost to employ a guide to locate them individually. It is submitted that both site and building should be such as would add to the prestige of Canada and impress the dominant idea of permanence, stability, unity and wealth of resources.

Your influence along this line of action will be given and used in a meritorious cause, and if you approve, will you kindly forward this letter, with your endorsement as soon as possible to Ottawa, and oblige,

Yours truly,
W. N. PONTON,
President, Ontario Associated Boards of Trade.
Belleville, August 5th, 1913.

U. work at the present time. Her daughter, Mrs. Allie Ince, is State Secretary of the South Dakota W. C. T. U. and her home is at Phillip, South Dakota. She in on the Winona grounds with her two daughters and is active in creating interest in the work. The members of the Belleville Civillian Rifle Club and the 34th Battery, C.F.A., met on the Rifle Butts yesterday for a friendly match. Conditions, six men a side, each competitor to fire ten shots at 500 yards. The result was a win for the Civillians by 25 points. The match was keenly contested throughout, and everybody enjoyed the sport. It is the wish of the Belleville Rifle Association to arrange similar matches with other organisations at an early date. "Many Men not Much Above Vegetables"

CHAUTAUQUA, Aug. 6.—Bishop Charles D. Williams of Detroit, Mich., who is conducting the devotional hour service this week, took as his subject to-day "Loyalty". He says that unless a man lives to serve his fellows that he is little better than an animal.

"A great many men are not above the vegetables and animals; they make a living simply that they may live and get all possible pleasure out of life", he said. "A man is a real person only when he has a will that can choose a purpose, and then follow it to the finish.

"The man that believes that one must have pleasure to live is no better than a beast; his mind is a mere thoroughfare for current sensations. The man to whom life is nothing but a period in which to collect money, has no high aspirations, this purpose of his burns out all the better ideals. He has become simply a human machine, powerful and efficient, but utterly ruthless and relentless.

"The man that says I am here to serve the family, state and, in fact, all-mankind, is the ideal type."

Fills a Human Need

Some fifteen years ago Grape-Nuts was originated for the purpose of combining in a food delicious flavour, rich nourishment and easy digestion.

Today there are thousands of families all over the world who use this food regularly—in many instances from the first year it was marketed.

Grape-Nuts FOOD

Made of wheat and barley, is perfectly baked and rich in the mineral phosphates which are essential to the building of healthy brains and strong bodies.

White bread lacks these "vital tissue salts," because the outer coat of the grain in which they are stored is thrown out by the miller to make the flour white.

The deficiency cannot be supplied from the drug shop, but only from the field grains which Nature provides for man's food.

And so in Grape-Nuts all the rich brain and body building nourishment of choice wheat and malted barley (including the natural phosphates stored in the outer coat of the grains) is presented in form for easy digestion and quick assimilation. And Grape-Nuts has a delicious taste.

If you are interested in being well, and are not acquainted with this food, send 2c stamp for sample.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

A DOCTOR SAYS

Grape-Nuts Food Contains All the Elements Condensed

There was a time when doctors depended almost entirely on the use of drugs in treating disease. That day is happily past, and our doctors of today are men of wider views—they have learned that proper food is most important in healing disease. An eastern physician says:

"Disease is often an effort of Nature to get rid of impurities in the system as the result of incorrect habits—wrong living. The cause of disease ought to and can be removed by right living and right thinking.

"Nature requires good air, sunlight, food of proper quality and quantity, plenty of pure water, exercise, cleanliness and sleep. When these conditions are met, health follows, but when they are denied or neglected, sickness and disease are sure to result.

"The important question is to decide what is the proper kind of food to supply the physical and mental necessities of man. I have had experience with the various food stuffs known to our markets, but up to the present time I have met with no other answering so fully all the requirements as does Grape-Nuts food.

"In my own experience and observation in my practice, I have found Grape-Nuts to be not only more satisfying, but more lasting in the benefit derived from its use. It sends a man forth to his labors in a state of physical comfort, with a cheerful and buoyant spirit; and the end of the day finds him with reserve strength—he suffers less from exhaustion and depletion of powers.

"I particularly recommend Grape-Nuts food to those whose occupations involve a great deal of brain work. There could not be a food better adapted to the strengthening and conservation of the faculties and energies. It supplies a more sustained mental vigor than any other food that I know of.

"Grape-Nuts food contains all the elements that form the valuable part of natural diet in a condensed, toothsome and easily digestible form." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Peace is Concluded; Balkan War Ended

LONDON, Aug. 7.—(Special).—Peace has been concluded in the Balkans so far as the former allies are concerned, but Turkey, having regained Adrianople, declares she will resist to the last extremity any attempt to dislodge her from the city which the Bulgarians captured and held. Bulgaria's submission to Servia, Greece and Montenegro was due to Roumania's interference. Up to yesterday King Ferdinand's Government struggled to continue the negotiations, but Roumania threatened to occupy Sofia on Saturday unless Bulgaria gave way on all the points at issue.

Employer's Will Gives Generous Bequests

Thirty-five employees—twelve of them young ladies—in the employ of the well known tea and coffee firm of Chase and Sanborn of St. Helen street, Montreal, received tidings this morning that they have had left to them sums of money ranging from $300 to $2,000.

The gifts are bequeathed to them in the will of Mr. Charles D. Sias, senior member of the firm mentioned, whose death took place suddenly in Boston, on June 28th, and who left a quarter of a million dollars to be distributed among about 250 of the employees in the establishments at Boston, Chicago and Montreal.

Each travelling salesman, 55 in number, receives, according to the length of service, from $300 to $2,000.

To all other employees, who have been for a continuous period of one year or more in the employ of the firm, in any one of its various departments, salesroom department, shipping department and factory department, each $300.

In addition to the above, twenty-five hundred dollars (2,500) each is given to the widows of five travelling salesmen.

After many private bequests to relatives and friends, there follows a lengthy list of educational and charitable institutions who are generously remembered.

DOCTOR AND NURSE

Former's Love Stood the Supreme Test at Operating Table in Hospital.

By HAROLD CARTER.

Nurse Glynn tapped quickly at the door of Doctor Bentley's room in the Central hospital, and then entered without further ceremony. The doctor was seated at his table, writing; he had not heard her knock. As she approached he turned round in his chair, got up, and took her in his arms and kissed her.

"I'm wanted?" he asked.

"Yes, dear. An emergency case. A child has been knocked down by an automobile. His leg is broken and there are internal injuries."

"Are they getting him ready?" asked the doctor, slipping into his linen overalls.

"He's being anaesthetized now," Nurse Glynn answered, and kissed him again. "O my dear, how glad I shall be when Easter comes. Then we shall be together always—no more of these hasty meetings."

She went out noiselessly, and Doctor Bentley, having completed his preparations, followed her into the operating room. The little patient lay upon the glass table, ready for his scalpel. At the head sat the nurse, pouring out, from time to time, a few drops of ether upon the mask which covered the lower part of the face. But although she watched the boy attentively she also watched the doctor; and she watched him with some sort of intuitive faculty of sight, so that, without failing in her duty, she was as conscious of him as of the child.

For this was to be the supreme measure by which she might understand his love for her, whether strong and abiding, or a pitiful thing born of loneliness on the one side and propinquity upon the other. She was not sure of him; she could not be sure until he met the mother of the child on his way out.

He did not know that this was his own child upon which he was operating so deftly. His skilful fingers picked up the shattered filaments of muscle and flesh, uniting them for his assistant's sutures. His scalpel cut into the bruised tissues, but mercifully, and only to lay bare the shattered bones within. None at the Central hospital bore such a reputation for deft and careful surgery as Doctor Bentley.

"Have No Fear of That."

They had been engaged three months. She knew what was a common report, that he had been married before, unhappily; that his wife had gone west and obtained a divorce upon the technical ground of desertion; that she had returned, to marry Anthony Blair, the millionaire, who could afford to give her those luxuries which her butterfly soul desired, and which the doctor, immersed in his work, had never dreamed of as necessary to her, nor been able to gratify.

But that there had been a child she did not know till that evening when Mrs. Blair appeared with a white face at the hospital gates and pleaded for the crippled baby that had been knocked down. She carried it in her arms, and Nurse Glynn would never forget the look of terror upon her face. That it was the doctor's child she knew, for it must have been four years old, and it was only three years since the couple had separated.

Well, when he knew, would his heart turn with yearning toward his child and cast her out utterly, even though he knew that the past could be undone?

The operation was almost ended. The last instrument was replaced in the tray of bubbling water; Doctor Bentley was sponging the sewn tissues with the perchloride and pulling off his gloves. He divested himself of his linen garments and stood up once more conventionally clothed. Nurse Glynn removed the mask. The little patient moaned and stirred.

"He'll do finely now," she heard the doctor say. "Take him up to the ward, nurse. And—good-night."

She wheeled the table into the adjoining room, transferred the child to the stretcher, and began pushing it through into the passage. The woman was waiting there—Mrs. Anthony Blair. Nurse Glynn hesitated involuntarily. She heard the doctor at her heels; in another minute he would know.

The night nurse took the stretcher from her. She turned away and lingered a moment near. Then she saw the doctor start and heard the woman's agonized cry.

"Oh, doctor, is he dead? He is not dead? He will live then? You must save him!" Then came the little exclamation of recognition and then silence. The two were standing alone. For the news of the meeting had spread among the other nurses and the hospital staff, and they tactfully disappeared.

"Oh, it's you," the nurse heard Mrs. Blair exclaim, in an embarrassed voice.

"Yes, Alice," she heard the doctor answer gravely. "I am happy to tell you that he will recover and that the limb will not be shortened. I am so sorry for you," he added impulsively. "It must have been a terrific blow. Your son—"

Her son! Was he, then, disclaiming the paternity of the boy, or did he not know?

"How old is he? He is a promising little fellow."

"Nearly four," answered the woman. She was still trembling, still overcome by the shock of the meeting. Her little butterfly mind was badly bruised, even as the child's little body had been.

"Four!" exclaimed Doctor Bentley in astonishment. Nurse Glynn, standing near, saw his face turn pale. He made an impulsive step toward her. "Alice! Whose child is he? Who is his father?" he demanded fiercely.

"I don't know," sobbed Mrs. Blair. "Why do you ask me? Why are you looking at me like that? Haven't you injured me enough that you should terrify me?" she sobbed. "I don't know who is its father, nor its mother either."

"Its—mother!" gasped the doctor. "Isn't he your child then?"

"Certainly not!" she exclaimed, drawing herself up indignantly. "Do you suppose my child would go to a common hospital if he were injured? Didn't they tell you that John ran the automobile over a street brat? Yes," she continued in a petulant voice, "and a crowd gathered and threatened me, and if I hadn't had enough presence of mind to jump out and carry him into the hospital they would have thrown stones at me. And I don't dare to go out if he should be going to die, or I shall be arrested and thrown into a common cell."

"Have no fear of that, Mrs. Blair," answered the doctor gravely. "I shall have you sent home in my own automobile. And the child will be well in a few weeks. As for the damage—"

"Mr. Blair is able to pay for any damages," replied the woman coldly. She had not understood.

The doctor bowed and turned away. He walked straight past Nurse Glynn; she followed him; he turned and saw her.

"You know, then?" he asked, seeing the look on her face.

"Yes, dear," she whispered. "And—I have been so afraid!"

He pressed her to his heart.

"You thought it was my child? If it had been—"

"If it had been," she whispered anxiously.

"Dearest," answered the doctor gravely, "I might have loved then. But you would still have been first in my heart—as now, as always."

COULDN'T KEEP ANY GOODS

Country Storekeeper Pretty Well Discouraged at the Perversity of His Customers.

"Have you crackers of any kind?" asked one of an automobile party as he entered a little store by the roadside nine miles from the nearest town.

"No, I'm just out o' crackers," was the reply. "I had some last week, but a man come along here the other day and bought all I had—darn it all! Seems like as soon as I lay in a stock of anything some one comes along and buys it all o' me, an' I got to bother round gittin' more."

"Have you any sardines?"

"Not a one. I got a dozen boxes a couple o' months ago, but some fellers on a fishin' touse come along the other day an' bought the last two boxes—plague take 'em! Seems as though I can't keep nothin' on hand fer my customers!"

"Well, have you any oranges or fruit of any other kind?"

"No, I ain't. I got half a box o' oranges two or three weeks ago an' a auto load o' people came along and grabbed up the last of 'em the other day. I told 'em that if they tuk 'em all I'd jest have to git some more, an' I'd a good mind not to let 'em have 'em."

"My wife wants a spool of white thread. Have you any?"

"Sold the last spool I had Sat'day, dang it all! I tell ye, this keepin' store is mighty discouragin' biziness. Soon as you lay in a lot o' stuff some one comes in an' buys it all off'n you an' you got to hustle around an' git more. A man come in this mornin' an' bought the last bit o' cheese I had, an' here I was 'lottin' on havin' it last a couple o' weeks yet. It discourages me so sellin' things most as soon as git 'em on the shelves that I've a good mind to sell out an' go back to farmin' where you ain't pestered the way you are when you keep sto'. I'm plum discouraged!"—Puck.

Recent Indian Horrors.

The lecturer was criticising Uncle Sam's method of handling the affairs of certain tribes.

"Pardon me for interrupting you," spoke up an auditor, 'but do you maintain that we are our Indian brothers' Chero-keepers?"

"I have no hesitation, sir," answered the lecturer, frowning at him, "in pronouncing that the Choctawfulest pun I ever heard."

Every man wants to climb twice as high as he can ever hope to get.

BLIND BUT HAPPY WROTE MANY HYMNS

Fanny Crosby, Author of Best Known Sacred Songs in English Language

The name of Fanny Crosby is known wherever hymns are sung, for she has written upwards of eight thousand of them. On her ninety-third birthday this little blind songstress, diminutive as a child of twelve and tremulous under the weight of her great age, granted an interview to a woman reporter at her home in Bridgeport, Conn.

"All my life I have had so much!" she said. "After four score years and ten I know wretchedness only by hearsay; but, oh, I hope I have comforted some who were heavily burdened. That hope spurred me to the writing of the hymns. But I have written so very many that it is impossible to remember most of them. For that reason I have often made laughable mistakes. One morning at Northfield the audience sang, 'Hide Me, O My Saviour, Hide,' and I was so much pleased with it that, turning to Mr. Sankey, I asked 'where did you get that song?'

"'Really,' he replied, 'you ought to know, for you are the guilty author.'

"Generally when the melody is given I choose my own subject for a hymn-poem.

"My mother's death in 1890 suggested:

"'Over the River they call me.
Friends that are dear to my heart
Soon I shall meet them in glory,
Never, no never, to part.'

"Again, the story of a Boston harbor pilot's dying word proved an inspiration. 'I see the light,' he said to those who watched beside him, and, hearing that last word, I wrote:

"'I see the Light, 'tis coming,
It breaks upon my soul;
It streams above the tempest
And ocean waves that roll.'

"That many of my hymns have been dictated by the Holy Spirit I have no doubt. Sometimes it seemed that there was a deep, clear well of inspiration from which I was free to draw. At other times the burden of inspiration was almost too heavy.

FANNY CROSBY

The blind hymn writer

"Most of my verses are written in the night. Sometimes a hymn comes to me by stanzas, and needs only to be written down, but I never have any part of a poem committed to paper until the whole is composed.

"The hymn, 'O Child of God, Wait Patiently,' came into being at Northfield. Mr. Sankey played a pretty air and asked me to write a poem, but my mind seemed a blank. Next morning just when we were all going for a drive, I asked to be excused and in a few moments the words of the hymn came in regular order just as they now stand:

"'O Child of God, wait patiently
When dark thy path may be
And let thy faith lean trustingly
On Him who cares for thee.'

"The best of my poems, the ones that are my favorites, came as a complete whole, needing no revision. In April, 1868, and old and dear friend, when bidding me good-bye, said, 'I have just forty minutes before my train leaves for Cincinnati. Here is a melody. Can you write words for it?' For twenty minutes I was wholly unconscious of all else except the work I was doing. At the end of that time I recited the words to 'Safe in the Arms of Jesus.'"

MAN WHO STOLE KINGSTON MAIL WAS SON OF POSTAL DRIVER

Tells Police of Taking Bag, Rifling it, and Then Burning What He Did Not Want.

TORONTO, Aug. 8l—Jack O'Brien, the man arrested in Sudbury two days ago for stealing a mail bag at Kingston on the 22nd of January, spent last night in Toronto. He was brought here by Dominion Inspector James Parkinson, of Ottawa, and will be taken on to Kingston today to face his trial.

His arrest puts an end to the quest of the Dominion Detective Department, who have been hard at work since the affair happened. Their labors will cease because the accused has admitted everything with which he is being charged, but the admissions were no doubt due to the fact that the police had such a chain of evidence that denial would be foolish.

O'Brien's father had the contract for driving the mail from the station to the post office, and on this account the presence of the son around the mail bags did not arouse any particular suspicion. On the day in question the train mail clerks were busy transferring their routes, and O'Brien took advantage of their absence and decamped with one of the bags.

Marriage was Null Because Husband Had Another Wife

Unusual Case of Bigamy in the Montreal Courts - Separation Was Mutual.

MONTREAL, Aug. 7.—An unusual case of bigamy came up in the Civil Court yesterday, when Mr. Justice Demeres declared the marriage of Luiggi Taddeo, alias Ross, and Jessimina Lepello null and void.

The suit was brought by a mutual arrangement between the two, both being anxious to dissolve their union. Taddeo married Jessimina ten years ago in St. Patrick's Church Toronto, although he had a wife living in the United States. Divorce proceedings with his former wife were pending and apparently he considered this constituted an annulment. He did not live long with his second wife, who was only a child of thirteen, but disappeared, and all trace of him was lost by her relatives. A short time ago Taddeo was found in this city, being employed as a foreman of construction. When informed that his second wife cognisant of his former marriage, and was anxious to be freed, he made no objection, admitting the allegations regarding his first marriage.

Mr. Justice Demers, in giving his judgment, stated that the mere fact that Taddeo was married at the time of his contract with Miss Lepello made that contract null and void. It is possible that, in view of the statements made by Taddedo, further action may be taken in the case. L. A. Rivet, K. C., appeared for Miss Lepelo, and Leopold Houle for Taddeo.

Sudden Death of A Sidney Gardener

Mr. James Holden a market gardener, who resided in Sidney, near the village of Frankford, expired suddenly yesterday. Deceased was about his garden in the afternoon when he was seized with an attack of heart failure which proved fatal. He had expired before assistance reached him. Mr. Holden was about 50 years of age, and was well known and highly respected. He was in the city on Saturday last and was apparently in the best of health. A widow but no family survives.

Slight Blaze at Trenton Yesterday

Yesterday afternoon about two o'clock a blaze broke out in the stables of the Union Hotel at Trenton. The prompt action on the part of the fire brigade checked the flames and the damage was fortunately slight. Later the brigade was again called to the same place, but their services were not required. Had the flames gained head way there is no doubt that a serious fire would have resulted.

TRAINS LEAVES RAILS

Passengers Unhurt—Cars Stayed on Track—Seven Hours' Delay

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 8.—(Special).—A Pere Marquette passenger train from Port Stanley went off the rails two miles north of that place at noon to-day. The tender of the locomotive, the baggage car and two coaches went off the rails, but remained upright on the roadbed.

There was a steep embankment at the place where the accident occurred. Only two passengers were on board, and they escaped unhurt. Traffic was held up for seven hours.

GOVERNMENT TO BRING NAVAL BILL AT NEXT SESSION

If Britain Builds Ships Then Canada will Foot the Bill is Policy of the Administration - Discussion in England Fully Justifies Canadian Government Plans on Contribution.

OTTAWA, August 7.—There is the best reason to believe that the section of the Canadian Senate in rejecting the Borden Government's Naval Bill will not preclude the further consideration of the naval question at the next session of Parliament.

The discussion on the Admiralty's plans in the past month and the obvious and reiterated dependence of the British Government on Canada's participation in the burden of naval defence not only justify abundantly the policy of the Government here, but suggest that despite the opposition of the Liberal Senate, the subject is likely to be reverted to.

Yesterday's announcement of New Zealand's further adherence to the policy of one Imperial navy lends additional strength to the similar attitude of the Government at Ottawa.

Narrow Escape At Parham Wreck

It was by the merest act of Providence that the accident which occurred at Parham on Tuesday did not result in the death of six persons instead of two. The fact that the cable connecting the cars which composed the gravel train, on which rode the six men, from being hurled to the bottom of the embankment, a distance of 50 feet, with the other cars on top of them. The jury which conducted the inquest found that death was purely accidental and that no blame could be placed on the company.

A Good Hockey Player

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 6, 1913.
The Sporting Editor,
The Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I was told by a friend of mine in the city here that you wanted several good hockey players for intermediate O.H.A., in your town this winter. I have had several good offers from teams in different parts of the country but do not care to accept any of them unless I am able to get something that suits me. If you would get me a good position in an office of some kind I would be pleased to come down and play for you this winter or have a tryout with you at least. I am sure that I can make good. I can give you all kinds of references as to my hockey playing if you wish it.

I will be pleased to hear from you any time and find out what you think about it. I remain,

Yours very truly,
C. H. PLETSCH.

Posed as Police Officers but Two Come to Grief

MONTREAL, Aug. 7.—"This is one of the worst cases I ever heard of," said Recorder Semple in Court to-day as he sentenced William McKinney, of St. Catharine street East, and Grant Carmichael, of George street, to a $25 fine or two months and $20 fine or one month respectively, for having represented themselves as detectives and attempting to place under arrest George Farley of New York, and a woman friend, at 5 o'clock this morning.

The evidence as given by Constable Larose, who took the "detectives" into custody, and by Farley and the woman proved that the two men had followed Farley and his friend in a cab from a St. Catharine East street cafe and when Farley's cab turned on to Hutchison street had stopped them and told them they were under arrest.

Farley attempted to jump from the cab, but was restrained by McKinney and Carmichael and forced back into the vehicle. McKinney was asked to show his badge, but refused to do so, and ordered the cabman to drive along Sherbrooke street. Meanwhile a resident of Hutchison street, who had seen the affair had telephoned the police and as the cab was driving away Farley's companion screamed and attracted the attention of Constable Larose. Larose took all four persons into custody, holding Farley and the woman as witnesses.

At the trial to-day it developed that Farley had been relieved of his watch and chain, but by whom he could not say. The watch valued at $140 was not found in the posession of either of the "detectives."

In passing the sentence on the two men, Recorder Semple stated that had it not been for the fact that McKinney had at times been of aid to the local police in tracking down wanted men, he would have given him the maximum sentence.

His leniency towards Carmichael, he stated was due to the fact that Carmichael had assisted McKinney out of fear of McKinney's threat of arrest for refusing to help him. McKinney did not deny this allegation.

The woman who figured in the case is a stranger in the city.

Hastings Man Has Narrow Escape

HASTINGS, Aug. 7.—What came near being a fatal level crossing accident, happened tonight at 7.30 o'clock here, when the Belleville-Peterborough Grand Trunk train struck a rig driven by Mr. P. McGuire. With him was Mr. H. McCarthy, and both men were quite badly injured. The vehicle was completely demolished and the horse so badly hurt that J. H. Ross, V.S., found it necessary to shoot it. Drs. Edmison, Richards and Wade attended the injured men, who were both unconscious for some time. Both, however, have recovered sufficiently to be taken to their homes. The crossing is a bad one. Only three years ago in this same place, a similar accident happened.

Trip in Canada Eye-Opener To British Party

Some Had Never Crossed Dominion's Wide Expanse Before—Are Amazed.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 7.—Lord Emmott, of the touring party of British parliamentarians, on sailing from this port for Australia and New Zealand, after a hasty tour of Canada, gave the following farewell message to Canada:

"We have had an extremely interesting journey across Canada, and to all of us, and most of all to those who, like myself have never crossed the great Dominion before, this visit will be the landmark in our lives. We had no mission to Canada, and we were merely passing through on our way to Australia in response to an invitation from the Empire Parliamentary Association of the Commonwealth. All the more do we feel grateful for kindness and cordiality of our reception in every portion of the Dominion from Montreal and Ottawa in the East to Vancouver and Victoria in the West.

"Everywhere kindness and attention has been shown us by Ministers, Lieutenant Governors, municipal authorities, commercial magnates, in fact, by everybody with whom we came in contact. We wish to thank Mr. Ames, M.P., and Mr. Chambers, Chairman and Honorary Secretary of the Dominion Branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association, for great assistance rendered us in every way.

"We were all greatly impressed by the great natural resources in Canada, magnificent waterways, immense areas of fertile land developed and undeveloped, and by the marvellous scenery of the Rocky Mountains.

"Everywhere we were struck by the capable energy and buoyancy of her people and by their faith, in our opinion completely justified, in the great future in store for this country of ours.

"Last, but by no means least, we were touched by the evidence on every hand of sincere attachment to the Mother Country, of loyalty to the throne and of devotion to the Empire. If we have been fortunate enough to leave behind us an impression here half as pleasant as that we take away with us, we shall feel that our journey has not been in vain."

Speedy Auto Drivers Still in Evidence

As the circus patrons were returning home last evening, and when many vehicles were on the streets, an auto came tearing down Charles street at the rate of from 30 to 40 miles an hour, regardless of the fact that a smash was liable at any instant. Some of these reckless drivers need looking after in a strenuous manner, and the sooner the quicker.

MINE MAY BE REOPENED

In response to appointment by telegram our local mining engineer, E. J. Cowain, met Mr. Coulter, mining engineer of the Canadian Exploration Co., of Toronto, at Tweed Station on Wednesday and together they left for the Borth mines in Clarendon township, Addington Co. It will be remembered that Mr. Cowain paid a visit of inspection to this property about a month ago under instructions from the above company and must have considered it very favorable. Mr. Cowain is sanguine in his opinion that the mine will be re-opened—Tweed Advocate.

Dust Without Dust, With 3-in-One oil

Don't scatter dust and germs all over your home or office with an unsanitary feather duster or common dusting rag. Always dust with 3-in-One oil this way: Moisten cheese cloth with a little of the oil. Then just wipe off your piano, chair, parlor table, mantelpiece—any veneered surface. Every atom of dust will stick to the cloth. Not one speck can fly around to settle somewhere else.

Make Your Own Dustless Dusting Cloth for 5c.

This is the way: Take about two-thirds of a yard of cheese cloth. Sprinkle it with 3-in-One oil. Then let it stand until the oil has permeated every part. Then you have a real Dusting Cloth for 5c. Buy a bottle and make your own Dusting Cloth today!

For sale at all good hardware, drug, grocery and general stores. 1 oz., 10c; 3 oz., 25c; 8 oz., ½ pt., 50c.

LIND NOT WELCOME IN MEXICO CITY

President Huerta Has Declared That Wilson's Envoy Will Not Be Well Received Unless He Presents Proper Credentials—Bryan Informs Mexico That Lind's Mission Is Peaceful.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—(C.A.P.)—The native newspapers today express loud praise of Provisional President Huerta's declaration that John Lind will be "persona non grata" in Mexico. The Independente declares that the provisional president's action constitutes "irreproachable logic."

The Imparcial says that the declaration will present to all nations the attitude of Mexico in the face of the menace of intervention by the American Government. El Pais says: "The dignity and decorum of Mexico are in firm hands."

The note issued by the Mexican foreign office late last night, saying that John Lind would be "persona non grata" unless he brought "credentials in due form, together with recognition of the government of Mexico," is regarded as a reply to Secretary of State Bryan's message of yesterday, to the effect that the government of Mexico should admit Washington's communication and not give weight to sensational misrepresentations, altho the Mexican note was prepared in advance of the receipt of Secretary Bryan's message. The exchange of communications was almost simultaneous.

The greatest possible interest is manifested on all sides in the outcome of what is regarded as a diplomatic crisis.

Secretary of State Bryan sent last night the following telegram to the American legation here:

"You may say to the minister of foreign affairs that Gov. Lind comes to Mexico on a mission of peace, and that the president feels sure his presence there will contribute to a settlement of the difficulties. The Mexican Government should await the president's communication and not give weight to misrepresentations published in sensational newspapers."

The message was delivered to the foreign minister.

Increased antagonism has been aroused among Mexicans toward President Wilson's plan for the pacification of the republic by the latest news from Washington, that the object of John Lind's visit here as the personal representative of President Wilson is to consult with prominent Mexicans and advise them that the only basis on which Mexico will be recognized by the United States is the elimination of President Huerta.

Earlier reports to the effect that Mr. Lind purposed to deal with Huerta, perhaps by making the direct suggestion that he resign, were received with indignation by Mexican officials, and the new angle of his visit makes it not improbable that he will be treated with even less consideration than otherwise would have been accorded him.

Pres. Huerta's prestige among Mexicans in the capital has undoubtedly been strengthened by what is regarded as his defiance of the United States. Even those who had been lukewarm in their support of the administration profess admiration for the soldier-president who dared to talk back to Washington, altho not all of them agree as to the wisdom of his course, and many of them consider that he acted precipitately in view of the officially-defined intentions of Washington.

Just what course President Huerta will take in the event that John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, continues his trip to Mexico is a matter for speculation. No official declaration has been made as yet as to what this course will be. It is assumed that Mr. Lind might enter the republic at Vera Cruz and come to the capital without molestation, since the question of his credentials could not be expected to be answered until his arrival here, but whether he shall be expelled or merely ignored remains undetermined.

Up To Washington Now.

Keen interest is being evinced as to what the attitude of Washington will be in the face of President Huerta's defiance, and speculation is divided as to whether Mr. Lind will be recalled or permitted to continue as far as he can and thus force the issue upon President Huerta. Mexicans of the conservative class appear to believe that Huerta will not drive Mr. Lind from the country, but will be content with ignoring him, except, perhaps, for subjecting him to surveillance in order to see that he does nothing possible of being construed as mixing in the politics of the country.

Unless a radical change is effected in the sentiment at the palace, Mr. Lind will not be given an opportunity to talk with President Huerta, even tho he is permitted to remain in the capital; nor will he be any more successful in meeting any official of the government.

YOUNG WIFE'S STORY

Woman's Story of Treatment Gains Leniency From Judge.

KINGSTON, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—Mrs. Charlotte Meeks, arrested on a charge of bigamy preferred against her by Stuart Meeks of Rochester, N. Y., had a speedy trial. She was arraigned today before Acting Magistrate Mayor T. J. Rigney, pleaded guilty, was brought before Judge Price, and after taking her statement the judge allowed her to go on suspended sentence.

She told a story of ill-treatment on the part of her husband and said he would not support her. She said that he ran away from her, and that before he did so he gave their baby an overdose of laudanum, and the child died two weeks afterward. He also abused her by burning her with hot irons. At the time she married Patrick J. Brennan in Kingston she did not know where Meeks was and could not get trace of him. She thought he was dead.

SECRETARY TELLS

Ex-Employe of Manufacturers Gives Away Their Secrets.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—The internal workings of the National Association of Manufacturers were explained to the house lobby committee today by James L. Ewell, formerly manager of a trade publication issued in connection with the organization. The witness went at great length into several internal dissensions that disturbed the organization and attacked rather bitterly some of its officials, particularly J. P. Bird, who, he declared, treated him unfairly in discharging him from the employ of the association.

Little of Ewell's testimony bore on the legislative activities of the association, altho he did describe two conversations between Bird and Col. Martin M. Mulhall, at which he was present.

"On one occasion," he said, "I knew there was a tremendous fight on in the district of Representative Hughes of New Jersey. I was talking to Mr. [illegible] when Mr. Mulhall came into the room. In his characteristic way he shouted: 'Well, I could have done better if I had more money. I didn't have enough money to buy them. I think I did damn well with the money I had, don't you?'"

On another occasion Ewell said he heard Mulhall demand $2500 from Bird "for working Washington." Bird promised him the money, the witness declared. Ewell told the committee of the circumstances of the resignation of Marshall Cushing as secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers. He said that Cushing declined to tell the officers and directors the details of the expenditure of money in a campaign to re-elect Representative Littlefield for Maine.

"They wanted to know just what he did with the money he had," said Ewell. "He said that he thought that it wouldn't do him or the directors any good if he told them. He told me he went the limit to secure Littlefield's election. He wouldn't tell the directors, so he resigned."

Ewell was still under examination when adjournment was taken.

SCHOONER IN DANGER

Crew of "Kitchen" Preferred to Stay on Sinking Ship.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—The coal schooner, Kitchen, sprung a leak last night when in the lake southeast of Ward's Island and started to sink The crew of seven men, including officers, immediately set to work with the hand pumps and every inch of power in the boat was crowded on in an attempt to beach the schooner before she sank.

Whistles of distress were heard by the life-saving crew at Ward's Island shortly after midnight, and Matt McDonnell put out in the Patricia with three of his men. The life-saving crew picked up the schooner about a mile and a half off the island and drew up alongside of her. The captain reported that the vessel was leaking badly and had only about two feet of "clearboard." The crew were asked if they would leave the ship and get in the lifeboat, but replied that they would stick to the schooner until she sank.

A heavy sea was running, and the captain of the schooner said that it was either a case of beaching her or letting her founder. The lifeboat went for Captain Goodwin of the fire-boat Joe Goodwin, and just before one o'clock he set out in the tug. A line was passed to the schooner, and the tug succeeded in reaching the mouth of the channel at 2 o'clock this morning. It was thought that the boat would sink before she got thru the channel.

The Kitchen is a two-masted coaling schooner from Cobourg, and was bound for Oakville. She sprang a leak when ten miles out in the lake, and but for the captain's seamanship would have sunk with the crew of seven on board.

KICKED INJURED GIRL

Inhuman Mother Angry Because Child Was Hurt by Auto.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Because she got in the way of a wagon while playing in the road and had her toes crushed, little Anna Cullvick, 109 Portland street, was kicked, beaten and abused by her mother until two neighbors who had brought her into the house took the child from the crazed mother and carried her to the University Mission on Adelaide street.

The little child, who is only 6 years old, had been playing in front of her home when a wagon knocked her down and ran over her, grinding all the toes on her right foot to a pulp. Two neighbors carried her into her home. The mother, incensed to think that the child should get in the way of a wagon, started to kick her on the body.

The neighbors, after the girl had been subjected to such ill usage, took her from the unnatural mother, and the little one was taken to the Sick Children's Hospital in the police ambulance.

AUTO TANK EXPLODES

Philadelphia Streets Are Flooded With Burning Fluid.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—Four large manufacturing plants were theatened with destruction, several firemen were burned or overcome by smoke and many families had to flee for their lives from their homes this afternoon when the plant of the Union Petroleum Co., which occupied an entire block in the southern section of the city, was practically destroyed in a spectacular fire that raged for hours. The loss is estimated at $125,000.

Five minutes after the first explosion the flames communicated themselves to a 110,000 gallon tank, which exploded, sending an avalanche of burning oil in all directions. Great rivers of oil ran down the streets from the oil tanks and laborers cut trenches for it into the sewers, so that it could escape before becoming ignited. The cause of the fire is not known.

TO IMPEACH SULZER

N. Y. State Governor's Campaign Funds Under Scrutiny.

Political Opponents of Democratic Chief Executives Promise Startling Revelations After a Probe Into Source of Sulzer's Sinews of War in the Recent Campaign.

The governor and his opponents in the Democratic wing of the state legislature have been at war for months. Recently the legislature named a committee to investigate the governor. At present it is revealing astounding things in connection with the funds contributed to elect Sulzer governor. Under oath he reported, as the law requires, that $5460 was the aggregate of contributions. The committee is showing contributions far in excess of this, none of which was reported, and, in addition, Sulzer's bank account grew more than $30,000 during the campaign. It is asserted by members of this committee that the funds raised by the governor was nearly $75,000.

Convinced that the investigation of Sulzer's alleged stock gambling undertakings and hidden campaign contributions has reached a point where only two or three further hearings will be needed to prove official as well as moral obliquity, the investigating committee is on the eve of formulating plans for the removal of Mr. Sulzer from office. Whether the committee will recommend the governor's impeachment or seek his removal thru the agency of indictment and criminal prosecution is a question hinging on developments at a hearing to be held tomorrow morning, and possible final committee sessions in Albany next week.

The sudden, tho not unexpected determination to "get quick action," as Counsel Richards expressed it, followed today's hearing.

The one big and highly essential development of today was the frank admission of Philip Boyer of the defunct brokerage firm of Boyer, Griswold & Co., that the campaign cheque for $500 given Mr. Sulzer by John Lynn of New York was thru his former brokerage house and was deposited by the firm on Oct. 16, 1912.

During this month, according to the recollection of Mr. Boyer, Frederick H. Colwell of Yonkers, alleged by the committee to be agent for Gov. Sulzer in his stock speculations, bought of Boyer, Griswold & Co., 100 shares of Big Four Railroad stock.

It was maintained before the committee yesterday that Gov. Sulzer, on Oct. 12, 1912, opened an account with Fuller & Gray, brokers, of No. 71 Broadway, and purchased outright 200 shares of Big Four stock.

If this firm's books are produced today, perhaps it will be shown that the Lynn cheque went in part payment for the 100 shares of Big Four bought by Colwell. If this is proved there will no longer exist any question that money contributed to the Sulzer campaign fund was used for speculating in Wall street. Such use of campaign money, the committee asserts, constitutes larceny.

No Canteen in Brantford.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—There will be no canteen in the new armory building in Brantford for the 25th Brant Dragoons and Field Battery. Such was the intimation made today by Lt.-Col. F. Muir, commanding officer, who expressed himself as a strong supporter of the dry Niagara camp as inaugurated by the minister of militia. "If it works to advantage at Niagara, why should it not be a good thing in an armory building?" said the colonel.

Engine Goes Through Bridge.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 7.—(Special.)—Last night, while crossing the bridge over the Chillico Creek at Fisher's Mills, near Hespeler, William Black's traction engine crashed thru, wrecking a thirty foot span. Miraculously no one was killed and the outfit was restored to terra firma after several hours' labor.

THOUSANDS OF MEN REQUIRED

This Year's Harvest promises to be be the largest in

THE HISTORY OF CANADA

According to present indications the wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to assist in harvesting the world's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates, rates and conditions will be announced in a few days.

DEATH ROLL

ROBT.. McCOY

Many were the expressions of regret heard upon the street to-day, when it became known that Mr. Robert McCoy had passed away. Shortly before the midnight hour his spirit took flight to that haven of rest where suffering is unknown. For some months he had been the victim of a malady, which baffled medical skill. He however bore his sufferings heroically and the end came peacefully. Deceased was born in this city in the year 1862, being thus in his 51st year. He was the eldest son of the late Mr. David McCoy, who was a well known citizen. "Bob" as he was familiarly called, lived all his life in this city, which was dear to him. When a young man of 20 years, he joined the fire department, and was an active member, being ever ready to do his part when duty called. Of late years he had provided the city with horses for the hose reel and hook and ladder waggon. For a number of years Mr. McCoy conducted successfully a livery business and in this respect he was universally liked by the travelling public, and citizens generally. Deceased took considerable interest in Secret Societies, being a member of the Belleville Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Moira Chapter, A. O. U. W., and I. O. F. Societies. The funeral will be under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity. In religion Mr. McCoy was an Anglican, and in politics a staunch Conservative. A widow and two sons, Bert and Arthur of this city, survive. To the grief stricken widow, who mourns the loss of a devoted husband, and the sons, who have lost a loving father, will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends. The Intelligencer extends its condolence to the bereaved ones.

Mr. McCoy left behind him one sister, Mrs. George Frost, and one brother, Mr. David McCoy, both residing in the city at the present time.

EDNA O. DRUMMOND

Edna Olive Drummond, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Drummond of this city, passed away on the 3rd inst., at Tweed. The remains were interred in the Victoria cemetery at Tweed on Monday the 4th inst. after services had been held at the house.

Deseronto Notes

(From the Post)

Misses Beatrice and May Loft, of Belleville, who have been visiting their sister, Mrs. Dan. Brant, have returned to their home.

County Crown Attorney Anderson was in town on Friday in connection with the case of a brute who had shamefully ill-treated his wife. Being brought before Magistrate Bedford, he was given four months at hard labor on the prison farm.

Mr. Clarence Pasmore, son of Dr. Pasmore, passed through Deseronto the other day on his way from Regina to Montreal, where he has accepted a position on the "Gazette."

Chief Heaney, on behalf of the Deseronto Fire Brigade, wishes to thank the different lodges and the townspeople as well, for so nobly helping to make their demonstration a success.

To leave her father's home a happy bride, and to be brought home within about two months a corpse, does not fall to the lot of many young ladies, but such was the case with Miss Evelyn Turnbull, sister of Mrs. Paul Berry. The sad message telling of her passing away came from Toronto on Thursday, where Mrs. Davis, as that was her husband's name, lived at the time of her death, peritonitis being the cause. The body was brought home on Friday last.

Sparks from the passing engines on the line between here and Napanee are given the credit of causing fires that have done considerable damage on the farms of Messrs. Alfred Keech, John McCaul and others, where fences, cut hay and standing hay were consumed. One night last week it was necessary for the male members of some of the families above mentioned, to leave their beds to fight the flames.

The Canadian Northern Railway company has completed the work of grading the road east of Nepanee as fas as Sydenham. Many grades have been cut down and shorter routes made. A gang of men commenced at Napanee to lay down 90 lb. rails. The company expects to have the new service between Napanee and Sydenham in operation before the winter.

Just a as woman quits worrying about her own age she begins to worry about that of her unmarried daughter.

One of the first things a young man should learn is to take a hint.

The Brethren of The Belleville Lodge No. 123, G. R. C., A. F. and A. M., and members of Sister Lodges, are requested to meet for the purpose of attending the funeral of our late Bro. Robt. McCoy at the family residence, 124 Front St., on Sat. 9th inst., at 3.30 p. m.

By order of the W. M.,
D Barragar, Secty.

AMELIASBURG TO THE FRONT

Here is another record of a good dairy herd. This time it is the good old Township of Ameliasburg that comes well to the front. From a herd of 10 cows owned by Mr. R. C. Hubbs of Mountain View, 11,584 lbs. of milk was sent to the Mountain View Cheese Factory during the month of June, at $1.03 per 100. This amounted to $119.32, an average of $11.93 per cow. This is certainly a good record, and we congratulate Mr. Hubbs on his success as a dairyman—Picton Gazette.

FIRST SHIPMENT OF WHITE MARBLE

Two carloads of white marble from the Ontario Marble Quarries were shipped to Winnipeg last week. This was the first shipment of white marble from these quarries.

Summer School at Queen's Will Continue despite the Poor Attendance

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—It is announced that the trustees of Queen's University have decided to continue the Summer school, even though it is an expense. This season just closing there have been only 17 enrolled.

DEATH OF DR. GEO.. C. MATHISON

Just as we go to press, word comes of the death of Dr. Mathison of Winnipeg, Manitoba, one of the brightest lights in the profession of Canada. Dr. Mathison died after a breif illness from some affection of the brain, leaving a void in the professional ranks of his native country, which can never be filled. He was one of the most charming versatile, loyal and lovable men in dentistry; a power for good in the councils of his profession, and a friend of every man in it. Yesterday the world was brighter because George Mathison lived in it—to-day it is darker, because he has gone out of it. He did great good while here, but he did not remain long enough with us.—From "The Dental Review", Chicago, July, 1913. Dr. C. N. Johnson, Editor.

SHOWER OF METEORS IMPERILS AIRMEN

Berlin, Aug. 8.—Special.—A new danger for aviators was chronicled today by the German airman, Victor Stoeffler, of the Johannisthal Aerodrome, who reports that his biplane was caught in a shower of meteors last evening while he was flying with Lieut. Von Brederlow of the Prussian Army at an altitude of one mile. He heard the whizz of the meteors, which passed so close to the flying machine that both aviators say they felt them rush through the air.

BALKAN PEACE CONDITIONS

Peace has at last been declared in the Balkans and it is possible that an order demobilizing the armies of the various belligerents may be made next Saturday. The proclamation of peace has naturally been the signal for great rejoicing at Bucharest and we can imagine that Sofia is no less relieved, for the Bulgarian capital lies at the mercy of her foes and would fall with but little resistance, so exhausted has Bulgaria become.

We can only hope, says the Montreal Herald, that the peace thus inaugurated may be permanent, but it is well to remember that the war within a war which has so completely humbled the Bulgarian power was begun without formal declaration and in spite of a treaty. Bulgaria loses much territory, and is hoping that the boundary now insisted upon by the victorious Greeks, Servians and Roumanians may, later on, be revised by the Powers. There would seem to be little enough hope of this, for once the fighting has definitely stopped the Powers will, we imagine, be glad to let well enough alone. The danger of a cessation of hostilities with the territorial arrangement now proposed by Bulgaria's enemies is that the latter country will never rest contented. It is only a question of time until she has recuperated sufficiently to take from weaker rivals what she is now too exhausted to hold. Kipling's war correspondent who spent his life predicting the coming of trouble in the Balkans could safely continue his prophecies, so far as the present peace is concerned.

A BRITISH OBSERVER WITH A CLEAR VISION

Robert Wilson, a British journalist of repute, a man who has travelled widely and is familiar with farming conditions in many countries, writes enthusiastically regarding the opportunities in Kent county. In a recent article he says:

"The climate appeals to wide-awake farmers. Nowhere in Canada is there anything superior; nowhere are the winters more generally salubrious; nowhere are the summers more pleasant and healthful.

"The feature which ranks next in importance to climate is soil. Fertile soil earns a sure and certain reputation for any land. The fertility of the soil in Kent county is beyond all question, and this will be found exemplified in the fast-growing popularity of this district. This popularity, unlike that of many places, has undoubtedly come to remain. It indicates at last the ascendancy of the star of Sunny Southwestern Ontario, which for far too long has hesitated to do more than show itself on the horizon.

"It is indisputable that the climate in Western Ontario is delightful in the extreme, expecially for mixed farming and garden produce—leaves nothing to be desired. What are the opportunities presented by this new-old part of the Province, is now a perfectly reasonable interrogation.

"The conditions for farming here are practically those with which all eastern farmers are familiar. Similar crops may be raised, and in an ordinary season and with the same care the results are astonishing. And the reason why so few dwellers in this land are familiar with this pleasing state of things is, that they have been looking through spectacles the lenses of which have been adapted to long distances, and which, when turned on the landscape nearer home, have blurred and dimmed the prospect.

"Herein lies the opportunity for the newcomer to secure a foothold in a territory wonderfully rich, while the prices for the most fertile soil in Canada are still amazingly low."

Little Girl Exhibited As an Abyssinian

ST THOMAS, Aug. 7.—(Special).—William Ford of Ealing, near London, and Charles Cox of London appeared before County Magistrate Hunt at the Court House here to-day charged with "exposing a child under circumstances detrimental to her health and morals."

The child, who is eight years of age and in full possession of all her faculties, is a daughter of Ford, and has been used for several weeks in a travelling show under the name "Mamie Haha," she being shown in a pit in the midst of snakes which she handles at times. Cox, who is a colored man had taught her how to handle them.

A GREAT MISTAKE

Those who try to give the impression that all supporters of a Canadian fleet are opposed to Mr. Borden's Dreadnought policy are doing so unfairly and unjustly, says The Canadian Courier. Some of them are doing it through ignorance and some through partizanship. The truth is that the supporters of a Canadian fleet, similar to the Australian fleet, are both Conservatives and Liberals. Of the three hundred prominent men who signed the Non-Partisan memorial, one-half were Liberals and one-half Conservatives. That memorial had three features; it approved a Canadian navy, it favored a temporary contribution, and it advocated a "non-partisan" naval policy. It neither approved nor condemned the Borden policy. Neither did it approve or condemn the Laurier policy.

Just how far some of the journals here and in London are going in an effort to make it appear that the supporters of a Canadian fleet are against a temporary contribution may be gathered from the following paragraph in the Saturday Review of a recent date:

"There is an article in the Nineteenth Century, by Mr. Arthur Hawkes, of Toronto, which hardly makes pleasant reading, because whilst its loyalty to the Empire is unchallangeable, it lends upport to the idea of the little Canadian Navy, as opposed to the policy embodied in Mr. Borden's direct contribution to Imperial defence. . . . Mr. Hawkes forgets that Mr. Borden adopted the policy embodied in the Bill which the Senate refused to pass only after long and anxious investigation and consultation with the Admiralty. Mr. Borden has taken an Imperial line because he saw that a Canadian navy would be a mere naval futility. . . . If Canada's idea of nationhood within the empire is not entirely compatible with Mr. Borden's naval propositions, the sooner she and Mr. Hawkes study the matter from the larger point of view the better."

Mr. Hawkes is not opposed to the Dreadnought policy. He is afraid of a permanent policy of centralization which would make the people of Britain regard the overseas Dominions as "our colonies," and he is in favor of a Canadian navy. If Mr. Borden had been clearer with regard to a Canadian navy and had shown less tendency to favor centralism, he might easily have got his Dreadnought policy through Parliament.

The Saturday Review supports Mr. Borden and says that he saw that "a Canadian navy would be a mere futility." If the Saturday Review is correct in its statement of Mr. Borden's opinions, then the supporters of a Canadian navy will continue their agitation until Mr. Borden and his journalistic supporters here and in Britain change their view. A Britisher living in Canada should be, and must be, the equal of a Britisher living in Great Britain or Australia.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Canadian suggests that Col. Sam. Hughes would make an admirable Minister of the Navy. Col. Sam. would perhaps keep things humming, and perhaps make some changes.

WESTERN LETTER

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 7.—That the Mormon Church hierarchy in Salt Lake City has practically decided to abandon its Mexican colonization scheme and devote all of its outside energies to the development of its lands and settlements in Southern Alberta, was the announcement made semi-officially at Cardston, south of Calgary, last week on the occasion of the visit of Joseph F. Smith, of Utah, head of the church who came to Alberta to dedicate the site of the new temple to be built at Cardston and the first to be erected outside of Salt Lake City.

President Smith made no secret of the fact that the Church of Latter Day Saints had great development plans for the country south of Calgary. The church owns hundreds of thousands of acres of lands in this territory and is prepared to add to its holdings as often as it can, no matter what price has to be paid. President Smith also indicated that the church would make an attempt to buy out the Blood Indians who own a large reserve in the Mormon territory. He said he did not care what the Indians wanted for their lands. The church was wealthy and could afford to pay them a good price.

An impressive ceremony marked the dedication of the temple site by President Smith. In addition to the head of the denomination, several of the leading dignitaries of the church were present from Utah, in the persons of C. W. Penrose, second councillor; George A. Smith, one of the Twelve Apostles and Charles W. Nibley, presiding bishop, under whose direction the temple will be built.

The main theme of the president's address was his assurance to the world that nothing would be carried on in this temple that would be contrary to the law of the land. He also strongly emphasized the excellence of British institutions, British government, British law and British justice. He especially mentioned in this connection the desirable observance of the Sabbath he had noted in Canada in comparison with the laxity prevalent in the United States and other countries. He concluded by scoring the liquor traffic and by the statement that the whole American continent was the land of Zion and that the Mormon faith would eventually dominate the world.

An interesting feature of the ceremonies was the presence of "Aunt" Zina Card, wife of the pioneer Mormon settler in Southern Alberta and the daughter of Brigham Young, the pioneer of Salt Lake City, and one of the faith's greatest leaders. The presence of Mrs. Card created a link with the past of unusual interest.

Can Ship's Cat Keep the Ship

Courts Must Decide Peculiar Issue Arising from Derelict Barque "Glenmark."

Can a skipper leave the ship's cat in charge of his vessel?. This is the problem that will have to be decided in a British court now.

It arises out of the discovery of a living cat on board the abandoned Norwegian barque, "Glenmark", which was boarded by the C. P. R. "Montezuma" while on route to this part about 540 miles west of Fastnet. The barque was found derelict in the ocean—a menace to navigation. A British gunboat was sent in search of it with instructions to destroy it or bring it ashore.

It towed it into port. Then a living cat was found on board. According to an ancient sea law a ship is not abandoned as long as the cat or the dog is still on board alive. Now it is likely that the courts will decide if the old law is still good.

FORTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED

Farm Laborers' Excursion—This Year's Wheat Crop will be the Largest in THE HISTORY OF CANADA

The wheat crop of 1913 will be the greatest ever harvested, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that forty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route.

"Going Trip West," $10.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from Winnipeg up to MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton.

"Return Trip East", $18.00 to Winnipeg, plus half-cent per mile from all points east of MacLeod, Calgary or Edmonton, to Winnipeg.

Going Dates.—August 18th—From all stations Kingston to Renfrew inclusive and east thereof in Ontario.

August 22nd—From Toronto and West on Grand Trunk Main line to Sarnia inclusive and south thereof.

August 25th—From Torono and North Wesern Ontario, north of but not including Grand Trunk Line Toronto to Sarnia and east of Toronto to Kingston, Sharbot Lake and Renfrew, including these points.

Ottawa Merges Her Industries

OTTAWA, Aug. 7—The tendency of recent years towards industrial mergers and centralization of manufacture is strikingly illustrated in a bulletin issued by the Census Department to-day giving the list and other particulars regarding the manufactures of Canada, as enumerated at the last census.

This is particularly applicable to the figures given for Ottawa. They show that in 1891 the Capital had 553 manufactures, with a combined capital of $6,540,037, employing 6,683 persons and paying annually $1,854,749. In 1900 the number of establishments had dwindled to 208, but these had a combined capital of $10,358,711, employed 6886 hands, and paid out in wages $2,414,882. In 1911 the manufactures of the city numbered 203 but they were capitalized for the grand total of $21,098,994, employed 9,232 persons and their pay roll reached $4,614,372, a big increase in everything but the number of establishments. The value of the products turned out increased from slightly over eight and a half million in 1891 to nearly twenty millions in 1911.

BELIEVE SETTLEMENT HAS BEEN REACHED

MONCTON, N. B., Aug. 7.—What will probably be the concluding conference between the Brotherhood of Railway Employees and the Intercolonial management are being held to-day, and a complete settlement is believed to have been arrived at.

Something over one hundred clerks whose work is regarded as more or less confidential will withdraw from the Brotherhood and be treated with individually by the management. The others will receive a minimum increase of ten per cent.

The porters and other laborers will be put on the same basis as trackmen. The increase asked for was 12 per cent., and what is given is somewhat less or about 10 per cent. all round.

Aull Guilty of False Pretences

COBOURG, Aug. 7.—A court room packed to the limit with the fashionable summer colonists of Cobourg, often referred to as the Canadian Newport, gave a gasp of astonishment here to-day when Judge Benson, senior county judge, declared Robert Aull, of St. Louis, New Orleans, and Lexington, Ky., guilty of having obtained money under false pretenses.

Sentence will be passed on Friday and meanwhile the "Four Hundred" here are talking of nothing else. Young Aull's sensational marriage to Miss Doris Reid, daughter of a Toronto banker and capitalist, a little over a week ago, has given the idle rich here a continuous subject of conversation.

R. D. Albertini, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, the fashionable stopping place here, and Chief Ruse, of the Cobourg police, were the chief witnesses for the Crown. Col. Aull, parent of the prisoner, was put in the witness box.

Mr. Abertini told of the young man presenting a cheque for $99.05 on a St. Louis bank. Previously it had been stated that young Aull had said to Mr. Albertini that if the cheque was not good to let him known at 617 Prince building, St. Louis, when he got the cash. To-day Mr. Albertini modified this to the extent that this statement was made sometime after the money had been paid over.

Col. Aull admitted today that his son had not been living at home for three years or so, and that he had had trouble before over his cheques. The hotel bill ran up by young Aull was paid by his father in real money yesterday. So that the Arlington loses nothing.

But while this was taken into consideration by Judge Benson, his Honor said in summing up that he could not overlook the fact that the prisoner knew there was no money in the bank on which he had issued the cheque, and that therefore he must find him guilty of false pretences.

Col. Aull himself, it was shown, had been made defendant in a suit instituted by a Cobourg resident then in St. Louis, for a debt.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE JOURNAL OF COMMERCE

Harbour Improvements in Canada now under way, will cost upwards of fifty million dollars is the claim made by the Journal of Commerce, Montreal, in this week's issue. The article points out that this large expenditure is made necessary by the building of the Panama Canal, the deepening of the Welland and by the remarkable internal development going on in the Dominion.

An article from the pen of Mr. F. Page Wilson deals with the preparations being made by the Pacific Coast cities to take advantage of the increased business which will result from the opening of Big Ditch.

The Illustrated Article this week has to do with "Irrigation in the West", and in view of the country's attention being centered on the West at the present time is a most timely article.

An exhaustive analysis of the Report of the Commission on Technical Education from the pen of Mr. Sexton, Director of Technical Education in Nova Scotia, should be read by every business man in the Dominion.

Other notable articles are contributed by Prof. Skelton of Queen's who writes on "The General Strike", and Mr. E. S. Bates who treats on "The Textile Industry" of Great Britain.

The special attention which the Journal of Commerce is giving to market reports for all classes of commodities and securities fills a long felt want and should appeal to all business men.

THIRD WAR LIKELY

Peace Conference at Sofia Not at All Satisfactory.

Roumania, Whose Sudden Intervention Compelled the Bulgarians to Agree to Terms, Seems to Be the Only Nation Satisfied and Another Balkan Conflict Is Probable.

LONDON, Aug. 7—(Can. Press.)—The second Balkan peace conference having concluded peace on a basis of compromise, which is unsatisfactory to all the states concerned, except possibly Roumania, the question is being asked how soon before a third Balkan war will break out.

Bulgaria has obtained under the agreement arrived at in Bucharest today, a considerable portion of northern Macedonia—much more than the allies were at first inclined to give her—and also about sixty miles of the Aegean seaboard, which will enable her to build her projected railway from Philippopolis to the Aegean.

Bulgaria, however, deeply resents being deprived of Kavala, a port on Kavala Bay, which goes to Greece under the agreement. Also she is confronted with the task of expelling the Turks from Adrianople, it being clear that the powers will do nothing in this direction.

Bulgars Forced to Yield.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.)—Peace was concluded tonight between the Balkan States and the preliminary treaty will be signed tomorrow by the delegates of Servia, Greece, Montenegro, Roumania and Bulgaria. The agreement was arrived at only after another exhibition of the utter helplessness of Bulgaria to face her ring of enemies.

Wednesday the discussion in the peace conference threatened to become interminable, but M. Majorescu, the Roumanian premier, and president of the conference, clinched matters by threatening that unless Bulgaria accepted the modified frontier proposed by the allies, Roumania's army would occupy Sofia next Saturday. This threat had the desired effect, and an agreement was arrived at today after numerous private consultations between the delegates and a four hours' sitting of the conference.

The new frontier as agreed to starts at a point on the old frontier, west of the Struma River, follows the watershed to west of the town of Strumnitza, thence runs almost thru the Struma valley to the Belesh Mountains, and thence easterly in almost a straight line to the Lesta River, thus leaving the town of Strumnitza, the Port of Lagos and Kanthi to Bulgaria, and the Port of Kavala to Greece. The new frontier is a deep disappointment to the Bulgarians who still nurse hopes for its eventual revision by the powers.

It is believed that an agreement for the demobilization of the various armies will be signed tomorrow. The news that peace had been arranged, caused great rejoicings here.

WIN, LOSE OR DRAW RITCHIE GETS $15,000

Vancouver, Aug. .—Willie Ritchie world's champion lightweight, will defend his title against Freddie Welsh at Brighthouse Arena here on Labor Day, Monday, September 1. The champion yesterday wired his acceptance of the terms offered by Vancouver promoters and will start from San Francisco next Sunday.

Ritchie will get $15,000, win, lose, or draw, with privilege of 50 per cent. of the receipts and he will draw down 50 per cent. of the moving picture privileges. Welsh has not yet signed articles.

SMITH AND PELKEY TO MEET

San Francisco, Aug 7.—Arthur Pelkey will be prepared to fight on Thanksgiving day for the heavyweight championship of the world and has selected Gunboat Smith as his prospective opponent, according to an announcement that was made by Tommy Burns, his manager. The statement, which is in the nature of a challenge to Smith, declares further that Pelkey is prepared to fight before the club offering the best purse, and the bids are expected from clubs in Australia, America, England and France.

It is the first authoritative announcement from Burns as to when Pelkey would be prepared for the ring. The match with Smith is contingent upon his retaining his laurels as one of the leading heavyweights of the country. Burns declares that articles are to be signed within two weeks.

MUST STAY BOY TO BE SCRAPPER

San Francisco, Aug 7.—Ad. Wolgast the plowboy, has slipped irredeemably from the upper class set, critics of the coast claim, but his decline is not entirely due to that attack of appendicitis that laid him low over a year back when he was matched to meet Freddie Welsh, and which incidently gave Ritchie his first golden opportunity.

Wolgast fixes the blame to passing years. He is not a boy any more and you've got to be a boy, Ad says, to remain at the top of the heap.

"A fellow goes along stepping into," declares Wolgast, "and while he is making the trip his ideas change. As a boy I was a fighter and you will admit I could slug somewhat. I beat Nelson and won the lightweight title and, although after that I had my share of luck, I was pretty successful and packed away the dollars. As the money came stumbling in I grew lax in my training and began to look upon the fight game—my profession—as a sort of a side line.

"I let my boy friends peddle along for themselves and took up with business men and men well along in life. They interested me and I found many things outside of ring matters that appealed to me. It wasn't long before I forgot altogether about boxing except when it was brought to my mind, and I went in for business—dabbled in various investments and the like

"Then when I'd get a fight and would be training hard out at a training camp, Jones would bring a gang of business people out to see me and when they would leave I would be so lonesome and discontented I would find myself unable to sleep.

"Yes, sir, a fella's got to be a boy to remain champ. Advancing age doesn't hurt him physically, but it takes his mental spirit away from him and leaves it lukewarm."

BASEBALL.

ALL NEW TO STAHL

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 7.—Jake Stahl to-day declared that he knew nothing at all about the rumor that he is to succeed Callahan as manager of the White Sox. "Rumors put me out of a job," said Stahl. "These things hurt the club and it keeps the fellows guessing as to the exact truth of the matter." Stahl declined to say whether he would accept the position if offered to him.

CHANCE MADE A MOVE

New York, Aug 7.—Manager Chance has decided upon a big shake-up for the Yankees, and two recruits recently acquired will be in the line-up against Defor to-days game. H. Williams, obtained from Golveston, will appear on first base. Jack Knight will be shifted to second and Hertzell will go to third. Cook who came here from Austin, Texas, team will be sent to right field. Midkiff and Daniels will be benched.

McGRAW PULLS OFF BIG TRADE

New York, Aug. 7.—New York fans today came to the conclusion that Manager McGraw was far from convinced that the Giants have the pennant clinched, as result of a trade by which Otis Crandall, relief pitcher and pinch hitter, went to the St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for Larry McLean. The injury to Chief Meyers had put him out of the game for the present, and McGraw is not taking any chances in having his receiving department weakened at this critical stage in the race. McLean has been catching good ball for the Cardinals.

The trade may work to good advantage to the Cardinals, as they are badly in need of pitchers. It is reported that another deal may be made sending Pitched Wiltse to St. Louis.

LEAFS GET PITCHER HERBERT

Toronto, Aug. 7.—Secretary J. H. Farrell of the National Association of Baseball Leagues has notified President McCaffery of Toronto that Pitcher Herbert has been awarded to the Toronto Club. Herbert was drafted by Toronto last fall from Ottawa and was turned over to Scranton on an optional agreement.

Milwaukee found that he was doing excellent pitching for Scranton and put in a claim for him, stating that he had signed with them in 1911 and had been on the suspended list for two years.

Herbert stated in his affidavit that he had signed an agreement with Milwaukee that if he played ball in 1911 he would be with that club. He did not play that year.

He will likely report to Toronto for further trial this fall.

MURPHY AND EVERS MUFF ONE

Cincinnati, Aug. 7.—Mordecai Brown is not through. In fact, it looks as if Manager Joe Tinger of the Reds, said very true words when in the spring he claimed that the three-fingered wonder still had a lot of good baseball left in him. True, Brown is not hurling the kind of ball he did several seasons ago, but just the same, Johnny Evers could use him at present, and to good advantage.

After Brown had helped the Cubs to four pennants and two world's championships, his arm went to the bad in 1912. When the off-season came, C. Webb Murphy thought he would not need the three-fingered boy any more and shipped him back to the minors.

But Joe Tinker manager of the Reds, thought different. Joe was with Brown a long time, and when he shipped to the A. A., he and Garry Herrmann arranged a deal whereby Miner would come back to the National League. And it looks as if they made no error in securing Brown.

Maybe now C. Webb Murphy and Johnny Evers see they made a big mistake in releasing the former star of the Cubs. Recently when the Reds were playing the Bruins, the three-fingered hurler took a pair of games from Johnny Ever's crew, one of them being a shutout in which only six base knocks were made off him.

When Tinker secured Brown it was for the purpose to use him as a coach for his young moundmen. He was carried until May 1 before he made his appearance on the firing line. Since the hot weather arrived, though, Brown's good right arm seems to be as good as ever, and he is taking his regular turn on the mound for his club.

Although Brown is not winning as regular or working as often quite so often as he did a few years ago, he has a record which is far better than the one owned by his club.

He has won six game sand lost five this campaign. That's a percentage of .545.

HER NEW HUSBAND

An Old Man Marries Young Girl, That He May Teach Her Wisdom.

BY FLORENCE E. CAMPBELL.

Mam'zelle Lisette Guitard was weeping in the hyacinth beds, and Monsieur Gaston Drouet wept, too, unreservedly. But then he was only twenty-two—four years older than Mam'zelle, nevertheless. Outside the night air was fragrant with the odor of hyacinths and jonquils, and the moon shone as brightly as it always shines in New Orleans in spring—that is to say, twice as brightly as anywhere else.

Ma'mzelle had stolen out of the house in which her father and mother and the two uncles and the maiden aunt and Sister 'Toinette and Brother Robert and the four bridesmaids and the ushers were busily rehearsing the part that they were to play at Ma'mzelle's wedding on the morrow. Monsieur Thiboult was fifty-seven and enormously rich, and it was to be a fashionable affair. Ma'mzelle did not love Monsieur Thiboult, but her parents did.

"Poor Gaston!" she murmured, laying her warm hand upon his icily cold one. "Tonight we must say goodby for ever."

And, being only eighteen, she could not help but feel a thrill of romance in the sadness of the separation.

"Angel! Beloved! Adored one!" exclaimed the young man, "I cannot let you go. Come with me now and let us be married somewhere. You do not love him, that old pig of a Thiboult."

"No, poor Gaston, I love you only," answered the little bride-to-be. "But consider, Monsieur Thiboult will give me much money and I shall make my parents rich; poor parents, who have slaved so hard for me."

"You shall not marry the pig!" shouted Gaston. "I will kill him first!"

"Hush, Gaston!" exclaimed the girl. "He will hear you. He prowls about his garden by night—yes, would you believe me, he is like a young man since he loves me, and he composes songs to the moon—as you do. He told me so himself."

Gazed With Wonder Into Her New Husband's Face.

"Kiss me, Lisette!" pleaded Gaston, drawing very close to her. "When you have kissed me you will no longer resist my entreaty. Then we will go—"

"No! No!" cried the girl, struggling out of his arms. "It is wrong. I am pledged to him. Let me go!"

"Lisette!" cried Uncle Henri from the door. "Where are you, little one? Come! We are to have cakes and wine."

For an instant Gaston hesitated; then, with a despairing sigh, he plunged through the hyacinths and disappeared into the darkness. Uncle Henri came down the path.

"Psst! Cats!" he exclaimed, throwing a clod of earth in the direction of the retreating Gaston. "Why do you roam among the flowers so late, little niece? Ah, it is the inspiration of Monsieur Thiboult! It is love for him! Never was any marriage so happy!"

Ma'mzelle Lisette cast a glance of contempt at her uncle, but he did not see it, because it was quite dark under the eaves of the cottage. He followed her indoor.

The wedding was over and Monsieur and Madam Thiboult were seated comfortably upon the porch of their home. It was only a few steps to the cottage next door, occupied by the bride's parents, for Monsieur Thiboult had simply taken his bride home with him. That was his arrangement, and his will was law, for it was the will of a semi-millionaire. Madam gazed with wonder into her new husband's face. It was indeed wonderful to think that two hours before she had been Mademoiselle Guitard while now she was Madame Thiboult. Her silly little head was swimming with pride and astonishment, and the passion for poor Gaston was already buried, although deep down beneath the surface of things there was a little ache—if she had let herself perceive it.

But monsieur was very much older than she. She had never before noticed how red his face was, how white his beard and hair. He was an old, old man, and she wished he were young like Gaston. And suddenly the sense of her inexperience of life, the tragedy of Gaston's sorrow, and her own little fleeting happiness which had been accomplished at such a cost to him overwhelmed her. She began crying, and she looked at her husband timidly, as though she had done something that she ought not to have done.

Monsieur Thiboult had been smoking in the darkness. Now he laid his cigar aside and Lisette saw the red rim of it circle and descend and rest upon the rail of the porch. Her husband took her little hands in his and spoke to her.

"Do you love Gaston very much, Lisette?" he asked.

She started and then began sobbing convulsively. He knew then! He knew! How wicked she had been.

"Yes, I knew for a long time, my dear," said Monsieur Thiboult. "It must be quite two months since you have loved Gaston. And before that it was Leon Brevet; and before that Charles Bourget; and before that—who was it before that?"

Lisette was shaking with fear. He had known all the time, then, of these little childish love affairs!

"My dear little Lisette," said monsieur, caressing her cold hands, "listen to what I am going to tell you. I have never thought that you loved me—an old man like me, old enough to be your father's father. But I love you, just as though you might be my own daughter, and I married you because I knew that if I did not you would some day run away with Gaston or some other foolish young fellow and live a hard life and taste the realities of existence. And you are not made for hardship, my little Lisette. So I considered, and I thought to myself: 'If only she were a few years older and wise and knew the world, and had plenty of money, so that when the real love came she would know him and go to meet him.' Then I said to myself: 'How can you help her, you old fellow?' And the answer came to me: 'Marry her yourself, but let her be like your daughter to you, so that when you are dead she can inherit all your money and marry some young fellow whom she really loves.'" He paused. "My dear," he said, "I shall not live very long. The doctor told me that only last month. Perhaps one year, perhaps two—not more than three. And then, if you still love Gaston, you will go to him and make him happy, and your little head will be filled with wisdom instead of foolishness."

He pressed her to him and kissed her cheeks reverently. "Good-night, little daughter," said Monsieur Thiboult.

WORLD LANGUAGE OF SIGNS

Sir William Ramsay Has Plan to Use Pictorial Characters Based on Chinese.

To make possible the exchange of ideas among all peoples of the world Sir William Ramsay, the English scientist, has begun to develop a pictorial sign language, based somewhat upon Chinese, which he hopes will eventually spread among all races.

The Chinese character to express "man," for instance, is made with two converging lines that represent simply his legs, looking much like the legs of the crude man that the schoolboy draws.

Sir William's character goes further and adds a vertical straight line above the converging lines to represent the body.

"The first thing that one thinks of," he argues, "is existence expressed in the verb 'to be.'"

So he has selected the arithmetical equality mark to denote existence. All things relating to one's state and condition, he said, can be expressed by these two parallel lines.

For time which stretches away, or action that is constant, he uses a dash. Instantaneous time or action he represents with a dot. Thus a dot placed squarely between and in the middle of two lines of the equality mark denotes the immediate present, or "I am." Similarly the dot, when placed at the left and between the two lines denotes past, or "I was," and when placed to the right indicates the future tense, or "I am to be."

To denote a woman Sir William draws a line closing the diverging ends of the legs of the sign for man. On the theory that "I" is the most important thing in the world to any man, Sir William utilizes the straight vertical line that represents the body of his man figure to depict the word.

What He Was After.

It was a very hot day and the fat drummer who wanted the 12:20 train got through the gate at just 12:21. The ensuing handicap was watched with absorbing interest both from the train and the station platform. At its conclusion the breathless and perspiring knight of the road wearily took the back trail and a vacant faced "red cap" came to relieve him of his grip.

"Mister," he inquired, "was you tryin' to ketch that Pennsylvania train?"

"No, my son," replied the patient man. "No; I was merely chasing it out of the yard."—Saturday Evening Post.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

WOMAN INVOLVED

Mysterious Female Appears in Hasson Case at Toronto.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Further inquiry into the Humber River mystery leads the county police to believe that a woman was more or less concerned in the brutal assault on Hugh Hassan, in a lonely bush at midnight last Monday. Evidence has been secured from a reliable source, tending to show that a fight occurred in the woods, and as a result of it Hassan sustained wounds which will cause his death.

Altho no direct clue connecting the woman with the crime has been secured, County Constable George Simpson has received information which places a peculiar aspect on the whole case. The officer is convinced that several other people know more about the affair than they have told, and he hopes to discover shortly just who these interested parties are.

Early Tuesday morning a resident of Swansea, who does not live very far from the lonely woods on the Humber, answered a knock at his door, and on opening it found a strange woman in torn clothing outside. In a broken voice the woman asked for the loan of clothes to get to the city. Noting the look of surprise on the man's face, the woman explained that she was not a resident of Swansea and must get to the city.

When asked how her clothes became torn, the woman stated that she had been out with a man when a fight occurred. The clothes were torn from her before she escaped. The people of the house understood her to say that someone was hurt, and that she had run away.

Hearing of the assault on Hassan the family communicated with County Constable Simpson. He went with a member of the family to the building and every woman who worked there was subjected to scrutiny as she received her pay. But it proved in vain. The woman did not work at the building.

Coupling the story which the woman told with what he already knew of the case Constable Simpson is inclined to believe that Hassan was in the fight referred to. As to what part the old man played the police are unable to say.

GERMANY PLEASED

British Naval Plans Have Been Altered, Say Germans.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—In reviewing the decision of the British Government to station several cruisers at Bermuda, Captain Persius, the naval expert of The Tageblatt, sees the first breach in Lord Fisher's policy of concentrating every available ship of the British navy in home waters, and an indication of the waning of the tense Anglo-German rivalry which has kept the two nations on the verge of war for a decade.

From this point of view Captain Persius finds the action of the British admiralty of more importance to Germany than to the United States. He says Germany also may take similar steps of deconcentration. He believes that in general the decision was dictated more by the desire to show the British flag than by actual necessity.

The Taglich- Rundschau today publishes a story referring to the possibility of Germany modifying its naval program in view of the acceleration of construction of three battleships of the British navy, recently announced by Winston Spencer Churchill. The German admiralty, however, says there is no question of such action.

Pavlova Hit Partner.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—While Pavlova and partner, Novikoff, were dancing at the Palace Theatre tonight, Pavlova suddenly struck her companion. Novikoff immediately left the stage. Pavlova then also went off by the opposite wing. The orchestra finished the piece to an empty stage.

As far as the audience could see, there was nothing to explain Pavlova's extraordinary action.

Duchess Recovering.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—(C.A.P.)—Enquiry at Cowes shows that the Duchess of Connaught was much better yesterday, and there is every reason to believe that she will be able to make the journey on the royal yacht to Sweden next week. Major Worthington denies the statement that Sir Arbuthnot Lane was summoned to Cowes on Tuesday morning.

SCIENTISTS AT WORK

Geological Experts Begin Their Convention.

Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Hon. W. H. Hearst and Pres. Falconer Extend Welcome to Distinguished Visitors—Many of the World's Famous Men Are Among Those Present.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Except the British Association, no greater body of scientific men has ever assembled in Canada than have those at the International Geological Congress which was opened yesterday in the convocation hall of Toronto University. The really great men who have come to Toronto to the number of 500 or more, represent the topmost attainment of knowledge on all that has to do—not with the bowels of the earth, for of those regions they know but little, but of the epithelial tissue or outer skin to the depth of a few miles. And as M. Emmanuel de Margeric said last night in his lecture, the earth's surface is seven-tenths water, and we know nothing of half of the rest. The more honor to the brilliant intellectual achievement that has done so much to add to our understanding of terrene development.

FRANK D. ADAMS, F.R.S., McGill University, president of twelfth session.

Among the world-famous men present are, Prof. Molengraaff of Delft, Holland, where general achievements as a geologist place him in the highest rank; Prof. Reid of Johns Hopkins, an eminent seismologist; Aubrey Strahan, a leader in English science; P. M. Termier, a specialist in archaean work from France; Tadasu Hiki, with the new light from Japan; Dr. Sedegholm, director of the geological survey of Finland, who wishes to study our archaean formations and compare them with the Finnish; Dr. Weigand of Germany; Dr. Tietze, the great palaeontologist, from Vienna; Dr. Hague, the oldest member of the U.S. survey; Dr. Anstor of the German survey; Prof. Cole, the brilliant Dublin authority; besides hundreds of others from the two score or so of countries represented. Nor is Canada without a voice. The land in which Logan and Dawson have gained renown, maintains the tradition in the persons of Coleman, Miller, Adams and others, who size up well with the best of the visitors. Prof. Coleman is to lay two papers before the sections, one on the classification of the archaean in the interglacial formations of Toronto, and one even more important geologically, on the separation of a new series of strata between the Huronian and the Keewatin, which he calls the "Sudbury." The differentiation he bases on stratigraphical grounds and not on fossil evidence. For the general public it may do more than add a few million years to the age of the earth, whose antiquity is judged by the number of suits of clothes it has worn.

The visitors were welcomed in the morning by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick on behalf of the Dominion, while Hon. W. H. Hearst, for the province, the acting mayor for the city and the president for the university conveyed salutations.

Acknowledgments were made by Dr. Helges Backstroem, Sweden, and Dr. Tietze, Austria.

FALLS TO HIS DEATH

Hamilton Man Thrown to Ground by Breaking of Hoist.

HAMILTON, Friday, Aug. 8.—While working on the east end branch of the Hamilton Bridge Works plant about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, William Sullivan, 22 North Park st., fell a distance of 40 feet and died about three minutes afterwards. Sullivan was riding to the top of the building on a hoist when it broke, both falling to the ground. The man's arms were both broken and he was badly bruised about the head, and died as a result of his injuries. He had no relatives in Hamilton, but has a brother in Montana, who has been notified of the accident. An inquest will be held this morning.

Eagle Carries Off Child.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 7.—(Can. Press.)—An enormous eagle today carried off the four-year-old child of a woodcutter while it was playing near him when he was working in the forest in the vicinity of the village of Ander, not far from Chur. A large body of hunters, accompanied by dogs, set off to the rescue of the child, but were unable to find any traces of the eagle or its prey.

MANY WHITE GIRLS IN EASTERN HAREMS

Sad Fate of Young Women Who Marry Polygamous Orientals

The perils undergone by white women who marry colored men were emphasized by Mr. Foster Fraser, a widely known Asiatic traveller, in an interview at London.

These dangers formed the subject of a warning recently issued by the Australian Government at the request of the Colonial Secretary. This warning primarily concerned marriage with the Pathans and others of the hill tribes of the North-western Frontier of India, but Mr. Fraser extends the warning so to include Mongols and Caucasians.

"It is extraordinary," he said, "to find the number of white women who are in the harems of Persia, for example. They are mostly English and American dancing girls who have met Persians who were travelling abroad, and, fascinated by tales of life in Eastern palaces, have married them.

"When I was in Persia I came across a typical case. It was that of a girl who had been an attendant at a stall at the Crystal Palace. There she was seen by a Persian in the entourage of Nasr-ed-Din, a previous Shah, when he visited England. She married him according to Roman Catholic rites, and with her sister went to Persia with him.

"Once in his own country, however, he immediately placed her in the harem, where she found herself but one of several wives, and was forced to live a life of seclusion, cut off from her own people. She met only the Persian ladies of the royal harem, to whom, curiously enough, she used to translate Conan Doyle's detective stories, in which they were greatly interested.

"Eventually her husband died, and she desired to return to England, but many difficulties were placed in her way, and it was only by the persistent good offices of the wife of the British Minister that she was able to depart, taking with her her son on the strict proviso that he returned to Persia when he was sixteen years of age. Subsequently, I believe, she married an Englishman, and now lives at Peckham.

"Marriages between Chinese, Japanese, Egyptian, Siamese, or Persian men and white women are rarely happy. The men from these nations who travel are naturally wealthy, and women who become fascinated by them forget that they will have to live in a totally different atmosphere. An intolerable longing for home comes to them, and escape is impossible."

As an example of the danger of mixed marriages to white women a legal case may be cited, in which it was held that a white woman married in England was no longer the wife of a Siamese after she had been deserted for three months, this process being sufficient for a husband to end his marriage in Siam, and the wife was bound by the laws of her husband's country.

MYSTERIOUS ISLANDS

They Rise From Lake Bottom and Look Substantial

A curious phenomenon is frequently seen on the Panama Canal. At times the Gatun Lake has not a speck of any kind on its surface except for an occasional white-capped wavelet; an hour later the surface is seen to be dotted with small green islets. These small "floating islands," as they are called, are masses of vegetation and earth loosened from the bottom of the lake, and they have been found on examination to consist mainly of sticks and leaves held together by clay, with grass and other vegetation growing upon them. Though these islets have been found as large as three acres in extent on the lake they are no obstacle to a steamer, though they would impede a launch, and they are firm enough for a man to walk upon safely. The sudden appearance of these islets is caused by the change of wind.

Spanish Jews in Asia

How many people know that there are some Asiatic Jews who speak Spanish? When the Jews were driven from Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella, a large number fled from the persecution of the Christian to the protection of the Mohammedan. They settled in Asiatic Turkey, Greece, and the Balkans. Their language is more correctly described as a Castilian-Hispano-Portuguese dialect of Latin, and it is said that many of them speak also Hebrew, modern Greek, and Arabic.

MONSTER HEADDRESSES

Gay French Queen Wore One Nearly Four Feet High

Marie Antoinette had a passion for extraordinary headdresses. One structure that she invented was forty-five inches in height and was composed of many yards of guaze and ribbon. From the folds sprang bunches of roses, and the entire edifice was surmounted by a waving plume of white feathers. It is recorded that when Maria Theresa received a portrait of her daughter wearing this headdress she exclaimed: "This is no daughter of mine! It is the portrait of an actress!"

The Duchess of Chartres determined to surpass the Queen and designed a headdress two inches higher. It was made up of many plumes waving at the top of a tower. Two waxen figures, representing the little Comte de Beaujolais (the brother of Louis Philippe) in his nurse's arms, were worn as ornaments. Beside them a parrot picked at a plate of cherries, and the wax figure of a black boy reclined at the nurse's feet. On different parts of the tower were the initials of the Duchesse's husband, her father and her father-in-law, made from her own hair.

At this time France and England were at war. In a naval engagement of the French frigate Licorne struck her flag, but the Belle Poule, another French vessel, crippled the Hector, an English man-of-war. As the Frenchmen were about to board two English vessels bore down to their consort's assistance, and the Belle Poule sailed away. The English fleet returned to Plymouth with two prizes, the Licorne and a French lugger.

The French, although they had lost a frigate, proclaimed a victory. The Queen and her women wore headdresses that represented the Belle Poule under full sail plowing a sea of green gauze in pursuit of the English frigate. This construction was known as the "coiffure Belle Poule."

The wife of an English officer living in Paris deemed the headdress an insult to the English navy and determined to resent it. At the next public occasion therefore she appeared carrying on her head five English line-of-battle ships, a French frigate and a lugger. An arrangement of silk and gauze represented Plymouth harbor, which the English ships, with their prizes, were entering. Each vessel carried a streamer that bore its name, and on the edifice at the back the word "Plymouth" appeared in glittering beads.

The audacity of the spirited Englishwoman struck every one dumb except the chief of police, who invited her to cross the frontier at her earliest convenience.

Leather Casters

Many furniture casters are being made from leather by cutting disks of the required size, and cementing them together to form the wheel, which is then put into a lathe and turned until the face of the wheel is rounded. Disks of metal, fastened to each side of the wheel provide bearings for the axle that runs through the wheel. This type of caster is made for use on hardwood floors, and casters of compressed felt are also manufactured for the same purpose. Other styles of casters include those of glass, designed for the purpose of insulation and ball-bearing casters having no wheel, but a ball that revolves on a circle of smaller balls.

Biography of Former Belleville Boy

(Belleville Club News, Chicago)

Collins, Rev. William B., born in Belleville, Ont. Willie, as a boy, was very quiet and of a rather serious nature. He took everything just as it came. If things didn't come he went after them. "What is the use," said Willie, "of worrying about anything, the greatest troubles that we have are the ones that do not happen." His was a philosophic temperament. In early life he gave promise of being a great churchman. For instance, one time a playmate made a remark to Will about his curly locks. Will used to have very pretty ringlets. All the boy in Will resented the hinted slight, but, turning to the teasing boy, he said: "I am destined for the church. Clergymen, in the main, are men of peace. Such being the case I am, of course, prevented from dealing summary punishment to you, and you are aware of the fact that you richly deserve severe chastisement at my hands. I'll give you one gentle tip, however, my goose-eyed friend; if you don't beat it away from here I'll forget that I am destined for higher things, and I'll smear a few wallops over that countersigned map of yours!" One day when a lad at St. Michael's old academy on John street, Will took to school a small bottle, in which he had enclosed two bees. He had been reading natural history in a small way. Approaching the rostrum where the director of genius sat, he presented the bottle and asked the pedagogue to show him in what part of the anatomy of the bee the "stinger" was located. The teacher, always willing to assist a seeker after knowledge, uncorked the bottle, took out one bee, and holding it gingerly between the thumb and forefinger of the left hand, proceeded to point out to our young hopeful, with the index finger of the right hand just where the "stinger" was to be found. The bee at this juncture took part in the proceedings by protuding the "stinger" quickly, catching dear teacher fairly amidships on the aforesaid right index finger. Teacher said, "Scratch!" and Will laughed, and then he received his. Will's father, the late Daniel Collins, Esq., for many years harbor master at Belleville, and a long time member of the city council, was one of the best known citizens of Belleville, and one of the best loved, too. One night, after an aldermanic election, Mr. Collins was celebrating his re-election by having a crowd of his constituents in to dinner. Will, being a very small boy, was, of course, barred from a seat at the table during the dinner, but as a special privilege was allowed to come in during dessert. He was given a seat about half way down the long table. Mrs. Collins, a genial, kindly, big-hearted lady, was directing the service, and in some way, unaccountable, forgot to give Will any of the pastry that was served. Will stood this for a time, watched everyone eating with great relish the dainty confections until, unable to stand it any longer, he called out in a half sob: "Does any one here want a clean plate?" He got his dessert right then. After going through the schools in Belleville and matriculating for the university, Will went to Montreal where he entered the seminary, and after finishing the required course, was ordained a priest. He labored for several years in the Vineyard in Ontario, and some years ago came over to this country, locating in Brooklyn, N.Y. He is one of the type of men who is filled with personal magnetism. He is a very eloquent and powerful preacher, an indefatigable worker, a sunny dispositioned soldier in the ranks of the clerical army. William B. Collin's, priest, is a man's man. He is the sort of man who leads others in the way he would have them go. His genial nature, his open-hearted, big-brained, broad-minded self, tends to harmonize at all times. He keeps open house for all the old Belleville friends and is just as enthusiastic over the Old Town on the Bay as is any of the old crowd, who have migrated. We like to look back to the time when Father Collins was just "Willie," a care-free, handsome, happy-going lad, and, knowing the man as he is today, we know that underneath the added dignity of his office and his years, he is the same as he was as a boy. We are proud of Father Will Collins, proud to think we knew him as a fair-haired lad in his early school days, and proud of the increasing eminence he is attaining in his life's vocation. Keep your eye on him. He is going along into higher orders where his wonderful talents may have greater swing and where his splendid personality will be of supreme benefit. Here's to Father Will.

Belleville News As Analyzed in Chicago

Following is the manner in which the Chicago Belleville Club News comments on what it reads in Belleville's papers:

And speaking of cold-blooded propositions, take a slant at this: A Point Ann man ate some strawberries in which he detected, or claimed to have detected, the odor of oil of cedar. He said that he suspected his wife had tried to poison him. He induced his wife to ride to Belleville with him, then had her arrested and went out and hired a lawyer to defend her. On meeting and leaving her at the jail, subsequent to the preliminary hearing, he saluted and parted from her with a kiss.

The Belleville Club News will give a fine, old-fashioned, deep apple pie, hand-carved, to the person sending in the best answer to the question: "What should be done to that stiff?"

A strong letter from Mr. J. J. B. Flint appeared in Belleville papers urging the construction of an electric railway between Belleville and Point Ann. Sure, we need it! Let's have it! More power to your elbow, Mr. Flint. Keep at it-

Belleville continues to metropolitanise. Now it is a phantom automobile, no lights, no register number, no visible sign, which scoots through Belleville's streets after dark, kidnapping unsuspecting and unwilling young ladies and hurrying them to a lair in a mountain fastness. The Board of Trade should appoint that lad publicity commissioner. He's the same chap who tells of leafless, budless, blossomless apricot trees. He has the gift, all right

A man on South Front street, who conducts a stand for dispensing temperance refreshments, was cited before the Cadi, charged with having 72 bottles of beer for sale, although he had no license to sell beer. He was fined $100 and costs. One dollar and thirty-nine cents a bottle is a sort of a handsome margin to have to pay on beer. Eh, what?

Two motor boats collided near Massassaga Point. Well, comma, the only things that ever collided near Massassaga in our day, were a couple of punts—a cedar tree, skinned, well stepped, forward, a couple of old bed sheets sewed together, a paddle to steer with and let the wind howl!

For the first time in memory of man, a marriage was performed in the county court house at Belleville, this month. Oh, well, what's the difference where the ring is tossed, so long as the battle is all right!

"The Belleville Old Boys' Association" of Toronto, several hundred strong, holidayed in Belleville, July 19 to 21, and the old lads and fair daughters had some time. Here's the committee of Toronto Bellevillians in charge of the outing: W. H. Wallbridge, president; W. J. Wilson, treasurer, and T. A. Stevenson, secretary. Executive: C. L. Rosevear, Ed. Doyle, H. C. Macdiarmid, A. E. Cornelius. H. Stevenson, W. Goldsmith, E. Harper, Jack Harry, E. A. James, J. E. Dundas, W. R. Carmichael, Joe Dempsey, Sam T. Wood, W. E. Warham, Walter Mills, and John Pearse.

To Belleville citizens: Clean up your premises and decorate your houses for the Oddfellows' visit. Show some class! You are on parade!! Get busy!!!

A bunch of joy riders tried to run over the foot bridge, starting from the west approach. Well, that ain't so worse. We seen the ice jump clean over the old bridge—in the old springtime long ago.

A very able article on "Detection and Proof of Forgery," from the pen of Hon. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., appeared in the Belleville papers this month. If the Hon. J. W. does not know, we rise to ask: Who does?

The Belleville City Baseball League has died again. "Doc" Yeomans will come along soon, attach a pulmotor to it, and—whango! they'll be off again. The doctor is not going to let that league lay dormant long—never fear!

Colonel Ponton has donated a very handsome cup for annual competition for rifle shooting among the corps of the Canadian Cadets. Let's see, the Colonel, himself, used to be somewhat of a rifle shot over at the old ranges on Coleman's Flats. Ask Sergeant Fizzone. Don't ask where the Sarge is. Write Charlie Hambly at Philly, Pa. He'll give you the Sarge's address.

Two lads from the cement mills at "The Point" were on the call before "Hizzoner" the other day. "Metro Joshcioski and Honat Usrak, step up!" roared out Willie, the new clerk. "Those names again, Mr. Clerk, Sil Vous Plait," said the Cadi. "Metro Joshcioski and Honat Usrak," replied the C. C. "What's the charge?" the P. M. inquired. "Fighting," the City Clerk replied. "Discharged!" the Magistrate ordered. "I'd fight too, if I had a name like either of those!"

Montreal Loses By Unpaid Bills

MONTEAL, Aug. 7.—The city is facing a heavy loss every year in connection with unpaid accounts. The City Treasurer recently had a list of all the 'bad debts'' on the books made out, and was astounded that $950,000 almost one million dollars, had been lost in twelve years through accounts which the city was unable to collect.

On January 1, 1911, the property taxes oustanding amounted to $1,300,000. This year they collected $1,100,000, leaving $200,000 that had to be written off on property taxes alone. In addition to this, there was $400,000 unpaid in business taxes and $80,000 on water taxes.

The total loss in twelve years represents 1-50 of the revenue of the city for that time.

DESECRATING THE SABBATH

It is estimated that eight hundred thousand pleasure seekers left New York city on Sunday for nearby resorts. When the record closed fifteen were dead from auto accidents or drownings, while thirty-four were seriously injured, three being likely to die. The percentage of accidents to the total number of holiday makers was not large. The total, however, does make it seem that holidaying may be carried on in a dangerous way—Montreal Gazette.

HAD BRILLIANT CAREER

The Rev. J. E. McNeill, who was recently ordained to the priesthood, and who will replace Rev. Father C. J. Mea as director of Regiopolis college, is the eldest son of the late John McNeill of Napanee. His college course was made at the University of Ottawa, where he was graduated in Arts, in 1907, winning the Earl Grey medal, representative of the best average for general proficiency in the course. The same year he was awarded the Rector's gold medal for the best speech at the students' annual prize debate. He was largely interested in university debating life, occupying for a year the presidency of the Inter-University Debating League, composed of McGill, Queen's Toronto, and Ottawa Universities, and also being a member of the first Ottawa team to win a debate from Toronto. After a year at civil engineering, he decided to study for the priesthood and entered St. Thomas College at the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C. On the death of his father in 1910, he entered the Grand Seminary, Montreal, where he was graduated in theology last month.—Kingston Whig.

HAD ONLY TEN CENTS

When They Arrived at Kingston—Three Thankless Immigrants

Three Englishmen, who claim to be graduates of a university in the old land, who have been working for B. Lancaster, John Heaton and Charles Friendship, at Cataraqui, Kingston, have been up against a hard proposition in their desire to see the world.

When they arrived in the city a short time ago, they had only ten cents among them. Immigration Officer George Hunter got in touch with the young men upon their arrival and immediately secured work for them at Cataraqui. They told the immigration officer of their financial standing, and he took them to his home where they were fed and provided with suitable clothes for farm life. Now they have taken "French leave."

SAMSON HASKELL OF BENTLEY

CHARLES A. MACFARLANE

CHAPTER I

The Awakening

For two weeks the settlement of Bentley had been in a fever of religious excitement. Night after night its simple people sought the little church, until aisles and ante-rooms could no longer accommodate the anxious throngs. Sin-burdened souls were crying for mercy, that their seemingly endless list of individual transgressions might be erased from the Judgment Book. At each service the altar was filled with seekers. Scores had already found pardon and peace, but many there were who had not yet responded to the call.

True to his calling, the Evangelist gave the Word without fear or favor, laying naked the consequences of wilful disobedience, and proclaiming the tender mercy of a just God toward such as forsook their evil ways for the New Life. Like a clarion his clear voice penetrated every section of the building, his warnings of the Judgment causing strong men to quake, while the blanched faces of many unrepentant women bespoke a spirit of inward fear.

Never before had such an awakening been known in the isolated little town. The week for which the Evangelist had been engaged had already been lenghtened to two, and now the third was entered upon with increasing numbers and an indefinite time for concluding the services. The spirit of conviction, ever broadening and deepening, spread to the neighboring settlements, from whence came scores of burdened souls to hear the Gospel as propounded by the wonderful servant of the Most High God—came to hear, to receive, and return to their humble homes with a living hope for the world beyond the grave. Business was at a standstill; the farm work had been practically suspended, that the meetings might be attended, and a feeling of awe possessed all who came under the solemn spell. Surely salvation had come to Bentley in unstinted measure. Old and young alike embraced the opportunity for entering the sacred fold, until a majority of the settlements' people were numbered among the elect.

Prominent among the promoters of the movement, and to whose efforts were due the securing of the Evangelist, was Ezekiel Haskell, whose prayers and charities were known to all. With all the enthusiasm of his great heart did he enter into the special work for the spiritual betterment of mankind, until he came to be recognized as the Evangelist's principal support in a human sense. House to house visits were inaugurated, morning devotional services held simultaneously in all the Christian homes, and a systematic canvass made of the entire community. Nothing was overlooked that would tend to render the results thorough and far-reaching, to which the membership of the little church cheerfully subscribed.

Among the most difficult to impress with the necessity of a religious experience was Samson, the son of Ezekiel, whose sins were legion, and skeptical opinions far-famed. While he admitted that his parent walked in accord with the precepts of his Bible, he had no personal use for what he adjudged a mystical hope based on an intangible nothing, and he made no bones of expressing his belief that when man died that was the end of him.

"You take all the religion you can hold, Dad," he was wont to reply, when gently remonstrated with for his ungodly manner of living. "I won't say one word agin it. If it works real well in your case, and you can prove that I can swap hosses with Rasmus Hale without being cheated out of half the price, I may give it a try after a spell; but just at present you are only wasting time on me. I hain't ready yet, and the Lord hain't ready to change me into a new being until I give Him the word. But I promise you this much, Dad: When I get religion—if I ever do—every mean caper I've ever done by word or deed, will be made right if it costs me my last cent. The people of Bentlley will know that something out of the ordinary has happened when Samson Haskell gets religion."

He liked the Evangelist. When Ezekiel informed him that the preacher would be at the Ogden station, ten miles distant, on a certain date, he volunteered to go for him, that he might be spared the jolting of the stage wagon, and upon arriving at the parental home, where the stranger was to be a guest, they were on the most friendly terms.

"That preacher is just my idee of what a man of his calling should be", Samson confided to his mother. "He don't consign a feller to hell fire for not believing as he does. And he's fergot more about farm work than most of us hereabout ever knew; and he hain't ashamed to show his ignorance on subjects he hain't acquainted with."

As a matter of interest Samson remained at home upon the first evening, and was numbered with the household at family worship. But while the Evangelist prayed earnestly in behalf of the cause that had brought him to the little settlement, for the pastor, the church as a body, and the community at large, narrowing, finally, to the family circle, individualizing every other member, Samson was not mentioned.

"I thought mebbe he might have spoken of me, in his prayer, seeing he mentioned the rest of the settlement," he complained mentally as he ascended to his chamber; "but Samson Haskell, the sinner, hain't of no account—I reckon."

It was the beginning of a desperate battle on the part of Samson; it was also the first sign of victory for the tactful Evangelist.

As the meetings progressed,—while he thundered the terrors of the law of God, the freedom of mercy, and the ability of the Omnipotent One to keep his own unspotted from the sins of the world; while he dealt most rigidly with his audiences, laboring with each personally, and assisting into the kingdom of grace such as appealed for a change of heart and life, he assiduously avoided contact with Samson, far famed for his physical prowess, his proficiency in profanity, and wilful irreligious proclivities, whose need of salvation was equal to Zaccheus in the tree.

Thus he came to feel himself ostracised from all that was just and holy; that there was no place for him in the fold of God. No one cared for his soul; not one of those so enthusiastically active in the work cared to contaminate themselves with an interest in his behalf. Even the lips of his own father were sealed so far as his spiritual welfare was concerned. If he could but be given the opportunity to defend his skeptical ideas, there would be a degree of satisfaction but even that privilege was denied him. Each night he left the church with the resolve to never enter its doors again; he was not wanted there. He would seek the company of kindred spirits. But the hour of the following service found him present, rigid and defiant, only to be ignored as before.

Once only did the pastor attempt to deal with him, but was peremptorily checked by the Evangelist, his voice assuming a tone of authority that stung poor Samson to the quick. "God does not want that man to defile His sheep fold," he said, and turned to speak to another who was showing signs of yielding. Had it been in the open he would have sent the Evangelist flying through the air, but he controlled his evil spirit, although it cost him all his power.

In his father's home the Evangelist was most cordial, and conversed freely with Samson upon every subject but religion. He discussed the merits of horses with a knowledge that surprised the young farmer, and even explained the care of certain crops that had always been a vexatious problem; but to argue with him he declined, and to pray for him openly he positively refused.

"Have you any idee that them critters as make such a noise in meetin' live up to all they profess"? he questioned the Evangelist one morning while waiting for the family to collect for prayers.

"Do you know of any who don't?" was the guarded response, turning the leaves of his Bible with deliberation.

"Plenty of 'em. There's Rasmus Hale, the miller, Widder Simpson, who takes in washin', two as perfect hypocrites as ever breathed. And there's——"

"Do you know of any who do?" the Evangelist interrupted, his eyes apparently studying the Book.

"Yes—one or two".

"May I ask who they are?"

"My mother."

"And—

"My father."

"And—

"Sister Smith."

"Is that All?"

"That's all."

"Go thou and do likewise."

Shorne of his answer, he changed his seat for one in an obscure corner, nor did he even turn his eyes toward the Evangelist, who could scarcely conceal an amused smile. For once Samson Haskell had been silenced, and without an argument.

That morning Rasmus Hale and "Sister" Simpson were tenderly remembered in prayer, but Samson was not mentioned.

Shortly after he left the house, and a little later was seen leaving the yard, driving a beautiful Blackhawk roadster, and was soon well on his way to Trenton, a trading town five miles distant.

"I fear Samson is carrying a heavy burden," suggested Mr. Haskell, in a tone of anxiety.

"He will come from under the load before he sleeps this night," was the cheerful reply.

"But are you not a little harsh with him? Samson is very tendered hearted. He is not to be judged by his skeptical sayings. An he likes you."

"I know your son better than you think, my brother," was the earnest reply. "And it is because of my interest in him that I am probing the tender heart. Leave him to me. His salvation will be a much greater vicory than the combined converts thus far. I will never leave this village until Samson is safe within the fold of Christ." There was a settled purpose in his eyes as he spoke, and immediately leaving the room, he ascended to his chamber.

DIAMONDS FROM THE SKY

Theory That the Precious Stones Are Not of Volcanic Origin

Scientific authorities are inclining to the belief that all diamonds came to the earth in meteoric showers. The theory is the diamond fell to the earth as meteoric particles at a late period of the earth's formation. Localities where diamonds are found contain masses which have penetrated the earth's formation. Localities where diamonds are found contain masses which have penetrated the earth more or less deeply.

Late discoveries in the western states, especially in Arizona, seem to indicate further the heavenly origin of our most brilliant stone, for over the broad plains for areas of miles in diameter several thousand masses of metallic iron have been scattered. These masses have undoubtedly been meteoric showers.

Not long ago an enthusiastic mineralogist, working on such a mass, cut into a section and found that the tools were injured by something harder than metallic iron. He examined the specimens chemically and soon announced that the meteorite contained black and transparent diamonds.

Again, it is claimed, that it is possible that the so-called "volcanic pipes" at the Kimberley diamond mines and elsewhere are not volcanic, but "simply holes bored in the solid earth, by the monstrous meteors, the larger masses boring the holes, while the smaller masses, disintegrating in their fall, distributed diamonds broadcast."

MEASURING HAY IN STACK

For obtaining the number of tons of hay in a stack, the first step is to measure the width and length with a tape line, and then what is known as the overthrow, that is, pass a tape line from the bottom of the stack on one side over to the bottom on the other side, and divide this measurement which is called the overthrow by three, then multiply the length by the width, and this by one-third of the overthrow—this gives you the number of cubic feet in the stack. Of course, if the stack is different widths or different heights you will have to take the measurements in several places and obtain the average of these by adding them together and dividing by the number of measurements made.

The number of cubic feet of hay per ton varies considerably with the length of time that it has been stacked. With newly stacked hay it will take about 500 cubic feet to equal a ton. If it has been stacked for two to three months from 350 to 400 cubic feet will equal a ton. After you have obtained the number of cubic feet in the stack, divide by the number of cubic feet in a ton taking into consideration the length of time that the hay has been stacked.

Diet and Endurance

The Roman soldiers, who built such wonderful roads, and carried a weight of armor and luggage that would crush the average farm hand, lived on coarse brown bread and sour wine. They were temperate in diet and regular and constant in exercise. The Spanish peasant works every day and dances half the night, yet eats only black bread, onions, and watermelon. The Smyrna porter eats only a little fruit and sour olives, yet he walks off with his load of one hundred pounds. The coolie, fed on rice, is more active and can endure more than the negro fed on fat meat.

Paternal Government

A new German patent law protects citizens of the empire even if they do not have a residence or establishment in the fatherland.

A Vancouver Chinaman was ordained a Presbyterian minister. At one time he was active in the persecution of Chinese Christians.

Liquor Store Robbed

Some time during last night the liquor store of Mr. Wesley Bullen, situated on Front street, near Bridge, was burlarized, entrance being effected by the forcing of two doors in the rear of the store and the breaking of a light of glass in order to unlatch another door. When inside the thief or thieves, ransacked the cash register and secured between $12 and $13 in money. A quantity of liquor was taken, but how much is rather difficult at present to ascertain. It is surmised that the thieves, by the aid of a ladder, succeeded in getting over a wall at the rear of the store and then forced the doors. Although Mr. Bullen lives above the store, the marauders did their work in such a manner that they were not heard.

The affair was reported to the police, who are working upon the case.

THE WORLD IS MY SPY

and I pay the highest price for information," said James Keene, the Wizard of Wall Street, when asked why he succeeded where others met disaster.

Keene bought and sold on the best information he could get—he won where others failed.

A true rule for stocks and bonds is equally good for every day life—for buying clothing, furnishings, or for every need.

Information is not high. The world comes to you through the advertising columns of The Intelligencer.

It tells you where goods can be had and what they are selling for. It gives true information, for the merchants know they are judged by what they say in their advertising.

Read the advertising in The Intelligencer today. This is the bargain month of the year. It is particularly so this year, because merchants and manufacturers are anticipating tariff changes by lessening stocks.

The man or woman who makes the dollars count is the one who buys on the best obtainable information.

There is no better "WHO'S WHO" or "WHAT'S WHAT" than the advertising columns of The Intelligencer.

WARREN'S WIVES WERE ALL TWINS AND HIS TWENTY-FIVE CHILDREN WERE ALL TWINS OR TRIPLETS.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Probably the most remarkable family record in the archives of the United States Government was brought to light to-day by the Pension Bureau in the case of William Warren, 1015 Locust Street, St. Joseph, Mo., who served in Company I., 15th Kansas Cavalry.

As sworn to by Warren, the statistics were:

His father married in turn three sisters, the first two wives being twins and the third one of a pair of twins.

To the first wife was born one set of triplets, all boys, of whom William Warren was one.

Between them, the two other wives gave birth to 11 sets of twins, making a total of 25 children. No single children were born in the family. Of the 25 children, 12 were boys and 13 were girls. Finally all 12 boys served in the Union army. William Warren was the sole survivor at the time he applied for his pension.

Cobourg Eloper Gets Two Weeks for False Pretences

COBOURG, Ont., Aug. 8.—Robert Aull, jr., of St. Louis, was sentenced this morning by Judge Benson to two weeks in jail after his conviction on Tuesday on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences.

At the expiration of this term the authorities at Lexington, Ky., want the young man on a similar charge.

Aull is the youth whose elopement with Miss Doris Reid, daughter of Mr. George P. Reid, of Toronto, was the sensation of the Cobourg season.

The young bride's suit for annulment of the marriage is now before the courts and will, young Aull says, be resisted by him.

This morning's sentence came as something of a surprise, a suspended sentence had been hoped for by Aull and his father.

RUMOR THAT LORD STRATHCONA WOULD RESIGN IS DOUBTED.

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—Special—The cable despatch from London stating that Lord Strathcona was considering his resignation as Canadian High Commissioner is not given any credence here.

The veteran statesman is understood to be enjoying good health and is giving just as much attention and painstaking interest to the important work which comes under his jurisdiction as ever before in the past.

Claims World Is Going Insane Fast

LONDON, Aug. 7.—That the world was going literally insane in grasping for speed and sensationalism, was the declaration of Sir James Browne, one of the world's best known alienists, at the International Congress of Medicine to-day. He said automobiles and other fast vehicles of travel were getting too common for the world's mental health. Only thus could he account for the alarming increase in insanity, which in England alone had increased nearly two hundred per cent. more than the population for a single period.

Canadian surgeons in discussing Sir James' report, took issue with the speaker. They claimed that such increases in insanity did not prevail in Canada.

No Booze For Brantford Armories

BRANTFORD, Aug. 8.—Although it will be some time before the Brant Dragoon Armouries will be built, Col. Muir is already making plans for its management. It has been stated upon very good authority that the Colonel had expressed an intention not to have a canteen located within the walls of the new building. The absence of the canteen at the Niagara camp, the Colonel is reported to have intimatd, greatly pleased him. When asked about the matter this morning he would make no definite statement, but rather intimated that to have things dry was his attitude in the matter. Col. Muir is evidently an admirer and a disciple of the Minister of Militia.

A skilful girl can shed tears as easily as a fountain pen.

Aeroplane Beats Train; Then Has Fog And Motor Trouble

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 8.—Aviator C. Murvin Wood, who started from Hempstead, Long Island, today, to race a special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad to Washington and back, lost the first half of his contest owing to fog and motor trouble, after having the train easily beaten.

Wood was compelled to land at Gaithersburg, Md., subsequently losing his way in the fog, and immediately after resuming his journey toward Fort Meyer, the local end of the journey, had to alight a second time, but said he was to reume as soon as he could make repairs.

At Baltimore Wood was thirty five minutes ahead of the train, but the latter arrived here at 9.43, leaving the aeroplane helpless in a Maryland village.

The special train broke all records between Philadelphia and Washington, making the 135 miles in 1 hour and 39 minutes.

The flight was made to demonstrate the worth of the Moisant monoplanes for scout duty in the army.

Drugless Healers in Session at Washington

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 8.—A movement to obtain legislation legalizing the practice of several systems of drugless healing plans for which were started today, will be inaugurated at the annual convention of the Washington Association of Drugless Healers which will convene here September 18th, to last two days. Dr. J. E. Lydon, president of the association, made this announcement to-day.

"Many of the systems as represented in the association," said Dr. Lydon, "have been before the public for the past thirty years and have demonstrated that many diseases and cases of deformity may be cured or prevented by properly educating the people to a better understanding of the fundamental laws which govern health. There will be clinics during the convention to demonstrate the efficiency we claim for the drugless and deformities, physiological treatment and exercises, scientific food chemistry and gienic measures."

New Brunswick Man Suicides

MONCTON, N. B., Aug. 8.—William Hickey committed suicide this morning at Point Wolfe, Albert County, by cutting his throat with a razor, severing the jugular vein.

Hickey was thirty years of age, and lived at home. He worked in the haying field yesterday and retired as usual but when his mother went to call him for breakfast she found the bed empty. Search resulted in finding his lifeless body near an outbuilding.

Deceased had an operation on his head some years ago, and never fully recovered.

Quebec, Aug. 9—The Queen's Own Hussars, the oldest cavalry regiment in Canada, in which many Canadian military officers, including Colonel Oscar Pelletier and General Lessard, received their early training, has been disbanded.

The corps has been inexistence 101 years.

Slept with Suspect Too Get Evidence

Dominion Detective Followed John O'Brien for Months Past Over Mail Robbery.

The dominion detective department has left no stones unturned that would lead to the conviction of John O'Brien, of Kingston, who was arrested at Sudbury on Wednesday, in connection with the mail bag robbery which occurred last January.

As soon as the robbery occurred a detective was sent in track of suspected parties, and has kept constantly in touch with O'Brien. While in Sudbury this detective acted as a companion to the suspected man, even sleeping with him at nights. At the same time he was gathering evidence to convict.

AN ALL-RED LINE OF WIRELESS TELEGRAPH CIRCLING THE WORLD.

London, Aug. 9.—Special—The House of Commons by a vote of 240 to 138 yesterday approved the government agreement giving the Marconi Company a contract for the creation of an imperial chain of wireless telegraph stations circling the world.

Premier Asquith Against Suffrage

Female Deputation Gets no Encouragement—Premier has Undergone no Change of Heart.

LONDON, Aug. 8—Premier Asquith gave cold comfort to-day to Mrs. Millicent Fawcett, the president of the National Union of Women's Suffragette Societies, and her militant colleagues, when they interviewed him in his official residence in Downing street and urged him to bring in a government measure bestowing the franchise on women.

The Premier complimented his visitors on their constitutional methods, which, he said, were "such a welcome contrast to the criminal proceedings" of the militant suffragettes. He, however, frankly declared that he had undergone no change of heart in the matter and that there could be no question of the government undertaking the desired measure during the present parliament.

Automobile Butts Into a Team

BRANTFORD, Aug. 8—What might have been a serious accident occurred in front of the Post Office this morning shortly after 11 o'clock. John T. Burrows, the well known teaming and carting agent, got into his automobile and started the machine. Something must have went wrong with the steering apparatus, for the minute he started the machine it whirled around and ran into a horse and buggy which were standing in front of the building, and which was occupied by Mr. Wm. Muir, superintendent of the House of Refuge. The rig was upset and Mr. Muir was thrown out and sustained a slight cut on the head. The car ran up on the sidewalk, where it was stopped before any further damage was done.

Carleton Place Man Wanted for Burglary

Chief of Police Wilson, of Carleton Place, has forwarded a description of Herbert Sullivan, wanted on a charge of house-breaking. He is 18 years of age, dark complexion, black eyes, and weighs between 120 and 130 lbs. Sullivan is minus the tips of three fingers on the right hand, blown off with a dynamite cap when a child. On leaving Carleton place he purchased a ticket for Brockville.

KINGSTON LABOR FIGHT

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—At a meeting of the Trades and Labor Council, it was decided to ask the Minister of Labor at Ottawa to send a representative to the city to adjust the dispute concerning the hours of labor on the new causeway. It is held that under the new Act, men are only to work eight hours. The contract was taken under these conditions, and for that reason the men feel justified in making this request.

Three Lives Lost In Western Fire

STRATHMORE Alta., Aug. 8.—Three people were burned to death in a farm house a mile and a half north-west of Strathmore station between five and six o'clock yesterday morning.

The dead are: W. Gillingweter, aged 28 years, his wife and infant child.

Gillingweter was, until a short time ago, chief clerk in the C. P. R. irrigation department at Strathmore. He recently started farming north-east of the town.

The cause of the tragedy is not yet known, but it is believed that the fire was caused by an oil stove, which was burning in the bedroom to warm food for the baby.

The fire was noticed by neighbors of a nearby farm house, who rushed to the scene too late to be of any assistance.

Gillingweter was a native of London, England, and came to Strathmore in 1910.

SOWING HIS WILD OATS
REAPING A HARVEST OF SORROW

How many young men can look back on their early life and regret their misdeeds. "Sowing their wild oats" in various ways. Excesses, violation of nature's laws, "wine, women and song"—all have their victims. You have reformed but what about the seed you have sown—what about the harvest? Don't trust to luck. If you are at present within the clutches of any secret habit which is sapping your life by degrees; if you are suffering from the results of past indiscretions; if your blood has been tainted from any private disease and you dare not marry; if you are married and live in dread of symptoms breaking out and exposing your past; if you are suffering as the result of a misspent life—DRS. LAUGH AND BE WELL

Appendicitis Can Be Cured by Smiling, Say Doctors.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 8.—"Smile," that is the latest and cheapest preventative for appendicitis, according to the surgeons who have handled most of the cases in the hospital.

"Loosen the muscles of your face into a grin," is their advice, "and you'll never scrape even a speaking acquaintance with a high-priced surgeon."

Since the first of January, seventy-one cases of appendicitis have been treated in the Johns Hopkins Hospital. Four of the patients died. That these deaths could have been averted was the confident statement made in the official bulletin issued by the hospital.

The surgeons declare that many cases of internal complaint can be traced to gloomy spirits in those who insist on going thru life with a grouch. The specialists say: "Worry and you'll get a pain in the side. The more you laugh the healthier you'll be and the fewer aches you'll have."

According to the Hopkins house surgeons, mental worry is one of the chief causes of appendicitis—just so much a cause as the lifting of heavy weights. Imperfect mastication is admitted to be one of the primary causes and the bolting of food is generally the habit of a man who lacks a rosy view of life. The man who smiles at table companions and joins in the general table talk is the least susceptible to physical ailments.

Played Joke With Corpse.

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Queen's Medical College authorities will demand an investigation into the opening of a box containing the corpse of a man killed near Belleville a week ago, which arrived at Kingston Junction expressed to the medical college. They are very much incensed.

The college authorities desire to find out who is to blame for interfering with the dead body and setting it upright upon a barrel at the Junction. They cannot understand why the box should have been broken open in the short journey from Belleville to Kingston.

Arrives to Find Husband Gone.

KINGSTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—After coming from Syracuse, N. Y., to meet her husband, supposed to be working near Kingston Mills, Mrs. Lewis-Jones was disappointed when she found her hubby could not be located. Mrs. Jones did not have a cent of money on arriving in Kingston. Mayor Regney and Rev. A. E. Smart interested themselves in her case, and while a search was made for the missing husband, the wife and baby were given quarters at the Albion Hotel. Whether or not it is a case of desertion is not known, but the sudden disappearance is a mystery.

Lucky Escape From Death.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—Scores of passengers were badly shaken up but no one seriously injured here this afternoon when a Big Four passenger train on the Sandusky division crashed into a long string of empty passenger coaches just within the city limits. The engine crashed into the rear coach of the empty string, splitting it wide open. The empties then caught fire and the city fire department was called to extinguish the blaze. The engineer and fireman jumped and escaped serious injury.

Marconi Agreement Passed.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—The house of commons by a vote of 210 to 138 today approved the government agreement giving to the Marconi Company a contract for the creation of an imperial chain of wireless telegraph stations circling the world.

Another Term For Gibson.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—(Can Press.)—It is understood semi-officially that the recent report that Sir John Gibson will be reappointed lieutenant-governor of Ontario for another year is correct, tho the cabinet has not yet dealt with the matter.

WOMAN LICENSED TO DRIVE HACK

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Saying that in these days when women are invading every business field a woman has just as much right to be a hack driver as a stenographer, Mrs. L. J. Moses of the Bronx to-day demanded a license to drive a hack. She is about 30 years old and attractive.

There was consternation among the hackmen when they saw Mrs. Moses take up her position at the main New Haven Railroad Station and put in a bid for fares. Mrs. Moses has a brand new surrey and a spirited horse.

C. O. R. Train Hits Team and Kills Two Horses

On Wednesday evening Mr. I. Brown, who live in the 13th concession of Rawdon, had been to Maple Leaf cheese factory for whey, and when returning home, stopped near the C. O. R. track and left the team in charge of an eight year old boy, while he went into a house near the road on business. While there the train came down from the north, frightening the team, which started to run. When fairly on the track, the train struck the horses, throwing both over the fence and killing them instantly. The wagon was demolished, but strange to say, the boy crawled out from the wreckage unhurt.

WHERE ARE WE AT?

When it comes to paying 34 to 35 cents a pound for butter in August, and small chicks at 75c. to $1.25 per brace, at the local market, as was the case to-day, it looks as though the farmer was having his day. Anyway, it draws heavily on the limited purse.

BAND CONCERT AT PARK

The action of the City Council in providing a series of band concerts for the remainder of the month of August, is evidently appreciated. Last evening one was held at Victoria Park and hundreds of citizens attended it. The programme was varied in its character and each number given was liberally applauded. In one of the selections a cornet solo was rendered by Mr. Wannacott, and a baritone solo by Mr. W. Waymark. Save Systematically Haphazard, occasional saving seldom accomplishes much. It's the steady, persistent, regular depositing of so many dollars a week, or month, or season, in the Union Bank of Canada, which makes one financially independent. The money accumulates all the more rapidly, too, because of the Interest which is added every six months.

Try it.

DEVELOPMENT OF CANADIAN INDUSTRIES

The Globe of last Saturday, contained a very valuable editorial on the subject of Canadian investments. It deplored the excessive booming of real estate both in the East and in the West, and went on to say that Canada's progress depends, not upon real estate but upon the development of its industries, and especially its mineral resources.

Apart from th question of free trade and protection, upon which some will differ widely from The Globe, it is time the attention of investors was directed to the rich and undeveloped fields of metals and minerals. "Canada has some of the greatest coal deposits in the world. Canadians own inexhaustible iron ore bodies off the New foundland coast. In Ontario there are large rich ore ranges, similar to the famous Mesaba range of the United States Steel Trust."

This subject is especially inportant to Eastern Ontario, where there are vast stretches of wild rock country unfit for cultivation, but which are, nevertheless, rich in mineral of all kinds.

There have been many amateurish attempts to work these areas for the gold they contain, but the reason for their failure is that they were worked for gold alone, and the metal was not in sufficient quantities to pay for the mining of it.

Gold mines are not a reliable and permanent investment, in Ontario at least. But these areas referred to contain mineral far more valuable and useful than gold, and in working these mines for this mineral, the gold can be won along with it, and so increase the profit and enable the mine owner to place his mineral upon the market at a low price.

At the present time in Hastings County, an American firm is making big profits out of a sulphur mine, and a large village has grown up around it within the space of a very few years, where there were but poor farms before.

Within a few miles of this village there is an area containing the largest arsenical deposits in the north of the continent. In fact, the whole of Hastings county is one big mining proposition that ought to be looked into by those who are interested in the industrial development of Eastern Ontario.

There are many cities, towns and villages throughout the county that would be bound to profit enormously by such a development.—Peterborough Review.

About Zutoo Tablets

"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

THE BENEFITS OF CO-OPERATION

There is in the course of development in this country, a movement which if pushed and strengthened would put the fraudulent apple-shipper out of business. Co-operation in the growing, packing and marketing of fruit, where properly carried on, is one of the strong forces making for honesty in fruit marketing. Very few, if any, cases of fraudulent packing have been made out against the co-operative organizations. If there have been any it has been due more to ignorance of what is required than to any desire to perpetrate wrong. Take some of the stronger co-operative associations such as those in Ontario, Lambton and Norfolk counties, and at Burlington and St. Catharines and some other points we could name, and it will be found that one of the sources of their success has been honest and straightforward methods of doing business and selling the consumer what he buys. There are co-operative fruit organizations in other provinces with equally as good records. The thing to do then to eliminate the dishonest packer is to extend the co-operative system. We do not mean by this that every one outside of the co-operative concern who handles or ships fruit is dishonest. There are many men outside of the associations, both growers and shippers, who are thoroughly honest in their methods. At the same time it is outside of the co-operative concern where dishonesty in fruit-packing is to be found today. And this is a very strong point in favor of the co-operative fruit-growers' organization, and should be emphasized more than it is. A little bit of judicious advertising among consumers, especially in the West, would accomplish much for the co-operative organization. It would create a demand for fruit grown, packed and marketed by the co-operative societies, and place them in a very much stronger position than they are to-day. Once the consumer realized that all fruit secured from the co-operative associations was always up to the standard, the demand for the associations' products would quickly increase.

MIXED FARMING AIDS FINANCES

Mr. G. H. Bisson, a well-known business man of Montreal, whilst visiting Nelson, B.C., recently, voiced some very reasonable opinions regarding the value of mixed farming to the financial situation of the country at large. The following extracts from his remarks will convey an idea of where diversified agricultural methods help to ease mixed farming districts through periods of stringency.

"If there were more mixed farming in the prairies less would be heard of money stringency during periods of financial depression. In the East where mixed farming is general, the people generally are not feeling the present stringency very much, as the greatest immediate pecuniary result of the production of wealth from the land is not confined to a small period of the year, but is spread over the 12 months. To the fact that in Kootenay and Boundary many kinds of farming are carried out, in addition to the other great industries of the district, which are producers day in and day out throughout the year, and to the fact that real estate values have not been boomed is due the comparative ease with which this territory is passing through the period of stringency."

Although money is tight in the West legitimate mercantile businesses are finding little difficulty in financing, and credit accounts with stable firms are as good as ever, states Mr. Bisson, who is credit and finance manager of a company headed by Senator Wilson, the Montreal capitalist, and doing a large business from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is in a position to speak of general financial conditions. Although he does not expect the bond market to improve materially until the European situation has been relieved by the final settlement of the Balkan trouble, and does not look for the banks to loan money very freely for real estate speculation for possibly a year, he has no misgivings as to the general business of the country. "Canadian business is as good as the country, and no one need worry about Canada's stability," he remarked.

CURRENT COMMENT

"Every one who comes to this country will soon learn that the present war is the most vigorous of protests in favor of the national dignity and decorum," says Huerta. "Dignity" and "decorum" were shot to pieces in Mexico long ago.

Up in Lindsay they are undecided whether to begin paving King street first, or honor Queen street with the preference. Might toss up a cent. More than one resident of Belleville would blow in two cents if it would help pave Front street.

Salvador is the only nation which has accepted in all its details Mr. Bryan's peace and arbitration plan, so Mr. Bryan is delightfully writing a treaty to secure perpetual peace with Salvador. But it's Mexico where peace is needed just now, Mr. Bryan.

With temperatures ranging from ninety to 106 in the shade, a midsummer heat wave is bringing death to scores of people in crowded cities in the United States. In Belleville we are enjoying perfect weather and cool breezes. Nowhere could a better climate be found.

Brockville now has a new "White Way," and a paved main street, lit by 73 cluster lights placed on both sides of the thoroughfare. What has Belleville? A main street lit by private electric signs, excellent stores, and a crossing sweeper who whisks the pebbles off the granolithic crossings. By gosh!

The Intelligencer congratulates Editor James of the Bowmanville Statesman, upon the completion of his 36th year as a newspaper man. Mr. James has done a creditable work for his town, both as a journalist and private resident. His hosts of friends and admirers will wish him many more years of equal prosperity in his chosen profession. The Statesman is a model of mechanical neatness, refreshing in a literary sense, and a welcome contribution to our desk.

Stratford Beacon: "It is reported that the Dominion Government is importing mechanics from the States to work on public buildings, thus breaking its own labor law. Sir James Whitney also imports bookkeepers from the United States. These are the men that are always shouting loyalty, but they do not always practice it." Wonder if The Beacon would hire a good printer from the States, if it could get one. The difficulty in Canada is, the demand is greater than the supply. The Ontario Business College of Belleville, with all its students, declares it is impossible to meet the requests for office service.

Peterborough Examiner: "The future of the Intercolonial Railway is still very much an unsolved problem, and just at present it seems doubtful whether Mr. Frank-Cochrane is going to be able to throw any clear light on the ultimate outcome. As a state institution it has not had a chance to do a paying business, because no management could reduce expenses or increase rates, or both, enough to make it pay without mortally offending a large percentage of the electors, especially in New Brunswick, where party allegiance sits closely on the voters." Didn't we hear something about Mr. Frank Cochrane making this same Intercolonial Railway pay to the tune of a snug surplus. What's the matter with our Peterborough friend? Can't he see a hole through a ladder, or has he no use for efficient work?

WALT MASON ON CONTRARINESS

The kinds of things I like to eat are those on which Doc puts a ban; I'm suffering for juicy meat, and I must eat a tub of bran. I wonder why the things we hate are always good for our disease? I eat about a hundredweight of cabbage when I'm wild for cheese. I cast a hungry, wishful eye upon the cherries, freshly canned, upon the doughnuts and the pie, but Doc. he shakes a warning hand. "If you," he says, "do not behave and eat this sawdust Johnnie-cake, you'll soon go shopping for a grave and monument, and no mistake." I'd rather die, than tramp a block; such exercise my bosom riles; the Doc. he tells me I must walk each morning forty-seven miles. I like so well to lie in bed all morning, and to sweetly snore; but just to-day the old Doc. said: "You'll have to rise at half past four!" The Doc. he seems to snoop around, discerning things that I despise, and then he says that I am bound to do those things, confound his eyes. And so I'm eating bolted meal, washed down with water from the pump; and if you ask me how I feel, my answer's sure to make you jump.

ORIGIN OF WEDDING CAKE

The origin of the wedding cake is decidedly superstitious, and the bridesmaids, who save bits of it to put under their pillows for luck are simply putting it to a predestined use.

The mediaeval wedding feasts were conducted on a generous scale, for, in spite of pessimistic railings at modern extravagance, our forefathers could give us points and beat us handsomely in the matter of feeding and hospitality. Hundreds of guests were entertained for periods varying from three days to a week, and naturally the demand for luck-bringing bits of cake was very great. Huge basketfuls of small dry biscuits were baked for every wedding, and no guest thought of departing without one. These developed in the course of time into small, square, richly flavored buns, which were heaped at the head of the table into a high structure, over which the bride and the groom used to kiss each other for good luck. Finally someone conceived the brilliant idea of icing the mound into one mass, and, presto! the first wedding cake! These original cakes were divided by breaking them over the bride's head, and the little squares of which they were composed, fell apart, and were then scrambled for with much fun and horseplay by the guests, who carried them away for luck.

What the Fat Man Said to His Wife

"YES, John, the plans for our new home provide for a bath tub big enough for a fat man. And the architect says he'll make the cellar steps wide and easy for you to climb."

"That's fine, Gertrude! But remember I also said we must have a good, old Sunshine Furnace like the one downstairs."

"That's a good furnace, John. It certainly keeps us cosy and warm."

"Can't beat McClary's Sunshine, Gertrude. Why it hasn't gone out on me once this winter. And you don't hear me grumbling about looking after it."

"I just open those big, double feed doors in the morning and throw in two or three shovels of coal. Then, it only takes me a jiffy to fill the water pan, because it's right over the feed doors in the front of the furnace where it's easy to pour water into. And I don't mind emptying an ash pan that slides out easily, and has bail handles that are always cool."

"But you forgot about shaking, John."

"Deuce, take it, Gertrude! How many more times will I have to tell you that you don't shake the Sunshine? McClary's call it 'rocking down' the ashes. I call it a kid's job to move this handle gently to and fro a half-dozen times."

"Yes, John, McClary's Sunshine is a good furnace for a lazy, old fat man. It almost looks after itself."

THERE'S a McClary agent in your locality, who will be glad to give you full particulars about McClary's Sunshine Furnace and tell you the cost of installing one in your home. You would find it profitable to read the latest Sunshine booklet, so write to our nearest office for a copy.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY

Orange Lily is daily curing the most obstinate cases of Female Disorders. Falling of the Womb, Leucorrhoea, Painful and Suppressed Menstruation, etc., etc., are all of them relieved from the start by its use, and a few weeks' or months' treatment accomplishes a complete cure. This remedy is a positive, scientific preparation, and is based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister. It is an applied treatment; that is, it is not taken internally, but is applied direct to the suffering parts, and it, therefore, acts with all the certainty of the known laws of chemical action. As it comes in direct contact with the diseased tissue, its antiseptic and nerve-food properties cannot help have a beneficent influence. I receive from 10 to 50 letters daily, speaking of the benefits and cures it is performing, and so sure am I that it will do what is claimed for it that I will send, absolutely free, a 35c box to every suffering woman who will write for it. Price, $1 per box, which is sufficient for one months' treatment. Address, MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, WINDSOR, ONT.

WHY BASEBALL HAS NOT BECOME POPULAR AT 'OME

The Englishman was attending his first baseball game. He seemed very uneasy after the fifth inning and finally said to American friend:

"I say, old chap, when do they serve the tea?"

"They don't serve tea at a ball game," laughed the American.

"No tea between innings," gasped the Englishman. "Then what's the object of the blooming game?"—Argonaut.

SAYS TEAM FELL DOWN WHEN SCOUTS WERE WATCHING HIM

Berlin, Ont., Aug. 7.—Owing to indifferent pitching during the last few games in which Bill Bradshaw, Berlin's star twirler, has performed, he was suspended by President Kalbfletch. Bradshaw had become indifferent in his pitching since he failed to make good when under inspection by big league scouts. Bradshaw contends that the team fell down behind him whenever he was in the box, and costly errors were responsible for the defeats and not his pitching. It is expected that his suspension will be lifted by the time his turn to pitch comes around next Monday.

PITCHERS FOR WORLD'S SERIES

It is more than probable that the Giants should they win the National League pennant, will depend upon Mathewson, Deamree and Marquard to do the pitching. Manager McGraw has expressed himself as being almost certain that this trio will shoulder the brunt of the pitching responsibility of the National League Champions in the coming world series if the Giants win the pennant. This will be McGraw's third attempt in three years to win the world's championship. Matty, Demaree and Marquard each possesses a winning record of his own. Mathewson has won nineteen games and lost but five this season; Marquard has a record of nine straights, and Demaree has pitched winning ball his last eight times out. Coming straight from the minors, Demaree was assigned a regular turn in the box during his very first season with the Giants. This is indeed a record Demaree should be proud of, for McGraw does not generally let a youngster perform regularly until he has been on the Giant bench for at least one season. Jeff Tesreau the former Leaf pitcher, has shown little of the ability which made him famous last season.

QUICKEST THINKER IN BASEBALL

Who is the quickest thinker in base ball?

What's the use of asking? Why it's none other than Miller Huggins. The St. Louis manager admits that fact, says so himself, and then passes out the following line of talk to back up his statement;

"Two of our St. Louis players were on first and second bases, with no one out. The man on second base was a slow runner. I was at bat, and it was my intention to sacrifice along the base line.

"We were playing against Pittsburgh, and as soon as the pitcher pitched the ball he started for the third base line, and I knew he hoped to get the ball and a play for a forceout at third.

"I saw what was coming and had just time to shift the position of my bat and to bunt the ball right down the line to the pitchers's box. As the pitcher had left his position, the bunt went for a single, and with the bases filled, we subsequently scored enough runs to win the game."

Huggins, though, is generous enough to give other players credit for displaying a bit of brains every once in a while, Said he:

"Last year, the St. Louis club, in a game with Chicago, had ta man on second, another on third ,with only one out. A St. Louis batsman hit a fly ball out to Jimmy Sheckard.

" Sheckard got all ready to throw the ball to the home plate, nticipating that the runner on third would try to score. But just as Sheckard drew back his arm to throw he saw that the man on third did not leave the bag, but that the man on second, expecting that the player ahead of would try to score, had started from second to third.

"Quick as a flash, Sheckard, with the same motion, wheeled and let the ball drive to second, where he got his man by two feet."

LINERS

Pitcher Lorenzen a left-hander of the Ottumwa Club in the Central Association, was sold to the Detroit Americans for $2,500.

The Newark players have planned a tour of Cuba and Porto Rico, provided they will win the pennant. They are perfectly safe in going ahead with the arrangements.

The Boston Nationals will probably recall infielder Arthur Schwind last year with Ottawa, from San Antonio, where he has been playing great ball.

Jim Wigge formerly of Montreal though he may never get back into real baseball, is making a record pitching for independant teams in California. He pitched seven no-hit games this season against bush teams.

Michigan Trying To Teach People How to Live

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 8.—The State of Michigan to-day is appearing in the role of instructor in a unique campaign of public health education. In charge of Dr. R. L. Dixon, head of the state in which every important community in the lower peninsula will be visited. The trip will last twenty-four days.

Another was a model house with all sorts of appliances to prevent any possible spread of the disease to other members of the household. There are models of sanitary drinking cups, sanitary lavatories, bathrooms and kitchens.

Moving picture exhibits and lectures will be given in all the towns and cities visited where overnight stops are made. About sixty places will be visited by the "public health special." The length of stops will vary from several days in the largest cities to an hour or two in the small towns.

CHAPTER I

The Awakening

For two weeks the settlement of Bentley had been in a fever of religious excitement. Night after night its simple people sought the little church, until aisles and ante-rooms could no longer accommodate the anxious throngs. Sin-burdened souls were crying for mercy, that their seemingly endless list of individual transgressions might be erased from the Judgment Book. At each service the altar was filled with seekers. Scores had already found pardon and peace, but many there were who had not yet responded to the call.

True to his calling, the Evangelist gave the Word without fear or favor, laying naked the consequences of wilful disobedience, and proclaiming the tender mercy of a just God toward such as forsook their evil ways for the New Life. Like a clarion his clear voice penetrated every section of the building, his warnings of the Judgment causing strong men to quake, while the blanched faces of many unrepentant women bespoke a spirit of inward fear.

Never before had such an awakening been known in the isolated little town. The week for which the Evangelist had been engaged had already been lenghtened to two, and now the third was entered upon with increasing numbers and an indefinite time for concluding the services. The spirit of conviction, ever broadening and deepening, spread to the neighboring settlements, from whence came scores of burdened souls to hear the Gospel as propounded by the wonderful servant of the Most High God—came to hear, to receive, and return to their humble homes with a living hope for the world beyond the grave. Business was at a standstill; the farm work had been practically suspended, that the meetings might be attended, and a feeling of awe possessed all who came under the solemn spell. Surely salvation had come to Bentley in unstinted measure. Old and young alike embraced the opportunity for entering the sacred fold, until a majority of the settlements' people were numbered among the elect.

Prominent among the promoters of the movement, and to whose efforts were due the securing of the Evangelist, was Ezekiel Haskell, whose prayers and charities were known to all. With all the enthusiasm of his great heart did he enter into the special work for the spiritual betterment of mankind, until he came to be recognized as the Evangelist's principal support in a human sense. House to house visits were inaugurated, morning devotional services held simultaneously in all the Christian homes, and a systematic canvass made of the entire community. Nothing was overlooked that would tend to render the results thorough and far-reaching, to which the membership of the little church cheerfully subscribed.

Among the most difficult to impress with the necessity of a religious experience was Samson, the son of Ezekiel, whose sins were legion, and skeptical opinions far-famed. While he admitted that his parent walked in accord with the precepts of his Bible, he had no personal use for what he adjudged a mystical hope based on an intangible nothing, and he made no bones of expressing his belief that when man died that was the end of him.

"You take all the religion you can hold, Dad," He was wont to reply, when gently remonstrated with for his ungodly manner of living. "I won't say one word agin it. If it works real well in your case, and you can prove that I can swap hosses with Rasmus Hale without being cheated out of half the price, I may give it a try after a spell; but just at present you are only wasting time on me. I hain't ready yet, and the Lord hain't ready to change me into a new being until I give Him the word. But I promise you this much, Dad: When I get religion—if I ever do—every mean caper I've ever done by word or deed, will be made right if it costs me my last cent. The people of Bentlley will know that something out of the ordinary has happened when Samson Haskell gets religion."

He liked the Evangelist. When Ezekiel informed him that the preacher would be at the Ogden station, ten miles distant, on a certain date, he volunteered to go for him, that he might be spared the jolting of the stage wagon, and upon arriving at the parental home, where the stranger was to be a guest, they were on the most friendly terms.

"That preacher is jest my idee of what a man of his calling should be", Samson confided to his mother. "He don't consign a feller to hell fire for not believing as he does. And he's fergot more about farm work than most of us hereabout ever knew; and he hain't ashamed to show his ignorance on subjects he hain't acquainted with."

As a matter of interest Samson remained at home upon the first evening, and was numbered with the household at family worship. But while the Evangelist prayed earnestly in behalf of the cause that had brought him to the little settlement, for the pastor, the church as a body, and the community at large, narrowing, finally, to the family circle, individualizing every other member, Samson was not mentioned.

"I thought mebbe he might have spoken of me, in his prayer, seeing he mentioned the rest of the settlement," he complained mentally as he ascended to his chamber; "but Samson Haskell, the sinner, hain't of no account—I reckon."

It was the beginning of a desperate battle on the part of Samson; it was also the first sign of victory for the tactful Evangelist.

As the meetings progressed,—while he thundered the terrors of the law of God, the freedom of mercy, and the ability of the Omnipotent One to keep his own unspotted from the sins of the world; while he dealt most rigidly with his audiences, laboring with each personally, and assisting into the kingdom of grace such as appealed for a change of heart and life, he assiduously avoided contact with Samson, far famed for his physical prowess, his proficiency in profanity, and wilful irreligious proclivities, whose need of salvation was equal to Zaccheus in the tree.

Thus he came to feel himself ostracised from all that was just and holy; that there was no place for him in the fold of God. No one cared for his soul; not one of those so enthusiastically active in the work cared to contaminate themselves with an interest in his behalf. Even the lips of his own father were sealed so far as his spiritual welfare was concerned. If he could but be given the opportunity to defend his skeptical ideas, there would be a degree of satisfaction but even that privilege was denied him. Each night he left the church with the resolve to never enter its doors again; he was not wanted there. He would seek the company of kindred spirits. But the hour of the following service found him present, rigid and defiant, only to be ignored as before.

Once only did the pastor attempt to deal with him, but was peremptorily checked by the Evangelist, his voice assuming a tone of authority that stung poor Samson to the quick. "God does not want that man to defile His sheep fold," he said, and turned to speak to another who was showing signs of yielding. Had it been in the open he would have sent the Evangelist flying through the air, but he controlled his evil spirit, although it cost him all his power.

In his father's home the Evangelist was most cordial, and conversed freely with Samson upon every subject but religion. He discussed the merits of horses with a knowledge that surprised the young farmer, and even explained the care of certain crops that had always been a vexatious problem; but to argue with him he declined, and to pray for him openly he positively refused.

"Have you any idee that them critters as make such a noise in meetin' live up to all they profess"? he questioned the Evangelist one morning while waiting for the family to collect for prayers.

"Do you know of any who don't?" was the guarded response, turning the leaves of his Bible with deliberation.

"Plenty of 'em. There's Rasmus Hale, the miller, Widder Simpson, who takes in washin', two as perfect hypocrites as ever breathed. And there's——"

"Do you know of any who do?" the Evangelist interrupted, his eyes apparently studying the Book.

"Yes—one or two".

"May I ask who they are?"

"My mother."

"And—

"My father."

"And—

"Sister Smith."

"Is that All?"

"That's all."

"Go thou and do likewise."

Shorne of his answer, he changed his seat for one in an obscure corner, nor did he even turn his eyes toward the Evangelist, who could scarcely conceal an amused smile. For once Samson Haskell had been silenced, and without an argument.

That morning Rasmus Hale and "Sister" Simpson were tenderly remembered in prayer, but Samson was not mentioned.

Shortly after he left the house, and a litle later was seen leaving the yard, driving a beautiful Blackhawk roadster, and was soon well on his way to Trenton, a trading town five miles distant.

"I fear Samson is carrying a heavy burden," suggested Mr. Haskell, in a tone of anxiety.

"He will come from under the load before he sleeps this night," was the cheerful reply.

"But are you not a little harsh with him? Samson is very tendered hearted. He is not to be judged by his skeptical sayings. An he likes you."

"I know your son better than you think, my brother," was the earnest reply. "And it is because of my interest in him that I am probing the tender heart. Leave him to me. His salvation will be a much greater victory than the combined converts thus far. I will never leave this village until Samson is safe within the fold of Christ." There was a settled purpose in his eyes as he spoke, and immediately leaving the room, he ascended to his chamber.

CHAPTER II.

The Reformation

The shades of evening were approaching when Samson drove into the home yard, leading a handsome colt, the purchase of which he had long been negotiating. He had recovered materially from his despondency, but was still defiant. He did not enter the house after stabling the horses, as was his habit, but busied himself with the stock until the hour for supper. Nor did he answer when called by his mother, and when she went out to him he declined to appear at the evening meal.

"I can't stand this much longer, mother," he said petulantly. "There is no excuse for some people acting as they do. The more they preach and tell others how to live, the worse they act themselves. If I was agoing to be somebody I'd be somebody that was a help to somebody else. Every time I speak to that Evangelist he cuts me most to pieces. He has a civil word for everybody but me; I'm beneath his notice when in the church. But he jest puts his arms round Bill Feltus atrying to lead him to the mourner's bench, and Bill is most as bad as I be. I don't believe he has much religion, or he wouldn't treat me so. His eyes are like a hawk's, and every time he looks at me I'm ready for the woods."

The mother endeavored to explain, but her son would not be persuaded, and when the parents and Evangelist left for the church he had disappeared from the premises.

The Evangelist's opening prayer was the key to that wonderful service. It was the supplication of a deeply burdened heart for the lost sheep. Filled with pathos and power, his voice, while low and even, seemed to reach beyond all temporal obstacles, into the great beyond, and, grasping

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

FIRE NEAR TORONTO

Four Residents of English Suburb Are Homeless.

Sudden Blaze Sweeps Down on "Shacktown," and Only the Efforts of the Firemen Prevent the Flames Frome Devastating the District—Ninety Per Cent. Are Frame Houses.

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—Four Earlcourt men went home last night from the city and found their homes a heap of smoking ruins. Three of them saved a few sticks of furniture and some clothing, while Fred Adams, an employe of the city street cleaning department, lost everything. He has a family of nine children and they have nothing but the clothes they wore when the fire occurred. Furniture, clothes, crockery, everything is gone, and they will have to begin all over again. The losers are: Alfred Franks, building and contents, $1500; William Brown, building, $600; Fred Adams, contents, $500; Chas. Burrows, building and contents, $1400; Bertram Lovewell, building and contents, $1500.

Four houses were burned. Three were totally destroyed and one is a half burnt ruin. The buildings were located on Hatherley road, near Eversfield road, just adjoining R. A. Blackmore's hardware store. The fire started in the vacant half of a house which had been divided into two by a plasterboard petition. It belonged to William Brown, and one half of it was occupied by Fred Armes and his family.

H. Burrows, who lives on the opposite corner, was in his garden at 8 o'clock last night when Wm. Brown rushed out of the vacant half of the house and cried out that it was on fire. Armes' family had just time to rush out of the other half before the whole building was a sheet of flame. The flames spread rapidly to Chas. Burrows' house just three feet north, then to Bertram Lovewell's house across a twenty-five foot lot, but were checked by a wide vacant lot from going farther north.

Spreading south the fire destroyed Alfred Frank's house and would have demolished R. A. Blackmore's hardware store but for the efficient work of the city firemen. According to eyewitnesses the speed with which the reels turned out and got the fire under control with water from a hydrant on Dufferin street, half a mile away, was nothing short of marvelous. Had city water not been available the fire would have swept the district, as 90 per cent. of the buildings are frame houses, many of them only partly completed.

The neighbors worked nobly to assist the firemen, even the women passing buckets of water, helping to move furniture and doing all they could to help the families in trouble.

The cause of the blaze is unknown.

TANGO MUST GO.

Muskoka May Be Next to Ban Objectionable Dance.

MUSKOKA, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Quite a stir was created amongst the guests of the Windermere House last night when it was rumored that the management had decided to prohibit any more of the "tango" dances in the hotel dance hall. Since the summer season opened the "tango" has been the popular dance here, almost to the exclusion of all others. When properly and becomingly executed the dance is not objectionable, and no objection would have been made to it had the dancers kept within the proper limits. A few bold spirits, however, with more boldness than discretion, succeeded in vulgarising the dance to such an extent that it has attracted the attention of the manager of the hotel, who says he "cannot permit the dance to go on while the dancers continue to introduce so many objectionable features."

Opinion of the other guests of the hotel is very much divided, but the majority express the belief that the management will make no mistake in cutting out the dance entirely.

WILD GOOSE CURED HIM.

Frightened Bird Hit Man and Paralysis Got Better

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 8.—A frightened goose flying blindly thru the air struck Arthur J. Reddington, a Lamanda Park rancher, in the back of the neck today and cured him of paralysis.

Reddington had been suffering from partial paralysis of the arms and legs for several years and was considered incurable.

As Reddington was hobbling along the boulevard near his ranch the electric horn of a swiftly approaching automobile frightened a flock of geese from an irrigation ditch alongside the road. One flew across the road and struck Reddington full tilt on the back of the neck.

The assault was so sudden that Reddington instantly threw up his hands to his neck. When he recovered his composure he found that he had also recovered the complete use of all his limbs.

His Irish Descent.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—While a tent meeting of "Millennial Dawn" adherents on Colborne street was in progress last night vandals set fire to a sleeping tent of the leaders. The fire department was summoned but could save neither effects nor tent. In the meantime the meeting was continued, the leader exclaiming that he was of Irish descent and despite the fact that the devil burnt his sleeping tent he would continue to preach in Brantford.

Two Peruvian Quakes.

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 6.—(Can. Press.)—An earthquake on Wednesday destroyed the Peruvian Towns of Caravell and Quicacha. Thousands of the inhabitants were rendered homeless and great misery prevails.

Caravell is a town of 4000 inhabitants in the State of Aeriquepa, 13 miles to the northwest of the port of Mollendo, Quicacha is in the same state.

Brutal Assault With Bottle.

SARNIA, Aug 8.—(Special.)—Arthur Reynolds, a young man of this city, was given one year in the Central this morning by the magistrate on a charge of having assaulted a man by the name of Kalu. The assault occurred on Saturday last, the victim being beaten over the head with a heavy whiskey bottle. The man made no defence, except that he was drunk.

SPENT PARTY FUNDS

Sulzer Accused With Speculating From "Bar'l."

Frawley Committee Inquiring Into Source of New York Governor's Campaign Money, Finds That He Was Gambling on Wall Street and Tried to Recoup Out of Party Exchequer.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. — (Can. Press).—Gov. William Sulzer of New York was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculation at the time of his nomination and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stock while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony adduced today at the hearings of the Frawley committee of the legislature.

The evidence brought to light is sufficient, according to Senator Frawley, chairman of the committee, to warrant proceedings to impeach the governor for violation of the Corrupt Practices Act, and the committee closed its hearings here today to consider what action should be taken.

A definite decision, Chairman Frawley indicated, would be reached by the time the legislature meets on Monday.

The governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms. L. M. Josephthal, a Wall street banker, and a member of Gov. Sulzer's staff as naval reserve aide, came to his rescue, it brought out, and paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account in July last. This was after the governor had received repeated calls for more margin and was about to be sold out.

The governor's transactions with the other firms were for cash and it was in connection with one of these that Gov. Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions in the purchase of stock.

Arranged chronologically, the testimony appeared to show that on Jan. 1, 1912, there stood on the books of the stock exchange firm of Harris & Fuller an indebtedness of $48,599, against the purchase by Gov. Sulzer of 500 shares of "Big Four," 200 shares American Smelting and Refining Co., and 100 shares of Southern Pacific. This testimony was given by Melville B. Fuller, a member of the firm.

The governor's next transaction in Wall street was on Jan. 16, 1913, when he deposited a $5000 cheque of A. E. Spriggs against his indebtedness to Harris & Fuller. On July 9, 1913, he further reduced this indebtedness by selling his 100 shares of Southern Pacific for $9248. The governor's account with Harris & Fuller, according to Mr. Fuller, was known as No. 63.

After the governor had failed to answer several calls for margin the firm, on June 11, demanded a deposit of $15,000, in default of which it was said his stock would be sold.

"The result of this communication was that finally something over $26,000 was paid by Josephthal and the account taken up, is that right?" Mr. Fuller was asked.

"That was some time after. We got the Spriggs cheque before the account was finally taken up."

A. E. Spriggs is said to have been interested with Gov. Sulzer some twenty years ago in the exploitation of the Alaska Industrial Co., a mining corporation.

TARIFF FAR OFF.

Underwood Measure Has Many Obstacles to Surmount.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—All predictions of an early passage of the Democratic tariff bill by the senate are going glimmering. Majority leaders realize that notwithstanding the fact that they have set a new record in pushing consideration of this measure, only a beginning has been made and the earliest anyone now will promise completion of the task is Sept. 15.

The chemical, earthenware, metal and lumber schedules have been approved save for rates on certain articles in each which will be taken up when the bill gets to the senate proper from the committee. There remain to be considered ten schedules, among them the three upon which there will be the most vigorous attacks by the minority, namely, the wool, sugar and agricultural schedules. The minority is making a complete tariff record and shows no sign of letting up on amendments.

Can Wife Rob Husband?

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—Whether or not it is possible, legally speaking, for a wife to steal from her husband is the point raised before Judge Leet in the case of Mrs. William Rabinovitch, wife of a farmer of St. Constant, who had her arrested on a charge of stealing $675 of his money.

On behalf of Mrs. Rabinovitch it is argued that the question should be dealt with in the civil courts. It was quite impossible to accuse the woman of theft, as all the goods in the possession of the couple are held by them jointly.

As Rabinovitch is to take action before the civil courts to recover the money Judge Leet adjourned the case.

Cornwall Man Killed.

CORNWALL, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Friends in Cornwall were advised yesterday of the death at Valleyfield, Que., of Edward Walker, a young man about twenty-five years of age, as the result of an accident which occurred on one of Mr. Cohan's dredges engaged there. The remains were brought to Cornwall and the funeral took place this afternoon at Woodland cemetery.

Foresight.

"Where are you going?"

"Out to lunch."

"Why, it's only 10:20. Are you hungry so early in the day?"

LIND NEARS MEXICO

Arrival of U. S. Emissary Awaited With Anxiety.

He Will Land at Vera Cruz This Afternoon or Tonight, and Will Be in Capital of Mexico on Sunday Night—Huerta's Message Regarding Lind is Verified by an Official Despatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The latest developments as to Mexico are:

A wireless from the United States battleship New Hampshire, conveying John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, states the vessel will not reach Vera Cruz before tomorrow afternoon or night.

Commissioner Lind will reach Mexico City probably Sunday night or Monday morning.

There is no change in the program under which the message to President Huerta which Commissioner Lind brings from President Wilson is to be handed by American Charge de Affaires O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City to the Mexican Government. Immediately thereafter the note will be made public by the American embassy at Mexico City and by the state department at Washington.

The note it is hoped and expected by the Wilson administration, will justify it before the world in the plan therein indicated for restoring peace in Mexico.

Commissioner Lind will not go near the palace or in any way communicate directly with the Mexican Government. All communications will be thru the American embassy, which is recognised by President Huerta and which has been dealing with him as a de facto power.

There has been absolutely no intimation from Mexico that any attempt will be made to prevent Mr. Lind from landing at Vera Cruz or from proceeding from there to the Mexican capital.

President Wilson's incredulity as to President Huerta's ultimatum as to Lind was removed early today when the state department got direct from Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge d'affaires at Mexico City, an absolute confirmation of the Huerta determination that Commissioner Lind will be considered an "undesirable" in Mexico unless he brings official recognition of the Huerta administration. The statement issued by President Huerta thru the Mexican foreign office was first transmitted to the United States embassy, reaching Charge O'Shaughnessy at midnight Aug. 6. It was received by the state department at Washington and translated out of cipher between 12 o'clock last night and daylight this morning.

The translation was then sent over to President Wilson at the White House. The president summoned Secretary of State Bryan and they were in conference for an hour. Secretary Bryan then proceeded to the state department, where he soon after announced the following message to Charge O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City, with instructions to deliver it in person to the Mexican Government:

"The statement of the Mexican foreign office was based on misrepresentations for which this government is not responsible. In sending Gov. Lind as adviser to the embassy the president is entirely within his rights and this department will not assume that his going will be regarded as unfriendly when the character of his mission is understood."

As to how President Wilson regards the attitude of Huerta toward Lind several different views are held by leaders in congress. The president himself has said nothing directly for publication on the latest developments, but the White House late today authorized a statement that there is no change in the plans of the president to maintain friendly relations with Mexico and to end or endeavor to end strife in that country by friendly means.

President Repentant.

One report, with no verification, is that he is sorry he has sent anybody on such a mission as Lind is now undertaking.

There is a report in circulation in Washington tonight that the president was so astounded by the Huerta ultimatum that no plan of action has yet been determined on in the event that Lind is turned back at Vera Cruz and not allowed to land, or, if let land, is attacked or snubbed at Mexico or on the way there.

Mexico City Calm.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—The flurry over the coming of ex-Governor Lind as special advisor to the American embassy has largely subsided among Mexicans and foreigners.

Wm. Bayard Hale, who has been investigating affairs here for President Wilson, left tonight with instructions from the United States State Department to meet Mr. Lind at Vera Cruz and accompany him to the capital. He is expected to arrive here Sunday morning.

It is reported that the more radical advisers of Huerta are urging him to bar Lind from landing at Vera Cruz unless he states categorically what is his mission, but there is no indication early this evening that any further steps will be taken to impede his journey or prevent him from fulfilling the duties assigned to him in Mexico by President Wilson.

Secretary Bryan today directed Charge O'Shaughnessy to transmit to the Huerta Government in the name of the United States assurances of friendly feeling and proper motives which animated President Wilson in sending Lind to Mexico.

It expressed the belief that the Mexican Government had been misled by the press despatches from the United States placing unwarranted and unauthorized construction upon the mission of Lind, and asserted that no one excepting Lind and the proper officials in Washington knew what the errand was, that it would not develop until he arrived and placed the message he bears in the hands of the person for whom it is intended, and Mr. Bryan requests the Mexican Government to reserve judgment until in possession of the full facts.

In light of this it is very unlikely any further objection will be urged to the coming of Mr. Lind.

Big Task to Perform.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—Commenting on the Mexican situation, The Spectator says:

"If America gets involved in a Mexican war, she will be lucky if it lasts only three years and stops short of forcing her to raise armies on the European scale. Perhaps, however, the worst aspect of the whole affair is if America succeeded, as no doubt she ultimately would, her success would even be worse than failure. She would find evacuation practically impossible as she would have upon her hands a huge new territory with a large population in permanent revolt."

BEAUTY BEHIND THE WEB OF FASHION

Does the veil of intricate and pronounced design enhance or mar the beauty of the wearer? There is only one answer to this when the observer is looking at the clever model pictured, who is wearing a fine mesh veil through which runs a large vine-like figure.

KEEPING BREAD FRESH

Cold Storage Found to Prevent Staleness for Several Days

For thousands of years mankind has been content with allowing its bread to get stale, and this fact has come to be considered unavoidable. It is the more surprising that researches by Dr. J. R. Katz at the Physical-Chemical Laboratory of the University of Amsterdam, should have shown that there is in point of fact no need for allowing our bread to lose its toothsomeness. When kept either at a very low or very high temperature, bread is in fact preserved "new" for some days at least, staleness being due only to the ordinary temperature of bread storage and consumption.

In Dr. Katz's experiments, bread was kept absolutely new for more than 40 hours at a temperature of 60 degrees centigrade, while at a temperature of 30 to 40 degrees it became only "half stale." At ordinary temperatures it of course grew rapidly stale.

Dr. Katz accordingly recommends keeping the newly baked bread at temperatures of 50 degrees centigrade, and upward, thus keeping the crumb absolutely new, whereas the crust by absorbing water becomes limp and flexible. If the bread be then put back again into the oven for a short time the crust will give up its water, thus becoming hard and crisp as before. An even simpler course is preserving the bread in cold storage rooms kept at sufficiently low temperatures. If these rooms be sufficiently dry, the crust likewise remains hard and crisp so that the bread even after a considerable time is equivalent to new bread.

Apart from its importance to the housewife this process is of the highest economical interest, relieving as it does the baker of the necessity of baking his bread by night.—Scientific American.

Simple Home Remedy

Simple remedies often prove effective if used quickly and correctly. For instance, if you get a bit of dust, an eyelash or any sort of "speck" in your eye try this method. Turn the eye affected toward the nose as far as you can. Pull the eyelid down as far as you can over the eye. Then blow the opposite nostril hard. This will frequently carry the offending particle down through the eye duct into the nose. Do not rub the eye when there is something in it. That merely inflames the eyeball without effecting a remedy. If something lodges in the eyeball this simple method will probably fail. It will then be necessary to secure proper treatment as soon as possible.

Mice Stoppers

Common yellow soap, warmed over the stove and pressed into balls is excellent to fill the small holes above washboards or where the plaster is broken, where mice may find an entrance.

PIONEER OF MONTREAL

Recalls Long Past Events of Big City's History

Mr. Charles A. Gregory of Montreal, although nearing ninety years of age, has the reputation of being the best banjo player in Canada. Incidentally he has a fund of reminiscenses of what is now the biggest city in the Dominion.

Mr. Gregory faintly recalls the burning of the Parliament buildings, and the rotten egging of Lord Elgin through the streets of the city. He first journeyed to Montreal on a train from St. John to Laprairie, which was pulled by horses—a wooden railway, in fact—the only one in the world, it was understood at the time.

Almost his first experience in Montreal was the execution of twelve sodiers on Fletcher's Field, at the time of the rebellion—a fact which is stamped on his memory, but the details of which he was so young he does not remember. He recalls, however, that his father told him all about the circumstances involved in the case.

Handy Electric Lamp

A suction cup base is provided with a new portable electric lamp so it can be used anywhere there is a smooth surface to which the cup will cling.

New Way to Trace

An excellent way to get the exact shape of leaves or ferns for sketching or tracing for ornamental work, is by taking a smoke copy. Butter lightly a sheet of writing paper, and hold over a candle until it is thoroughly blackened, but not burned. Lay the right side of the fern on the paper and press down the entire surface, especially the edges, with a pencil or something of the sort; then transfer it to a clean sheet, not letting it move after once being laid on, or it will "smudge"; place another sheet of paper over it carefully and press with the fingers, or a book. A perfect impression will be obtained, which can be traced, or otherwise copied, and those who do not draw sufficiently to outline the leaves of ferns, will find this the best way to do.

What has become of the old-fashioned girl who used to part her hair in the middle?

Notes From Trenton

Friday last a party of 50 campers, principally Americans from Presqu'isle Point, sailed to Trenton for a fish and chicken dinner at Hotel Gilbert.

Work on the foundation of the fine new business blocks being erected by Mr. S. B. McClung and by Mr. R. G. Weddell, commenced this week.

While standing on the lawn in front of Mr. R. M. Mowat's residence, one day last week, several ladies narrowly escaped being seriously injured by rocks thrown up during blasting operations on the C.N.R., where a pit for new weigh scales is being excavated.

On Friday last a number of employees of the Hamilton Bridge Co., while placing a large steel bent in position, narrowly escaped instant death. The men were working on a raft attached to one of the cement piers when one of them noticed that a rope had given way and the huge piece of metal was descending directly upon them. He had barely time to warn his companions to jump for their lives when the bent crashed through the raft upon which they had been working.

NEXT WEEK BELONGS TO THE I. O. O. F.

Next week promises to be the biggest week Belleville ever knew. The representatives will begin to arrive on Sunday and Monday to be in readiness for the Grand Encampment on Tuesday morning.

The Patriarchs Militant of Toronto will arrive by special train Tuesday morning at 6 a.m. and will be met by the local Canton No. 8, and proceed to the Armouries. At 10.30 the entire brigade will assemble and engage in the ceremony of "raising the colors."

Wednesday, of course, is the big day for the public.

Excursions will arrive from all points, on the railroads and boats, and there is no doubt that Belleville will see one of the biggest days in her history.

Look out for the procession at 1 p.m. on Wednesday, August 13th. Cantons and Odd Fellows from all parts of Ontario. This will be the finest parade ever seen in our city.

A fine programme of sports, etc., has been arranged for the afternoon.

Miss Dorothy De Vonda, the world's champion lady balloonist, will make her daring flight at 3.30 p.m. She is a woman of nerve. This lady holds the record in altitude flights. She is like a bird in the air—the higher she goes the better she likes it. Don't miss seeing her, and also remember the great competition; drills by the Cantons from all over the province. All this take place at the Exhibition Park.

Merchants and citizens, get busy and decorate your places of business and homes, and let the hundreds of visitors feel at home while in our fair city. Everybody, do all you can to help our local Odd Fellows, and boom Belleville.

HOW DID THE DOG TEAR THIS BOY'S PANTS?

"Her dog tore my pants," said Harold Johnson, in the afternoon Police Court, pointing at Mrs. Ruddel.

"How could my dog bite you in the pants when he was changed in my back yard?" queried Mrs. Ruddel.

"How long did you wear those pants?" asked Mr. Jacob Cobden, J. P., who looks for the raison d'etre of everything.

"Less than a month."

"Well, if the lady gives you two dollars, will you give her the pants?"

"No," said Harold.

"Two dollars to the boy," said his Worship.

THE WESTERN FAIR
September 5th to 13th

The Western Fair of London, Ontario, will this year without doubt surpass anything ever before attempted by the Association. For months past preparations have been going quietly on for the great Exhibition, and when the time arrives it will be found that everything is in first-class condition. Enquiries of all kinds are coming into the general offices and the indications are that the buildings, although enlarged this year, will be filled to overflowing. The space in the Main Building is already about allotted. It is expected that the Agricultural and Horticultural Buildings will be crowded, as the Fruit exhibits from the different counties will be quite large and very attractive. The Women's Institute throughout Middlesex County will no doubt make a very attractive display in their competition.

Prize lists, entry forms and information of all kinds regarding the Exhibition will be given on application to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, General offices, Room 302 Dominion Savings Building, London, Ontario.

as an anchor the promises of God, refused to relinquish its hold until the petition was granted. Tears flowed down the upturned face as he continued to plead for the wanderer, and while no name was spoken, all present knew in whose interest the appeal was being made.

An awful silence prevaded the room as the Evangelist confided his heart's desire to Him who held the world and its people in His hand, finally resting his case with a faith that was wonderful because of its childlike simplicity.

Up to this moment Samson had not been seen to enter the church. Would he purposely absent himself? Were the prayers and manifested faith of this wonderful man to fail of their desire? Would the Omnipotent One, at this critical moment, turn a deaf ear to his cry?

With a trustful smile he rose to deliver the message, taking for his scriptural text Joshua 6: 16, "Shout: for the Lord hath given you the city."

In a simple but interesting manner he related the story of Israel's deliverance from Egyptian rule by a mighty God; the footpath through the Red Sea; the Wilderness experience, and final march to the shores of Jordan.

"The River Jordan, lying between God's chosen people and their destination, was at the height of its annual freshet, the water overrunning its banks by many feet, to enter which was apparent death. Yet, to remain where they were was to limit God's power over that which He had created. At the Red Sea the admonition had been: 'Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will show you to-day.' But here was a more difficult problem; no one could enter these seething waters and live. Yet the maker of all things had ordered the pilgrims to move forward, with no perceptible indication of such a course being other than disastrous. But these people trusted in a living God—a God who had personally delivered them out of the hands of Pharaoh; at whose command the waters of the Red Sea had opened before them; and who was also master of the swiftly running Jordan. Listen: 'And it came to pass, when the people had removed from their tents to pass over Jordan. . . and the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brink of the water. . . . that the waters from above stood and rose up upon an heap, . . . and the people passed over . . . on dry land.'

"Once more was the faith of these pilgrims to be severely tested; and once more was demonstrated the absolute folly of opposing the will of Jehovah. 'I have given into thine hands Jericho, and the king thereof, and the mighty men of valor,' promised the Lord. 'And ye shall compass the city, all ye men of war, and go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days . . . and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and the priests shall blow with the trumpets . . . and all the people shall shout with a great shout, and the walls of the city shall fall down flat.' How faithfully was this program carried out, and with the promised results, is amply substantiated by history."

Then, stepping to one side of the pulpit, his countenance set with intense earnestness, the Evangelist continued: "For three weeks have we been compassing the settlement of Bentley that souls might be brought within the fold of Christ,—souls who for years have been systematically combatting the purpose of their Maker. Hid within the flimsy walls of skepticism, many of you, with theories contrary to the teachings of the Holy Spirit, are living in deliberate sin, the influence of which the Judgment alone can reveal. But your limit has been reached. Your paper walls of self-righteousness are material for Satan's match. God here and now calls a halt. His sword is against you. He demands repentance!" Then, raising his voice to a shrill cry: "Shout, pilgrims, for the Lord hath given you the city."

As for a moment he stood silent, as in waiting, his eyes lifted heavenward, his face reflecting the halo of celestial glory, a loud, rumbling crash sounded from the rear of the church building, followed by a second and a third.

Then, as though shot from a cannon, a tall, gaunt form sprang from a room at the right of the pulpit, sped with tremendous bounds down the side aisle, and, in wild-eyed bewilderment, crashed into a small store room reserved for dishes and pots, knocking crockery from the shelves, upsetting kettles and tinware, the contents scattering with a deafening noise. A moment later he reappeared, only to rush into the wood room, where a second disturbance announced a vain endeavor to gain the open air. Like a hunted creature at bay, he stumbled about in the darkness, but could find no place of exit.

With a piteous cry of "I'm lost: I'm lost! God help me, I'm lost!" he sank to the floor, and, in the midst of the havoc he had wrought, awaited, with covered his face, his doom.

How long he remained thus he could never tell; he could almost feel the consuming flames of hades encircling his person, the heat becoming the more intense with each moment. His flesh writhed in agony; he saw an eternity of despair; the results of a Christless life were to be his never ending reward.

Presently the tender notes of song—oh, how sweetly they echoed through the building—sounded in his ears, one voice, a superb tenor, apparently drawing nearer and nearer, being heard distinctly above the others:

"Oh! do not let the Word depart,
And close thine eyes against the light;
Poor sinner, harden not thy heart;
Thou wouldst be saved—Why not to-night?"

And as the audience reached the chorus, every word of which penetrated the fluttering heart:

"Why not to-night? Why not to-night?
Thou wouldst be saved—Why not to-night?"

what seemed to be an angel hovered over him, the heavenly presence bringing a vague hope to his fluttering heart.

"Samson, God wants you in His Kingdom." The words were spoken low and tender, as he felt himself assisted to his feet, to be led like a child to the audience room and up the centre aisle to the altar, where, with face buried in the long arms that rested upon the railing, he sobbed out a penitent's appeal for mercy.

At his right knelt the devoted mother, her arm about his neck, the tear-stained but joyous face pressed close to his. At his left knelt the Evangelist, his face shining with happiness as he thanked God for the victory so graciously bestowed.

It was indeed a great victory; yet none realized the change so much as the subject himself. A great joy possessed his heart as he rose to his feet, to begin a life of usefulness to the One he had so long and fearlessly opposed.

His purpose was fixed; his resolve was to henceforth be an honor to Him whose name he now espoused. Nor had he, from that moment, the slightest reason to doubt the Evangelists's cordial friendship. From the experience in the wood room a Christian fellowship had been established that was to continue throughout this life and into the eternity.

To the limits of the district and far beyond went the story of Samson's reformation, drawing scores of residents from the neighboring counties who were curious to look upon the man through whose influence the godless farmer-jockey was brought to see the error of his ways, with the result that many of them were brought to the foot of the Cross.

"I reckon you found me a hardened subject," said Samson to the Evangelist, as they clasped hands in farewell on the last night of the meetings. "It's the first time I was ever beaten in a square, stand-up fight; and you did your work well."

"The fight was not mine," answered the Evangelist, smiling cordially at the reference to his combative qualities. "The credit rests with God and the wood-pile. Of myself I would have made a poor showing against your unlimited physical powers. By God alone are such miracles wrought, and to Him only must you look for the spiritual strength that will successfully combat the evil of this world."

"Be that as it may, it was a powerful job. I can now read my title clear to mansions in the sky, and I shall try to keep 'em in sight."

"And all the attendant glory shall be thine," was the fervent response.

To be Continued.

People In All Parts of Canada Wanted To Know More About These Wonderful Tablets Made From Fruit Juices!

N. JOUBERT, Esq.

"I heartily recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to all who suffer from Constipation and the painful consequences—Piles. I am now over 74 years old and suffered for over 20 years with Constipation and Piles. I tried all kinds of remedies, saw the doctors and took their medicines but nothing cured me. About four years ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives"—found they were doing me good. Then I procured an additional supply and was much gratified at the wonderful good they did me. After taking four boxes, I felt well—my bowels were regular and the Piles had disappeared.

My wife was troubled for three years with Asthma and Eczema on the hands, which made her hands almost useless. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, none of which had any effect. He also advised her to use rubber gloves (she wore out three pairs). I persuaded her as a last resort, to try "Fruit-a-tives". The effect was marvellous. Her hands are cured and the Asthma has also left her. We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit a-tives".

N. JOUBERT, GRANDE LIGNE, P.Q.

Whether it was the fine, honest, straightforward face that inspired confidence or the simple language, which rang true as a silver bell, that made so many people think over this letter, is hard to say. But the fact remains that one hundred and eighty-seven persons have written Mr. Joubert to enquire more fully about "Fruit-a-tives". And this delightful old gentleman who is now 74 years old—happy in his release from pain—grateful for his cure—took the time to answer every inquiry. Take his advice and try "Fruit-a-tives".

BUSINESS PARALYZED

MILAN, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—For the second time within six weeks a general strike has been started in Milan. Business has been paralyzed for four days. One hundred and fifty thousand workers are on strike. The agitation arose from the demands of the metal workers of Lombardy and Piedmont for an increase in wages of half a cent an hour and the refusal of the employers to grant it.

Large bodies of troops have been sent into Milan and the city has the appearance of one in a state of siege. The ostentatious display of military force has angered the people, provoked disorder, and is tending to convert a purely economic struggle into a political revolt.

Nearly every man and woman you meet is looking for sympathy.

Colbalt Landmarks Gutted by Fire

Prospect Hotel, Bank of Ottawa and Several Stores Lose Heavily.

COBALT, Ont., Aug. 9.—The old Prospect Hotel on Cobalt square was gutted by fire this morning and in the loss of the building Claude Morrison, tobacconist, loses his entire stock.

R. C. Lowrey, another tobacco dealer, managed to save some stock, but the Bank of Ottawa, Willis Abbot, stock broker, J. J. Finlan, the Northern Ontario Light and Power, and other brokers lost everything that was not deposited in safes.

Starting underneath the cigar store, supposedly from a lighted cigar or cigarette stub, the big frame building burned like tinder and for some time it was a question if the Hunter Block, another old building would be saved.

In all the loss is estimated between $40,000 and $50,000.

It was only the brillant work by the fireman that saved the well known square of the mining town from going up in flames.

For nearly an hour it required all their efforts to save the Hunter building, which was only separated by a little alley and then when the fire broke out in different places in the Prospect Hotel, it was impossible to save the place.

ORANGE AND KINDRED SOCIETIES ATTEND CHURCH

Sermon Delivered by Rev. A. R. Sanderson at Holloway Street Church —Prentice Boys, Orangemen, True Blues and Sons of England Were Present

To commemorate the anniversary of the closing of the gates of Derry, the 'Prentice Boys of this city, accompanied by Orangemen, True Blues, Sons of England, and visiting brethren of the Orange Order, yesterday attended divine service at Holloway Street Methodist church. The turnout was a most creditable one. Headed by the regimental band, the march to and from the church was made. Rev. A. R. Sanderson, pastor of the church, a Past Grand Chaplain of the Orange Society, officiated and preached. He was assisted by the Rev. S. A. Duprau, of this city, who is a Past Grand Chaplain for Ontario East.

When all had assembled within the church the sacred edifice was filled to the doors. After the usual devotional exercises, Rev. Mr. Sanderson delivered his discourse, which was in every sense of the word a Protestant sermon and worthy of the occasion. His text was I. Corinthians xvi:13—"Quit you like men; be strong."

In his opening remarks the divine said that great interest attaches to the study of men. There were courageous and reckless men. Courage enables a man to stand taunts and jeers; will enable a man to perform noble deeds. Reckless men will perform deeds regardless of the consequences. All the world despises what is termed a reckless or dare-devil man, but the world admires the man who has the courage to do what he considers is right and is his duty. All the great monuments of the world were erected to commemorate the lives of courageous men, men who died in the performance of courageous acts and did their duty. Such a life he coveted for every individual. Courage is energetic. A couraegous man is not indolent. The rev. speaker then referred to the charge of the Light Brigade, of the noble six hundred who, though some one had blundered, rode into the very jaws of death. They were courageous men, ready to do duty. Englishmen and others who are connected with the British Empire are just as courageous and ready for the call of duty. Britain's sons are as brave today as they ever were. No loafer can be a courageous man. No man could belong to the societies represented and be a loafer. An army of loafers would be an army without courage. The world today needs strong and courageous men, men who are fearless to measures and principles rather than to be bound together by any party ties. The rev. gentleman then spoke in regard to the governments of the country, referring to the fact that we must have a government that will give us good laws, and a righteous administration. He spoke of Ontario and of bilingual schools, which, if retained by any Government would mean its downfall. There were many politicians who measure party rather than principle. What we want is men to say "I am not a Conservative or a Reformer, but I stand for religious principles. The Orange Order is not a political society. The only political society was the Roman Catholic Church. The preacher then referred quite extensively to the closing of the gates of Derry, and what it meant. The siege of Derry was a terrible affair, but those behind the gates were men who had the courage of their convictions, and against tremendous odds, even starvation, resisted the invasion of the foe. Thirteen young men seized the key of the gate, locked the gate, and their cry was "No surrender," and they did not surrender. Protestantism today is what it is because of what courageous men have done in its behalf. In speaking of education, the rev. speaker said that we have in Ontario a compulsory law of education for the young; but not so in Quebec. We want more men of courage. God give us men whom the spoils of office will not mar, who will live above party. We want men who can say no to every suggestion of wrong and say yes when yes should be said.

One of the sublimest things is the spirit of brotherhood. It costs something to be a true brother. We want honest and true men. There were two very important matters to be considered in this province, namely, the bilingual school and the temperance question. He was not now speaking politically, but since Sir James Whitney had came into power he had been courageous along these lines. Sir James Whitney had given us more temperance legislation than any other premier. Banish the bar was not so much what the Methodist church wants, as total prohibition. Until we can have that let us hold what we have got. The three-fifths clause was a good one. Sir James Whitney has now got to say that all bilingual schools must go, and when he says that, they will go. In concluding the discourse, Rev. Mr. Sanderson impressed upon all present the necessity of living a righteous life of nobility and character. Love God, our fellow men and country. Be men of courage strong in character and above all, be true to the church of your choice.

During the service Miss Moran sang "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," and the choir rendered the anthem "O Lord, How Manifold are Thy Works." The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Morton.

ENGLISH MILITANTS USE WHIP ON PROMINENT PHYSICIAN

Dr. A. C. Y. Pearson, Medical Officer, Assaulted by Militants —Attack Made as Protest Against Treatment to Woman Prisoner

LONDON, Aug. 9—A group of militant suffragettes armed with horse whips today assaulted Dr. Allan Campbell Pearson, the medical officer of Holloway Jail, as he was entering the prison gates.

The attack was made as a protest against the treatment in the jail of Miss May Richardson, while undergoing a sentence of three months for breaking windows. Miss Richardson alleged that the doctor had threatened to deal with the militant sffragettes in such a way as to make them physical and mental wrecks, after which they would be confined in lunatic asylums.

Fire in Front Street Apartments

On Saturday evening at a few minutes after nine o'clock, the fire brigade was called out.

From some cause a fire started in in the tenement apartments in the block owned by Mr. D. R. Leavens, situated on the East side of Front street near McAnnany street. Fortunately the blaze had not gained much headway and was soon extinguished. It was in the second story of the building, beneath which are places of business. Mrs. Serson Mountenay occupied one apartment and Mr. J. Argent the other. The damage to the building will probably be repaired for $100. Water did some damage to the kitchen of the Empire Cafe, which was beneath. The loss is covered by insurance. When the fire broke out, some children were asleep in the aparement, and these were carried out by Messrs. Robert Day and W. Dumesnil. It is not known how the fire originated.

Colored Man Victim of Drowning Accident

A peculiar drowning accident occurred at Prescott from the steamer Kingston, yesterday, with a colored man from Philadelphia, known on board as "the baker," for the victim. It is the custom at Prescott to remain an hour in port, and "the baker," deciding to indulge in a swim, was dared to go for a stick some distance out, for which he headed, but, presumably, being taken with cramps because of his heated body entering the chilly water, he sank, and was drowned before assistance could be rendered. It seems "the baker" had a presentiment that he was to meet his death by drowning, which he communicated to the cook of the steamer. "Why so?" queried the latter. "I had a dream dat I drown, and nebber come back." And thus it proved.

In case you fail to put your best foot forward when you have a chance, you may feel like usinng it to kick yourself later.

FORESEE BIG SCANDAL IN BRITISH ADMIRALTY

Parliamentary Hints Report at Possibility of Irregularities in Armor and Armament Department Comparable to Krupp Revelations

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Several parliamentary reports recently have hinted at the possibility of a scandal in the Armor and Armament Department of the British Navy comparable to the Krupp revelations in Germany. The latest word in the matter is the report of the select comittee on the estimates of which Sir F. Bambury is chairman, advising the Government to carefully consider the question of "trade rings" which involve difficulties in obtaining competitive bids for armor plate and gun mounts.

The report ends with the significant suggestion that in regard to inspection of contract work the committee considers it advisable for on officer to be retained in the same place for more than four or five years, unless for urgent public reasons.

CUNARD LINE ENGINEERS ON STRIKE.

Liverpool, Aug. 10.— Two hundred engineers and fitters of the Cunard liner Lusitania, have gone on strike at the Liverpool docks, over a dispute with the boilermakers. Forty engineers of the Mauretania also went on strike.

Officials of the Cunard Line say this trouble will not interfere with the sailing of the two vessels.

Dwelling and Barn Burned at Trenton

A fire occurred in the town of Trenton on Saturday, resulting in the destruction of a dwelling with the greater portion of its contents and a barn adjoining. The fire broke out in the house from some cause not known and the flames communicated to the barn. The premises were occupied by a family named Whitley, who had considerable of their contents destroyed. Mrs. Ridley was the owner of the buildings. Her loss is covered by insurance, while Mr. Whitley's loss is partially covered by insurance.

Gooderham, Toronto, was appointed Lady of Grace. The principal event of the Congress of Medicine to-day was the address on pathology by Professor Ehrlich. Doctor Pirie, Montreal, spoke in the section of radiology. Professor McTaggart discussed the teaching of forensic medicine. Dr. Nagie, Toronto, spoke on new anasthetic methods.

The Canadian teachers yesterday visited Portsmouth Dockyard, including an inspection of Nelson's Victory and modern Dreadnoughts.

Lindsay Man Has Newspaper 113 Years Old

LINDSAY, Aug. 9.—Mr. Fred McGaghey, Lindsay street, who is a collector of curios and antique articles, picked up an American newspaper in his peregrinations through the country which he prizes very much. The paper is entitled The Ulster County Gaeztte, and was published at Kingston, N.Y., Ulster County, by Samuel Frier & Son, in the year 1800, which leaves the journal 113 years old. The paper is dated January 4th, 1800, and contains four pages of four column matter, and has a dimension of 14 inches by 20.

One of the leading articles in that issue is several columns concerning the death of General George Washington. The paper is in mourning, and a lengthy account of the first President during his life is given. The pall-bearers of Washington were: Colonels Sims, Ramsay, Payne, Gilpin, Marsteller and Gilpin. On the ornament at the head of the coffin were inscribed the words Surge ad Judicum, and on a middle plate Gloria Deo. On a silver plate were incribed the name General George Washington, departed this life on the 14th December, 1799, aged 68 years.

A sale notice contains the following information: "For sale, the one-half of a sawmill, with a convenient place for building, lying in the Town of Rochester (the present city). By the mill is an inexhaustible supply of pine wood; also for a sale a stout, active, healthy negro wench. Any person inclined to purchase may know the particulars by applying to John Schoonmaker, Jr., at Rochester. Dated Nov. 13th, 1799."

Peter Ten Broeck was sheriff of Rochester, N.Y., at that time, and the currency was all in pounds, shillings and pence. There were no nickles or dimes. The printing office bought rags and ashes, for which cash was given.

It takes a woman to believe things that are unbelievable.

A BIG MANUFACTURER'S BUSINESS TONIC.

Discussing advertising, a manufacturer of one of the best known soaps in the country said:

"We plan to run all the time to the limit of our factories. We have the entire country blocked out on sale charts, and know what the sales of our soap should be in each section every day in the year.

"If our sales lag in any spot, we immediately begin advertising in the daily newspapers, and soon our sales go on swimmingly again.

"There is no doubt but we could double or treble our present sales by a newspaper campaign all over the United States.

But we have established our soap. We have all the business we want—all we need is to hold what we have.

"We find daily newspaper advertising on the lines I have indicated the best tonic we can apply when a tonic is needed."

This manufacturer uses mediums of all sorts, but when he wants actual demand to bring immediate sales he uses the daily newspapers.

Medicine Dance Banned.

NETT LAKE, Minn., Aug. 10.—The grand lodge medicine dance of Chippewa Indians at the Bois Fort Reservation and Nett Lake agency has been put under the ban. This was the decision made by L. F. Michael, United States inspector.

It is the custom of the Indians during the dance to give away practically everything they own. They are thus kept impoverished while the medicine men flourish.

Gambling has also aided in retarding the progress of the Indians and this has been forbidden.

The Indian doctors exert an influence so strong over the members of the band, that they will not go to the agency physicians even when seriously ill.

PRESIDENT WANTS FAIR PLAY

Pres. Wilson Explains to Senate That His Special Representative in Mexico Is Instructed to Bring Pressure to Bear on Mexican Ruler to Make Good His Promises of an Election.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—Two hours of conference tonight between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and the senate foreign relations committee brought about no change in the attitude of the administration toward Mexico.

The president took the senators into his confidence far enough to outline the following:

"That John Lind, his special envoy to Mexico City, does not bear any solution of the present situation, but goes to continue this government's effort to induce Provisional President Huerta to redeem his promises for free and constitutional elections; that under no circumstances does the administration propose to recognize the Huerta government; that Mr. Lind has gone to Mexico city to be the "eyes and ears" of the Washington administration on the ground and to explain the attitude of this government when he has fully familiarized himself with the situation; that by withdrawing Ambassador Wilson and sending Mr. Lind the president planned to have a man on the ground who was in sympathy with the administration here and was in no sense a factor in the situation in Mexico City."

These policies and suggestions of the president and Secretary Bryan came out in general discussion. It was made clear that the purpose of the conference was to establish more frank and intimate relations between the senate and the administration in the development of the Mexican policy, and in the furtherance of this idea the president talked freely and answered many pointed questions.

Senators who expected to be informed of a definite plan or a formal message Mr. Lind might be bearing to the Mexican government, were disappointed. The president told them that upon the arrival of Mr. Lind in Mexico City there would be transmitted thru the charg d'affaires at Mexico City as well as to the foreign governments generally, an explanation of Mr. Lind's mission.

This explanation, as developed at tonight's conference, is expected to be a reaffirmation of the American government's attitude of the last few weeks, favoring efforts to secure a temporary cessation of hostilities in Mexico so that constitutional elections may be held.

It was reported after the conference that Mr. Lind's movements will be left largely to his discretion after he has talked to Wm. Bayard Hale and other friends of the administration familiar with the situation in the Mexican capital.

TREATY IS SIGNED

Peace Pact Between Warring Balkan States Concluded.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The peace treaty between the Balkan states was signed at 10.30 o'clock this morning.

In honor of the occasion the city was decorated with flags, guns were fired, bells were rung and the bands played.

A solemn Te Deum in the cathedral at noon was attended by King Charles, Queen Elizabeth (Carmen Sylva) and the members of the royal family and the delegates to the peace conference. King Charles conferred high decorations on all the delegates except the Bulgarians, who declined to receive them.

The peace treaty provides that the Roumanian army shall evacuate Bulgarian territory in 15 days after its signature, and the Servian and Greek armies in three days. It also provides for arbitration by Belgium, Holland or Switzerland, in the event of a disagreement over the delimitation of the new froneier. Bulgaria engages in the treaty to begin demobilization immediately.

Free Man After 34 Years.

THOMASTON, Me., Aug. 10.—Samuel B. Haynes of Detroit walked out of the prison gates, having served his sentence of thirty-four years for the murder of James L. Robbins, a policeman, at Rockland in 1879. At midnight his sister, Mrs. F. H. Rogers of Detroit, telephoned the prisoner that Governor Haines had pardoned him.

"The battle is won," Haynes told Warden Ham, "but I hate to leave."

Outside the prison he held a reception for a big crowd who knew him as a model prisoner.

"I am willing to forgive and forget," he said. "The prison has been a good thing for me, but I feel that I have paid my bill to society. I have been in prison since I was seventeen years old, but I have spent the better part of my life here trying to be useful. There is no failure in such a life as that."

SYLVIA TRIES AGAIN

Intrepid Suffragette Leads Forces Against Asquith.

Third Attempt of Miss Pankhurst and Her Army to Raid Downing Street and Capture the Premier's House Is Frustrated by Police and the Leader Herself Is Captured.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The third attempt of the suffragettes under command of Sylvia Pankhurst, to take Premier Asquith's house in Downing street by storm failed today when the militant leader was captured by a cordon of police thrown across Whitehall after a stiff fight, in which the police used their clubs.

The trouble began after a mass meeting held under the auspices of the free speech defence committee, which was called to demand the unconditional release of George Lansbury, former Socialist member of the house of commons, who was sentenced July 30 to three months' imprisonment for making inflammatory speeches, but who was released Aug. 2 under the "cat and mouse bill" while on a hunger strike.

Miss Pankhurst had refused an invitation to make a speech at this meeting when informed that she would not be permitted to urge her hearers to march upon Downing street. The free speech speakers today advised the crowd not to attack the premier's residence, but at the close of their meeting Miss Pankhurst, true to her promise made last week, mounted the plinth of the Nelson column and in fiery words ordered her sympathizers to follow her.

Hatless, her hair bound close to her head, the young militant leader started down Whitehall surrounded by several women carrying the Women's Social and Political flag, surmounted by a red liberty cap and preceded by a flying wedge of dockmen and other husky east-enders. The squads of police in Trafalgar square allowed the procession to leave the square, and then fell in behind. The suffragette sympathizers saw the reason for this strategical move when they found a battle line of heavy policemen drawn across Whitehall at the Horse Guards, the office of the inspector-general of corps.

The militants attacked this line with such dash and courage that a few of them penetrated the first cordon, where the fight became so fierce that the police used their clubs. Reserves of police then rushed up and Sylvia Pankhurst and five other women and nine men were arrested and taken to the police station in taxicabs.

Disheartened at the fate of their leader, the mob sullenly dispersed. A number of persons were injured when the police dispersed the mob.

Miss Cook, who carried a suffrage banner during the fight, said tonight that Miss Pankhurst was badly injured during the melee.

Going in for Airships.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The ministry has given its approval to a scheme for the wide development of the aeroplane to co-operate with the navy. M. Bardin, the minister of marine, will ask parliament when it convenes, for an immediate appropriation of $2,750,000 for this purpose.

It is believed that battleships and large cruisers will be able during a battle, to use aeroplanes to throw explosives as powerful as those now used in torpedoes, and French naval designers therefore are taking into account the necessity for additional overhead protection from aerial torpedoes.

New Era in Balkans.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 10—(Can Press.)—A gala dinner to the peace delegates was given at the royal palace tonight. King Charles in a stirring speech congratulated the representatives of the various states on the conclusion of peace, which, he said, had involved great sacrifices, and hoped that a new era of mutual confidence and prosperity would arise and make all forget the sad past.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 9.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross continent 8 to 12 and 13 to 17; warm waves 7 to 11 and 12 to 16; cool waves 10 to 14 and 15 to 19. Great extremes of temperatures will result, very warm near Aug. 8 and unusually cool near 12. These being the dates that the warm and cool wave will cross meridian 90, eastward bound.

Here is where the corn crop will find it's test, and the result is in doubt. Dry, hot weather has the right of way and the final result is problematical. Friends of this weather bureau have been advised to buy and hold grain and cotton, particularly oats and cotton, because we believed the crop-weather of 1913 would cause these farm products to go to higher prices.

Grain and cotton have largely fluctuated in prices throughout the season and without any real cause. The big speculators manipulated the prices. But our advice has proven good, and those who bought and held grain and cotton on our advice early in the crop season now have good profits.

We continue to advise farmers not to sell and advise those who have bought to hold, at least till the end of August, because we believe August weather will make higher prices.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about August 17, cross Pacific slope by close of 18, great central valleys 19 to 21, eastern sections 22. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about August 17, great central valleys 19, eastern sections 21. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about August 20, great central valleys 22, eastern sections 24. With this disturbance the temperatures will turn upward following the comparatively cool weather that followed the last disturbance and the last half of August is expected to be unusually warm and dry. Not far from August 12 showers may be expected.

The most severe storms of August will come with this last described storm wave, but no very destructive storms are expected. These storms may be expected along parallel of latitude 40. The Baltimore storm, July 29, was in time for our last storm period of July.

A new chief of the U. S. Weather Bureau has been appointed and the comments on the appointment are generally favorable. Professor Marvin is credited with being guided by good purposes and that is the most important feature in the character of any man. This task is enormous. The weather bureau is better fitted for commerce than for agriculture, and it should be in the Department of Commerce and Labor. You cannot pitch hay with a rake. The department of agriculture needs a long range crop-weather bureau, while the short, or 24 hour forecasts, are better suited to commerce. The two kinds of weather forecasts have very little relation and they should be separated.

The U. S. Weather Bureau is running after strange gods. It is looking to the sun to find the cause of our weather changes. Better look to the moon and planets. It will require 50 years to compile a record of the supposed variableness of the sun's output of heat before any progress can be made along that line, and that is too long to wait.

A party was seen to run down the footbridge gangway immediately after, and a description of the person was given the police. David Eggleton, a man passed the three score years, was arrested yesterday as a vagrant. Before the magistrate to-day he claimed he had been working for a farmer in Marmora and was desirious of returning. He was given the opportunity of doing so.

LEFT CART BEHIND

The police have been informed that when the Sells-Floto circus left they inadvertently left behind a small pony cart. Although members of the force have made every effort to locate it they have been unable to do so. If the party who took it is found it will no doubt prove to be an expensive affair.

OFF FOR ENGLAND

The Rev. and Mrs Robert Wallace and their two boys Hudson and Reginald, left this morning for England. Before their leave-taking at the Marchmont Home they were presented with a purse of money subscribed by many of the old boys and girls, as a small token of their love and regard for them. They sail at daylight from Montreal by S. S. "Virginian."

A BAD TRIO

The police yesterday afternoon apprehended three boys who claim Toronto as their home, and who, from their own admission, are bad boys. Their names are James Smith, aged 15; W. Lawrie, aged 15, and Lionel Gays, aged 14. They had in their possession a watch, two new caps, some combs, and a few other trinkets which were stolen from Eaton's and Knox's store in Toronto, and from a store in Port Hope where they visited. The trio were this morning brought up before Magistrate Masson and all admitted to His Worship they were bad boys. All have appeared before Commissioner Starr of the Queen City, and two stated they had been at the Industrial School at Mimico. The fathers of two of the boys are dead, and their mothers are compelled to work for a living. The third boy, Smith, stated that his father was a shoemaker. The magistrate after taking their statement and addresses, remanded them to jail for a week on a charge of vagrancy, in order that their parents might be communicated with. The boys from appearance, were evdiently not the least bit concerned or repentant of their actions.

AN APPECIATION

A prominent citizen of Washington, D. C., who is sojourning at the Royal Muskoka Hotel, Lake Rosseau, writes to the Grand Trunk, through whom he made his arrangements, as follows:—

"I am well pleased with this place, which is just what I was looking for, climate superb, beautiful views, nice bathing, everything else satisfactory. Thanks for recommending it. The Royal Muskoka this year is popular, and everyone seems to be enjoying themselves."

During May and June, 1913, more live foxes were shipped through Saskatoon, Sask., than for many years, over $100,000.00 worth passed through this city inside of one month.

11 live beavers from Algonquin National Park of Ontario, were recently sent to the Riverdale Park Zoo, Toronto, beavers being so plentiful at Algonquin Park as to require thinning out. Toronto sent 6 of the beavers to Dublin, Ireland, in exchange for 2 lion cubs valued at $500.00. The Dublin Zoo is noted for the fine lion cubs it raises.

While on a trip to Algonquin Park in May 1st, Dr. Skinner of Guelph, caught, among other good ones, a grey trout measuring 33" and weighing 17 pounds.

City Being Invaded By Oddfellows

Every preparation is being made for the great influx of visitors which will be in the city this week owing to the Grand Lodge the of I. O. O. F. Society being held here, also the Grand Encampment of Patriarch Militants and the Rebecca Grand Lodge. To-day many arrived in the city upon incoming trains. To-morrow morning at an early hour, a special train will arrive here from Toronto, having on board many Canton and subordinate members. The Grand Encampment will meet to-morrow as will also the Rebecca lodge.

The Grand Lodge of the I. O. O. F. meets on Thursday and Friday in the City Hall.

Wednesday will be a public holiday and there will be a grand celebration under the auspices of the Society. Canton drills for valuable trophies will be one of the chief features.

Soldiers To Gather On Old Battlefield

About 1,500 Will be at Crysler's Farm Centenary, August 27 and 28.

KINGSTON, Aug. 9.—Arrangements are being made for the celebration on Aug. 27th and 28th of the 100th anniversary of the battle of Crysler's Farm. Col. T. E. B. Hemmings, who is to be in command of the military part of the celebration, will leave Tuesday for Morrisburg where he will meet Mr. A. Broder, M. P., and will complete arrangements. The following units of the 3rd division will be present: The G. G. F. G's, Ottawa; the 41st of Brockville, the 43rd of Ottawa, the 56th of Prescott, the 59 of Cornwall, and the 2nd and 3rd Fied Batteries of Ottawa. It is expected there will be about 1,500 soldiers present.

The order of the celebration will likely be as follows: The troops will form a hollow square around the monument on the field, and fire a general salute. Then the civil part, including speeches by some of the most prominent men in Canada, wil be held. The troops will then march past and advance in review order. It is expected that there will be a salute of 21 guns by the 2nd and 23rd Field Batteries of Ottawa. There will be no regiments from Kingston.

Transparent Bodies.

Perfectly transparent bodies are only visible by virtue of nonuniform illumination, and in uniform illumination they become absolutely invisible.

Blindfold.

Nine persons out of ten would probably give the derivation of blind as coming directly from blind and fold from the practice of folding a cloth round the eyes, as in the game of blind man's buff. The word has, however, nothing to do with fold, but means felled or struck blind and might be written blindfelled.

GEOLOGISTS IN CANADA

The presence in Canada of a large number of famous geologists from all parts of the world is an event of particular interest at the present time. No country in the world is more in the public eye by reason of the extent and riches of her mineral resources than Canada.

As the sum of human knowledge increases the work of the geologist becomes more important and more interesting. Canada's outstanding position as a mineral-producing country is due in great measure to the skillful exploitation of her resources under the supervision of trained geologists from the great Canadian universities. Thus business men and patriots owe a debt of gratitude to the geologist and his profession. At Montreal the other day Professor Beregat, of the University of Kongsberg, said:

"It is in the highest degree fortunate that the exploitation of the mineral wealth of Canada has from the beginning been supervised by Canadian geologists, among whom the representatives of McGill University have played the most distinguished part. They have been confronted with magnificent geological problems, which they have never failed to illuminate in an admirable way."

The Canadian people may well be confident that the geologists who are visiting this country shall enjoy themselves. For the geologist is essentially a student who looks for and finds his "sermons in stones." In the proper development of a new country the geologist has an important interest and place. If he does not discover, he directs the development of minerals. He is a prospector equipped with scientific tools. The world's geologists have paid Canada a welcome compliment in flocking to her shores, over her plains and into her mines. May the tapping of their hammers be the only "knocking" they feel called upon to do.

BALKAN PEACE

The terms of peace to which the Balkan states finally have agreed give to Bulgaria virtually all the territory which Bulgarian troops actually occupied in the war with Turkey. The Bulgarian detachment which reached Salonika never was in control of the city and never was needed there for operations against the Turks. Salonika remains a Greek city, but Bulgaria gets an outlet to the Aegean, which will be of great advantage to her future development.

On the other hand, Bulgaria has to surrender to Roumania some territory which has been Bulgarian ever since 1878. Moreover, the Turks have reoccupied Adrianople and Bulgaria may have to conset to let them retain that city with the portion of Thrace which connects it with Constantinople. In that case the new Bulgarian boundaries will be much the same that were offered at the London conference last January.

The next thing to be feared is jealousy between Greece and Servia. Greece is getting a big increase in territory. It is consolidating under a single flag a greater area than ever was ruled by either Athens or Sparta in the time of their greatest power. Servia, however, appears still to be left an inland power with little to show for all her struggles of the last year except some additional mountains in the interior of the peninsula.

MUST BUILD THE SHIPS

Recent utterances in England, by responsible statesmen of both parties, make it abundantly plain that the already overwhelming naval expenditure of the British Government will have to be augmented in the immediate future by an amount sufficient to offset the loss of the three Canadian dreadnoughts. Lord Selborne puts the matter with what may be regarded by some Canadians as almost painful frankness, when he says that "suspense of the Canadian ships has made it necessary for the First Lord to reconsider his policy and expedite the construction of three ships," but he is really not saying much more than the First Lord has said, with much diplomatic vagueness, in his own speeches. A section of the British press is advocating the immediate laying down of three capital ships, "to compensate for the three hypothetical Canadian dreadnoughts"; and the Daily Telegraph thinks that Britain will probably be faced next year with naval estimates amounting to fifty million pounds.

The Hamilton Herald argues that women should not be given the vote until a majority of them want it. Well—supposing the franchise were taken away from men where a majority of them did not think well enough of it to exercise it? At Sudbury, Ontario, last week a vote was taken on a matter of municipal interest. Upwards of one thousand ratepayers were entitled to vote. Exactly 184 voted.

KILLED BY A SHARK

Martin Hoyt, of Manchester, New Hampshire, in a letter to the New York Sun on the question of whether sharks are really dangerous or not, says:

In the summer of 1862 I was serving on board the U.S.S. Kearsarge and we were at Algerias, Spain, near Gibraltar, where the Confederate steamer Sumter lay under the guns of the fortress. It was our mission to watch the Sumter night and day to prevent her from getting out on the high sea.

One hot Sunday afternoon all our boats but one were ashore with a goodly number of officers and men who had gone ashore to witness a bull fight. Shortly after they had left the ship the quarter master, Charles Butts an old whaleman, reported what he thought might be a sunfish or shark lazily disporting itself in the waves near the ship. Suddenly the old whaling instinct came to him and he got permission to take our only remaining cutter with a volunteer crew and shark irons, and they were soon away from the ship in pursuit of the big fish.

About this time some of the men wished to take a plunge in the sea, and after getting permission from Deck Officer Danforth, the port swinging boom was lowered overboard. One of the first men to jump into the sea was Jacob Barth, of East Boston. As an expert swimmer and diver, he jumped into the sea from the starboard cathead, making a great splash and commotion in the water. The boat was now several hundred yards from the ship.

Suddenly a great cry of "A shark!" went up from the men in the water and they all struggled as hard as they could to get to the boom.

One poor fellow, Tibbetts, a Maine boy, was pursued and caught by the fish and carried out of sight toward the bottom. The water there is very clear, and one can see down to a great depth, but not to the bottom. I should say the fish was sixteen feet long, and of a bluish tint. I saw him seize the man, and to do so he must have bitten him. The man's white body ranged alongside the dark body of the fish going toward the bottom at an angle of about 45 degrees, striking with his fist at the fish, and when last seen was perhaps thirty or forty feet from the surface, a sight one will not soon forget. The men and officers of the Kearsarge considered this big fish to be a man eating shark, and so also did the natives of that locality.

SAVING THE PENNIES

John D. Rockefeller is reported recently to have advised a party of teachers, in reply to a question as to what hope any of them had to build up a fortune, to "Save your pennies." If every wage earner in America saved his extra pennies for a normal lifetime, the total accumulation would look very meagre compared with the fortunes of the oil king. It is not in that way that the great magnates grow. Saving pennies never made J. D. rich. The Grain Growers' Guide, commenting on this matter, says: "Suppose Father Adam were still living and had put 100 pennies under the mattress, down cellar, or in some secret cave every day of his life for the 4,014 years before Christ, and the 1,913 years since, he would have by now, including the extra pennies saved on leap years, the sum of $2,158,745. Some of our made in Canada plutocrats, bankers, manufacturers, railway magnates and others would sniff at Adam's paltry $2,000,000."

Apart from the unimportant incident that the Western journal makes no allowance for the fact that the scholarship of today places Adam very much farther back in the past than Ussher's table, which it follows, it has established the point that no mere saving of pennies can make a man wealthy. It is not by saving their own pennies that magnates grow, but by grasping the pennies and dollars that other people are trying to save—grasping them through some monopoly, or through some tariff bounty or special privilege. The plutocratic and thrifty Scotchman who is groaning under the tyranny of affluence, and ashamed to die rich, often turns aside in his preachments to advise penny saving; but the millions he is trying to dispose of were not accumulated in that way.

The secret of Mr. Morgan's success was not saving his pennies. He will be remembered longest for the part he played in the formation of a billion dollar steel trust. Ten great manufacturing firms and a big iron ore company were brought together, with some railroad and steamship companies added. The actual visible assets of the conglomerate were $300,000,000; but stocks were issued. That is to say, $1,000,000,000 of capitalized water was injected into the concern. The money of the Morgan estate and that which Carnegie is trying to dispose of, consists very largely of this water which, with the monopoly, enables them to collect the pennies from every industry in the country. Monopolists may die, but monopolies never die; they grow and flourish to collect the pennies that the people try to save. In spite of that, every man ought to save all the pennies he can.

The Governments of the respective Provinces state that many thousand men will be required for this year's harvest These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Wealthy Farmer Asked to Hand Over $5,000—Otherwise Farm Buildings Would be Dynamited

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 8.—George Draper, twenty-three years old, who says he resides on Rebecca street, Hamilton, is under arrest at Dundas, charged with attempting to extort money.

Draper went to Robert Bennett, a wealthy farmer, near Carlisle, yesterday and handed him a letter which said that if he did not give the bearer $5,000 his barn would be blown up by dynamite. Draper said he had been sent there by another man, and Bennett, when he got over his scare, made an excuse to go and get the money. Instead he loaded a rifle and forced Draper to throw up his hands. Then he called a county constable and took the man to Dundee.

Draper, when searched, had in his possession, another letter in different handwriting, which gave the police a clue to the other man.

The prisoner, according to Bennett, said that a lot of other wealthy farmers would have to pay over large sums or their barns would be dynamited.

BLIND LEADERS OF THE BLIND

These Words Apply to Pastor Russell and Others.

Ministers Have Deceived the People Respecting the Bible Teaching—But They Were Themselves Deceived, Hence Not Wilfully Guilty—The Duty of the Hour is to Undeceive the Public and to Remove the Slander From God's Word and Character—Courage Necessary — Otherwise Many Will Fall Into the Ditch of Unbelief—The Educated Are There Already.

London, Aug. 10.—Pastor Russell addressed the London Tabernacle congregation twice to-day. We report one of his discourses from the text, "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."—Matthew 15: 14.

The Pastor opened his discourse with the words: How blind we have all been—stupidly blind—in respect to our Heavenly Father's words! We have believed human traditions, which we ought not to have believed, and left unbelieved the Bible teachings, which we ought to have believed, until the Church as a whole has become thoroughly puzzled in respect to everything religious. I am not judging any particular person or sect. The matter is so general as not to need specification.

All have sinned, all are out of the way of Truth, lost in the fog of superstition and error, guided thither, as St. Paul foretold, by "doctrines of demons." (1 Timothy 4: 1.) There is no time for faultfinding. The duty of the hour is to get right—to get back into harmony with God, and to obtain the true light on His Word that will restore Christian faith, love, devotion.

Blaming nobody except the Arch-Deceiver, Satan, we find, as the Master predicted, that the whole world has been made drunk by the false doctrines which Satan gradually introduced during the Dark Ages—"The inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication." (Revelation 17: 2.) Some were crazy drunk, to the extent of persecuting others; some were stupidly drunk.

Like drunken people, we mixed up and confused the good and the bad. In one breath we told of the love of God—His mercy, gentleness, patience—and how all of His children must become copies of His Divine character. Then in another breath we painted this God of Love as sitting down, before creating humanity, and deliberately, with fore-knowledge, arranging that thousands of millions should be born in sin, misshapen in iniquity; and that after a few short years, full of trouble, all of them with only rare exceptions, should be turned over to fireproof demons, to be tortured through all eternity.

When a soberer thought would suggest that the fire would destroy them, that the torture could not last more than a few hours, then a drunken thought inspired by the Devil came—that God delighted in the torture of His creatures, and that all those thousands of millions would have life injected into them by the Almighty Himself, the great Fountain of Life, so as to prevent them from ever ceasing to be, ceasing to suffer—so as to perpetuate a great chamber of horrors such as no human mind could imagine. Dante pictured the Inferno most horribly, that eternal torture chamber, over whose gates were the words, "Who enters here abandons hope."

Satan's Great Success.

The Master styled Satan the father of lies. His first great lie misled our first parents and murdered them, by leading Mother Eve to disbelieve God's Word, "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." (Genesis 2: 17.) Satan contradicted the Almighty, saying, "Ye shall not surely die"—cannot die, ye are immortal, your life is a perpetual one.

Satan has since impressed this falsehood upon the whole world, and has largely succeeded in deceiving all. When in fulfilment of God's Word people die, Satan has brought in the deceptive theory that they really have become more alive than ever. With the theory that nobody can die came the other theory—that when they seem to die they merely go somewhere else to live.

Thus, contrary to the Scriptures, the whole world has come to believe that at the moment of death the saintly go to Heaven and all the remainder, more alive than ever, go either to Hell or Purgatory. The plain, common-sense statement of the Bible that all—both good and bad, old and young—go to Sheol, Hades, to the tomb, is ignored. The Bible teaching, that the redemptive work of Jesus assured all a resurrection from the dead, is made null and void by Satan's declaration that nobody is dead.

Immortality in Christ.

The Bible does indeed hold out for the Church the hope of immortality; but it is only a hope, not already a possession. Man was not created unqualifiedly immortal. The life given him was only a tentative one. If he would use it in harmony with his Creator's commands, he might enjoy it forever, as indicated in the words, "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth" with your posterity, and subdue the earth as ye have need of it. As your posterity increases, extend the bounds of Eden, until it will include the whole earth.

But that the life was a tentative one, a conditional one, is indicated by the threat that disobedience would bring death—the cessation of life. Thus, when the sin had been committed, God declared, "Accursed is the ground for thy sake. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, until thou return to the ground; for dust thou art, and unto dust thou return."—Genesis 3: 17, 19.

The whole world knew that it was dying; and not even a suggestion of a reversal of the curse was made up to the time of Abraham. Then, for the first time, God declared it His purpose to bless all the families of the earth, which implied the rolling away of the curse. This blessing, the rolling away of the curse, was to come through Abraham's Seed. "In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." St. Paul declares that this Seed is The Christ—Jesus the Head, and the Church His Body.—Galatians 3: 16, 29.

But the Apostle explains that even this statement to Abraham was more or less indistinct; it did not bring the matter clearly forward and give positive assurance of everlasting life. St. Paul declares that this was accomplished through Jesus, more than 4,000 years after the fall. He declares that Christ brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel.—2 Tim. 1: 10.

Now we may see that this promise of immortality, deathlessness, death-proof existence, is a very much grander one than we ever supposed. Immortality is a quality of life which thus far is possessed only by Jehovah God and by His Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Nothing in the Scriptures indicates that even the angels possess death-proof bodies. On the contrary, the Bible teaches that Satan, one of the very highest angels, is to be destroyed. This shows us that this immortal, death-proof quality is not possessed by the angels. Their everlasting life depends upon the Divine covenant that, so long as they are in harmony with God, He is pleased to perpetuate their lives in a most joyful condition.

The Bible assures us that only the elect Church will ever attain the immortal quality peculiar to the Father and to the Son. This promise of "glory, honor, immortality," is made merely to the saintly Church, and is to be attained in the First Resurrection by those found worthy. "On such the Second Death hath no power."—Revelation 20: 6.

But our Jesus not merely brought to light immortality as God's gift to the Church. The Gospel of Jesus brings to light a hope of everlasting life to the non-elect world—to so many of them as, under the light of the knowledge of the glory of God during the coming Millennial Age, will fully respond and be of those who will bow the knee and confess with the tongue the great King, and be uplifted to human perfection by the arrangements of His Kingdom. For these God has the same everlasting life that He has already given to the angelic hosts.

This everlasting life of the future is usually styled immortality; for it will be a deathless life—a life free from the imperfections of the dying condition. But the immortality of the Bible, which is for the Church alone, is separate and distinct, and elsewhere described as "the Divine nature."—2 Peter 1: 14.

As We Now Sober Up.

This Bible presentation of the matter—that God's proposition is life or death—we are beginning to see is most reasonable, most logical. Furthermore, His proposition is that when His Plan will have been completed, none shall have life at all who will not have it in perfection. He desires not to have mental, moral and physical cripples and degenerates in His Kingdom. He will give all the fullest opportunity for recovery through the Redeemer and the Messianic Kingdom. All who will not be obedient to the Divine arrangement will be everlastingly destroyed, as thorns and thistles are destroyed, and as uncontrollable wild beasts are destroyed. This is the Divine Word on the subject.—2 Peter 2: 12; Isaiah 33: 12.

Thus eventually God will have a clean universe in which His Will shall be done on earth even as now it is done in Heaven. Eventually every knee will bow, and no one need any longer say, "Know thou the Lord"; for all shall know Him, and love Him, too. Then the darkness, ignorance, superstition, which has blinded us will be past. Then our great Creator will be seen to be our very best Friend, the Father of Mercies, the God of all Grace. Perhaps, indeed, we shall love righteousness and appreciate our God all the more because of the previous slanders of the Adversary, which for 6,000 years have misrepresented Him.

Undoubtedly the Divine Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power will be more clearly seen by both angels and men as the result of the Divine permission of the reign of Sin and Death. Without this permission of sin we would never realize the absolute justice of God in allowing our race to go down into death and in rescuing us in so wonderful a manner—by the sending of His Son to die for us, paying the Redemption-price of Adam's penalty, "Dying, thou shalt die." We never would have seen so clearly the height of Divine Wisdom, nor the depths of Divine Love.

Even the Power of God, manifested in the wonderful display in the heavens every night, is more wonderfully shown by reason of the permission of sin. Even the Wisdom and Power of God shown forth in the human organism will be added to by reason of the permission of sin. How so, is it asked? We reply that God's great Wisdom and Power will be manifested in the resurrection of the dead. The Church's resurrection from human nature to the Divine nature, from weakness to power, dishonor to glory, from an animal body to a spiritual body, will be a stupendous expression of Divine Power. And the fact that the mental powers—memory, character—will be carried over is beyond our comprehension.

Then comes the resurrection of the world. We are not to think of the resurrection of the bodies that have fallen into dust, as the Bible mentions nothing of the kind, and resurrection involves no such absurdities. But what the Bible does propose for the world, as well as for the Church, is the resurrection of the soul, of the being, of the intelligence. The Apostle explains that God will give to each a body as it pleases Him. The bodies provided for the Church will be of the spirit kind.

The bodies provided for the world will be of the flesh kind. Wonderful as this is, it is not all; for the human bodies that are to be restored thus by Divine Power will be the exact counterpart of the present bodies, representing the same memory, mind, will. Thus each will know himself, and will know the others with whom he was acquainted in the present life. How wonderful, how stupendous, how unbelievable, except as we are able by faith to grasp the fact of our own littleness and the Divine greatness!

True, as the Apostle tells us, not all men have this faith—not all men are able to believe what the Bible so clearly sets forth. They stagger at the great proposition. But their staggering and unbelief will not change the facts. God's Wisdom and Power will continue to operate, notwithstanding our imbecilities. Those who cannot exercise faith cannot belong to the Church class, called during the present time; for with this class faith is a paramount requirement.

Foolish Incredulity—Wise Faith.

How strange it seems that nearly everybody can be credulous of nonsense, while only a few comparatively can have faith in the true realities of the Divine promises! For instance, how few seem able to believe in the Power of God as respects a resurrection of the dead. On the contrary, how many can be credulous enough to believe that the dead are not dead—even when they see them to be dead, and their senses demonstrate that fact!

Under the delusion of Satan, mankind have come to imagine hells and purgatories, and to believe in them, although they do not have even a suspicion or a thought as to where these places are! What better proof could we have that the world for 6,000 years has been under the malevolent influence of "the Prince of the Power of the Air, who worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience?" What better proof could we have that the world has been under the influence of misleading spirits and "doctrines of demons?" — thoroughly believing Satan's false statement, "Ye shall not surely die"—ye are immortal — and thoroughly rejecting God's statement, "Thou shalt surely die." Immortality is a gift of God, and not an inherent quality. "The soul that sinneth it shall die;" "The wages of sin is death"—not eternal torment.

Patience and Sympathy Necessary.

If a number of drunken men have been in each other's company, and a few of them begin sobering up, it would behoove them to be very sympathetic with their companions still in a befuddled condition. This is our attitude. Some of us are more or less awake. Some of us have learned what real Bible study means. Some of us are getting the eyes of our understanding open and are seeing some of the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the Love of God, which surpasses all human understanding, and which we did not before see. (Ephesians 3: 19.) The graces of sympathy and patience are called for under such conditions. Those that have the Truth, that see the Truth, should not only be models of saintliness, holiness, but also models of kindness, gentleness and patience in dealing with the brethren.

God is merely biding His time, letting His will and Word and character be misunderstood by some and misrepresented by others, letting men have an experience with doing their own wills and trying their own plans and theories, that thus the lesson of sin and its tendencies and results may be clearly seen and appreciated both by angels and by men. Then the Lord will arise, and through His Anointed Son will display His Power and make known His will. He will lay righteousness to the line and justice to the plummet, and will sweep away every refuge of lies. His will shall then be done on earth, even as it done in Heaven.

Thus we see the fallacy of the circle-reasoning of those who would judge the Lord merely by their own weaknesses, and not by His Word. How grand is the view presented in the Scriptures! How wonderful the Divine Character, as presented in the Divine Plan of human salvation!

All men are to be rescued from the Adamic death penalty. All are to have a full opportunity of knowing about the Saviour—the Life-given—and of accepting Him. Then whoever willingly rejects the grace of God, and prefers sin to righteousness, will be esteemed a wicked sinner, unworthy of everlasting life. Such, the Bible says, will die the Second Death. From this there will be no redemption; for "Christ dieth no more." Hence from it there will be no resurrection. But, the horrible doctrine of eternal torment is not Biblical. It is a part of the "doctrines of demons."—1 Timothy 4: 1.

Overwork Not Responsible.

The sanitarium faced the sea, and as he walked his charges up and down the beach, the doctor said:

"You millionaire brokers all claim that it's overwork that brings you here. Well, it isn't overwork at all. The only people who get laid up from overwork are day laborers, women weavers and such like humble folk. No, no. You fellows, sitting at mahogany desks in the breeze of an electric fan, don't get haggard and nervous and hypochondriac from overwork. Your trouble is worry, gambler's worry.

"All modern business is more or less a gamble—great risks taken daily, yes, and even hourly—and your line, gentlemen, is more a gamble than less. You, as it were, don't sit in at a poker game for an evening now and then—you sit in the game for life. The nervous wrecks that modern business creates owe their condition not to work, not to good, hard work, but to the same worry and strain that sends the 10-cent-ante clerk home from the cigar store game with a white, drawn face, haggard eyes and tremulous hands."

Disagreement With a Difference.

This overhead conversation appeals to the weary one as nearly epigrammatic. The young people on the seat ahead of us in the homeward bound car the other night talked it out so loud that we couldn't help hearing it and jotting down a few notes on it.

"So," said the girl, "he said he knew me when I was a little girl!"

"He didn't say anything of the sort," contradicted the man.

"You said he did."

"I didn't."

"Why! Then what did you say?"

"I said he said he knew you when he was a boy."

That put such a wet blanket on the conversation that we were able to read our sporting extra uninterrupted for the next few blocks.

Nationalized the Cats.

When Mulai Hafid, ex-Sultan of Morocco, succeeded to the Sultanate, he found the sacred city of Fez infested with rats. Without any loss of time he at once nationalized all the cats of Morocco and issued a command that many thousands of them should be marched into Fez for service. For some time a law has existed in Hong-Kong making it compulsory to keep cats in every house, the number varying according to the size of the house.

DIDN'T TRY TO STOP JACK JOHNSON FROM BOXING

New York, Aug. 9.—If the French boxing authorities have been requested from letting Jack Johnson engage in contests in France, the request must have originated from some unofficial source, probably in the west, according to James R. Price, a member of the Nek York State Athletic Commission. Mr. Price said that so far as he knew there was no such organization as the "America Boxing Federation." The New York Commission, he explained, had a "sort of gentlemen's agreement" with the French authorities concerning the eligibiity of boxers, but that no protest against Johnson had been made by the commission.

GUNBOAT GAVE FIREMAN FLYNN FINE WHALING

New York, Aug. 9.—"Gunboat" Simth, of California, defeated Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, in the fifth round of their scheduled ten round bout last night Smith knocked Flynn down four times in the fifth round, and the referee stopped the fight to save Flynn from being knocked out. Smith weighed 183 pounds, and Flynn was five pounds heavier. In the second round Flynn tried to get close but Smith kept him at long range,(scoring point after point.) At the end of this round Smith managed to land a right hook to the head. This round and the three following were all in Smith's favor Both men he'd to their original tactics Smith boring in, while Smith tried to avoid infighting.

Iin the fifth round Flynn swung a terrific right to the ribs, sendin Smith to the ropes. The California came back with a hail of left and right jabs and hooks. Then, with a right upperdcut flush on the jaw, he knocked Flynn down for a count of eight seconds. Another right to the jaw put the fireman down again for three seconds.

Flynn arose with his face covered with blood, and Smith knocked him down with a right to the jaw, the fireman clinging to his conqueror's legs. Flynn gained his feet once more on a count of three,, but he was very wobbly,, and Smith put him to the floor in Flynn's own corner.

This was the last blow of the fight as Referee Joh stepped between the men to save Flynn from being completely knocked out.

After the bout, Gunboat Smith, teeming with victory over Fireman Jim Flynn at the Garden Athletic club before 10,000 people, issued the sweeping defi that he is ready and willing to meet Jack Johnson, Sam Lengford, "or any one in the world," for a finish fight, winner take all.

LONGBOAT NOT IN YET

Longboat, the Canadian Indian who was such a sensation as an amateur runner a few years ago, holds out remarkably well as a professional, according to the showing he made in Saturday's race, at Toronto. For some time it was supposed that Longboat was all in. He must have been up on the reservation living outdoors and dodging the firewater. Longboat's temporary retirement from the game was popularly supposed to have been caused by too great a curiosity about strange liquids that comes in long-necked bottles. If so, the Indian has made a fresh start and is the same long-winded, long-legger speed king he was years ago,

MARTY O'TOOLE READY TO WORK

Pittsburg, Aug. 9.—Marty O'Toole has fully recovered from his recent operation for appendicitis. He announced yesterday that he felt fit and that he would return to the game just as soon as Manager Clarke would permit. "I am O. K. again." said he, "and I want to get in there and show myself."

O'Toole has been working easily ever since his discharge from the hospital some time ago. During the last couple of days he has been "putting something on" the ball, and has found to his delight that his arm is strong enough to go the route.

With O'Toole added to the already strong staff of chuckers the Pirates ought to go down the stretch at something like a fast pace.

President Dreyfuss said last night that it wasn't probable that Manager Clarke would allow the sorrel-topped one to start a game before next week.

NEW YORK PLAYERS' FIGHT WITH McGRAW

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 9.—Manager John J. McGraw, of the New York Nationals League club, and several of his players exchanged fistcuffs last Thursday night, says the Tribune. Trouble is said to have been brewing among the players ever since McGraw traded Otis Crandall, the veteran pitcher, for Larry McLean. Crandall was very popular among the club members, and there was much bitterness felt at his loss. According to the press the fight with McGraw occurred when five of the players who were spending the evening together, were accosted by McGraw at midnight and taken to task for their late hours. The players passed hot words, particularly about Crandall and several blows were struck. Two of the players with cooler heads prevented the matter from becoming a general fight, and the party finally returned in a body to their house, McGraw with a bleeding nose as a result of the affray. There was no other damage done, however.

THIS WRITER LIKES LAJOIE

Chicago, Aug. 9.—Quoting F. Wildfire Schulte, the home-run kid, "There's hitters, and again there's Lajoie!" Not that the Cub star is coyly making fresh with the club swinging abilities of certain present day greats, to-wit Heinie Zimmerman, Joe Jackson, Tyrus Cobb, Hans Wagner, Tris Speaker, et. al. for Wilrfire is a knowing cuss. He's hep to the fact that these are dangerous birds at any and all stages of the milling. He has seen them all, lamped 'em, carefully and makes bold to proclaim the reformed hack driver from Woonsocket, R. I., the master malletier of all time.

One of those fanfares always in season when the elements go amuck and weep copiously, converting the big league battle fields into temporary natatoriums. gave Schulte his clue to compliment Larry.

It isn't a case of hero worshipping with Schulte. Here's a big leaguer who counts his pals in legion. He is rated one of the truly greats in affairs pertaining the game of swat. Once only in all his days as a National pastimer has Wilrfire sat in when King Larry was batting. It happened down at Commy's grounds some eight years ago.

The Cubs were off that afternoon being scheduled to catch a rattler leaving at midnight for St. Louis. Schult's memory failed him when he tried to name the White Sox flinger oppcsing the Naps. Wheever he was, he sure got a fine-combed mauling. Said Wildfire, warming up to his recital:

"I'd heard a lot about this man Lajoie, and grasped the chance to look him over. As I remember he batted fourth and he had first time up in the first inning. I was sitting in the grand stand where I could draw a bead on everything aimed at that Frenchman. Careless like he ambled up to the plate, swinging his slap-stick like a drum major on parade doing trick stuff with his baton. He didn't miss a trick that time, but I did. I watched carefully, yet he didn't seem to set himself or take the toe hold so common among batters. Instead he stood up there as if he might be talking with the arbitrater."

MORE ON WATER WAGON

Britain is Steadily Consuming Less Liquor.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(Can. Press.)—The very remarkable spread of temperance in the British Isles in every rank of society was recorded by Sir Thomas Barlow, president of the International Medical Congress, in a speech delivered to several hundred doctors of various nationalities at a breakfast given today in their honor by the National Temperance League in the Grafton Galleries.

Sir Thomas said that a great improvement in this respect had taken place in the army and the navy, where the young officers were setting a good example to their men. There had also been an enormous change among the commercial classes, while the use of alcohol in hospitals and by medical men generally had greatly decreased it.

The president made an appeal to the doctors present to endeavor to check the consumption of medicated wines, all of which, he said, were mischievous.

Canadian delegates to the medical congress were active in several of the twenty-six sections assembling yesterday. Professor McTaggart, Montreal, spoke in discussion on infant mortality; Dr. Pirie, Montreal, gave an interesting demonstration of the application of the cinematograph to the study of the intestinal canal.

Dr. Maude Abbott has been elected secretary-treasurer of the medical museum.

LITTLE GRAY LADY

Why the Oldest Boarder Left Her Little, Half Bare, Top Story Room.

BY HUBERT PAUL.

The Little Gray Lady had left our boarding house!

It was all the more astonishing because she had lived there, so Mrs. Potter said, for fourteen years. She had occupied that little half bare room of hers on the top story nearly all of that time. When she had come, most of us young fellows had been children playing Indians and making mud puddings. Nobody had thought that she would ever leave. She went out every morning at 8:30 to her work—she was cashier in some office downtown—and came back promptly at six; she had no friends; she never went out in the evening. Some of us, taking pity on the lonely little middle-aged spinster, had sought her friendship, but she had always amiably and politely discouraged us.

We looked at each other in astonishment that evening at the dinner table when Mrs. Potter told us. No, the Little Gray Lady had given no explanation. She had merely said, very sweetly, that she was going away, had packed her trunk and gone, giving some address in a modest uptown street. Mrs. Potter had hoped that she might be permitted to call. The Little Gray Lady had evaded the proposition with the adroitness born of fourteen years of evasion of all personal matters. Then she had driven away in a cab, and that was the only thing that had seemed unusual in the manner of her going. For the Little Gray Lady was not given to cabs.

"Perhaps she's gone to get married," suggested Parsons, a shock-haired youth, who sat at Mrs. Potter's right.

"Mr. Parsons, there isn't any man worthy of her," said Mrs. Potter severely, and to that he heartily agreed. For everybody had loved the quiet, modest, kind-hearted little spinster who sat so demurely at our table and lived so unassumingly. I think we all felt a sense of personal loss.

Through the Crowd a Little Woman Pushed Her Way.

I remember that night vividly, for we were all engrossed by the news that Governor Cowper had pardoned Melchior Jetley, the famous murderer, who had formed the text for innumerable discussions at debating societies during the period of his imprisonment. Everybody knew about Jetley; but since it is some years since his release the story may have faded out of the public mind, so I will briefly record it. Jetley had served seventeen years for the murder of Sam Briggs. It was a deliberate, premeditated, cold-blooded murder. Jetley was a racing man, and Sam Briggs was his partner. Jetley had recently married a very charming woman, the daughter of a fashionable clergyman of our town. Their short married life was singularly happy. Jetley abandoned his old habits and associates, settled down, reformed and went into business. Sam Briggs, his partner, followed suit and became his partner in business likewise. They had been married about eighteen months when Jetley was called west on business. Somebody—some busybody—sent him a telegram which brought him back in a hurry. He went home; Mrs. Jetley was not there. The scared maid told him she had gone to Kling's restaurant, frequented by a rather flashy, "sporty" set. Jetley went there in a hansom, entered, saw his wife seated at a table with Sam Briggs, drinking a cocktail. Jetley pulled out a revolver and shot Briggs dead.

He was tried, sentenced to death, and had his punishment commuted to imprisonment for life. After seventeen years Governor Cowper pardoned him. And the imprisonment, and the pardon, too, divided society into two hotly antagonistic camps. Some maintained that he should have been sent to the chair—or gallows, rather, for hanging was then the legal method of execution. Others demanded that he be freed. During the whole seventeen years the agitation continued. No doubt old-timers argue out the matter yet, as we did on that evening.

"Look at it this way," said Parsons. "The man shot a fellow man in cold blood. The law prescribes a penalty for murder. It should have been exacted."

I maintained that it was every man's duty to defend his home. We were divided half and half.

"I don't believe the taking of life is ever justified," put in Cranborne, our Socialist boarder. "Jetley was the victim of his environment. How many of us would not have done the same? Besides, did you fellows ever stop to think that he may have had loved ones who would suffer more than he by his death?"

"You're a sentimentalist," sneered Parsons. "Who cares for a murderer serving a life sentence?"

"Somebody may have cared. His wife!"

"Good Lord, Cranborne, do you suppose she cared what happened to him, or he what happened to her? You treat those criminals as though they were actuated by the same emotions as ordinary people. Why, society is well rid of them. Kill the man and drive the woman out of society and you'll improve the world better than by any crazy theories which don't accord with facts."

"I'd like to take a look at Jetley when he arrives at the station tomorrow," said Parsons. "The papers say he'll come down on the 2:42. I guess there'll be a mob of sightseers."

"Yes, ready to mob him," said Cranborne.

"Stuff!" said Parsons. "They'll carry him shoulder high. The mob always applauds the wrongdoer."

"Well," I interposed, "let's go and see." I think, but am not positive, that somebody laid a bet that Jetley would swagger through the crowd like a triumphant baseball star. Somebody else expected to see a broken criminal, creeping back hopelessly to the world of men. Anyway, we were all curious.

The train came in half an hour late. We were jammed into the heart of a huge throng that blocked the entire station. On the outskirts a force of police attempted vainly to clear a passage. The train slowed down; the passengers descended and stood gazing helplessly about them. Nobody could move a yard.

Suddenly shouts went up. "That's him!" they yelled, "that's him!" And they surged forward and about him, and neither cheered nor hooted, but stared open-mouthed at a middle-aged, tired, bowed, unhappy man in a suit of dark serge, carrying a cheap new suit-case.

Then through the crowd a little woman pushed her way, forcing aside the strongest men by some superhumanly endowed strength. She went up to the tired man and put her arms round his neck and kissed him, and the tired man dropped his bag and stared at her and said something softly and then covered his face with his hands; and I was near enough to see the tears trickling between his fingers. And the woman was the Little Gray Lady!

That's all I know. That's all I can tell, and I don't know who she was—although I know her name, which wasn't that of his wife, but may have been assumed. I'm only recording what I saw before the police pushed us away, and the tired man and the Little Gray Lady disappeared from our sight for ever. But there was a look of forgiveness and of love on both their faces that kept me quiet that night at the table, although Cranborne and Parsons engaged in a pretty stiff argument.

SET OUT TO PLEASE CRANKS

Clerk Who Gained Good Will of Difficult Customers Deserved Promotion That Followed.

"Anybody can hold the trade of a good-natured customer," said the superintendent of a large mercantile establishment to a new clerk. "It's the man who can please the cranks and chronic kickers whom we want and who will find himself in line for promotion."

The new clerk remembered. He set himself to please difficult customers, the ones who like to complain and will find an opportunity to do so no matter how good the service and merchandise. "I realized," he says, "that their money is just as good as the next man's, though it may be more difficult to get."

It was not long before the obliging clerk had built up a personal trade, so that critical customers would ask for him on entering the shop. They liked to be waited on by one whom they knew desired to please. Often they became much less crochety.

The superintendent was as good as his word. When the value of the new man's services became apparent, as it inevitably did, the promised promotion was not long delayed.

No One to Take the Bet.

There are lots of things worse than living for a week at the detention home, in the opinion of little Johnnie, a little orphan, who has known about nine years of life in the ways of the city streets. He made that institution his home for about a week at the order of Judge Taylor of juvenile court, pending the finding of a permanent home for him by the board of children's guardians.

During his stay there he gained nine pounds. He was a different boy on the day of his discharge, compared with the hungry, shiftless lad that went in.

"Did you eat lots of bread and molasses at the detention home, Johnnie?" he was asked in juvenile court.

"You bet," he answered, with a merry twinkle in his eye.—Indianapolis News.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

MANY BARNS STRUCK

A Disastrous Storm Sweeps Across Western Ontario.

Districts Around Chatham, St. Catharines and Port Colborne Suffer Serious Damage From Electrical Disturbance—Two Fatalities Are Reported From Philadelphia.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—The large barn of the farm of Charles Gillion, in Grantham Township, was struck by lightning this morning during the worst electric story that has swept over this district in some time, and was completely destroyed, along with a large amount of hay, implements and stock, the cattle alone being saved. The loss may exceed $6000, partly insured.

The power circuit on the entire system of the Niagara, St. Catharines Railway was broken and cars stalled at various points in the district, with passengers, between 11 o'clock Saturday night and 3 o'clock this morning, an unusual heavy and steady rain precluding any attempts of the passengers to leave the cars. An excursion crowd on a special trip of the steamer Garden City, from Toronto, spent the night on the boat, being unable to reach St. Catharines. The rain will prove highly beneficial to the fruit crop.

Several Barns Struck.

PORT COLBORNE, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—One of the severest electrical storms in years visited this vicinity last night, with rain. The lightning was continuous and two or three barns were struck and burned in the Township of Humberstone, also two valuable cows were killed.

Two men on the steamer Porter, coming into the harbor, were knocked senseless on the deck of the steamer, but recovered consciousness in a short time.

Farmer Loses Everything.

CHATHAM, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—During the heavy electrical storm that passed over the city yesterday the barns and house of David Fryers of Dover township, were completely destroyed. The lightning struck the barn and destroyed it.

After the workers had departed some of the smouldering embers from the ruins were blown towards the house. Mr. Fryers' house and the house of his hired man were both burned to the ground. Mr. Fryers had just drawn in his last load of grain and all of this year's crops were destroyed.

Two barns were struck by lightning and burned to the ground during Friday night's storm. One of the barns belonged to Ernest Colter. His crops and machinery were an entire loss.

Mrs. Skinner's barn in Dawn township was also levelled to the ground by fire. The barn contained the most of Mrs. Skinner's crops.

Burnt Contents of Barn.

ALVINSTON, Aug. 9.—During the severe electrical storm which passed over this section last night the barn of Dougal McIntyre, two miles east of here, was struck by lightning and with the contents completely destroyed. Loss $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

Philadelphia Storm Swept.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—A young woman was killed by lightning, a baby crushed to death by a falling tree, and scores of people were injured by flying debris during a wind, rain and electrical storm which swept over this city today. Trees were uprooted, telegraph, telephone and electric light poles blown down, windows broken, and buildings unroofed by the wind which blew at the rate of sixty miles an hour before the rain.

Agnes Murphy, 20 years of age, was killed by a bolt of lightning when she sought shelter under a tree in Fairmount Park. James McNamee, 11 months old, was in a coach at a cemetery when the wind blew down a tree which crushed him to death.

The roof of a pavilion in Fairmount Park was blown down and six picnickers were so badly injured by falling debris that they had to be removed to a hospital.

BOTTLE IS FOUND

Contains a Message from Ill-Fated "Christmas Ship."

STURGEON BAY, Wis., Aug. 10.—(Special.)—A message supposed to have been written by Capt. Charles Nelson of the Rouse Simmons, the "Christmas Ship" which went down with all on board in Lake Michigan last November, has been found by Frank Lauscher, the son of a fisherman.

The message is dated Nov. 23, and reads as follows:

"These lines were written at 10.30 p. m. Schooner Rouse Simmons ready to go down about twenty miles southeast of Twin River Point, between fifteen and twenty miles off shore. All hands lashed to one line. Good-by, Capt. Charles Nelson."

Young Lauscher was playing on the beach several miles north of Sturgeon Bay when he found the bottle. The note, written roughly in pencil, was inside.

Local marine men are of the opinion the note is the last word from the ill-fated ship which sank during a terrific storm last winter when loaded with Christmas trees from the northern woods and bound for Chicago.

Massey's Body Is Found.

CORNWALL, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—Arthur Mossey, who disappeared as completely as tho the earth had opened him swallowed him up, last Monday night, has been located. As was feared he met a watery grave in the St. Lawrence River. Mossey went out for a row on the river and did not return. The boat with his coat and hat were found a couple of days afterwards, and search parties have been out continuously since looking for the body.

It was found on Saturday evening in a bay at Cornwall. In Mossey's pockets were two two dollar bills and a one and eighty-five cents in silver. His watch had stopped at 25 minutes to 12. An inquest was not held. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon to St. Colombo's Cemetery.

Metal Workers Stay at Work.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—The German Metal Workers' Association here today rejected a resolution to join the strike of workmen in the shipbuilding yards. The strike was declared at Hamburg, on July 15 last, and later was extended to the yards at Kiel and Stettin.

Prize May Never Be Won.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—A prize which will perhaps never be awarded is among those offered by the French Academy of Sciences for the encouragement of research.

Twenty thousand dollars lie in the coffers of the academy and will be paid to the first astronomer who puts the earth in communication with any planet of the solar system other than Mars

This curious prize was instituted by a woman named Guzman, who died in 1899 and left the money for founding it in her will. The reason why Mme Guzman excepted the planet Mars is not explained. She may have thought this task too easy of accomplishment to be rewarded with $20,000.

Splendid Prizes for Airmen.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—It was announced today that $75,000 of the national aviation fund, which is being raised thru popular subscription, will be distributed as prizes among German aviators piloting German aeroplanes for distance flights made between Sept. 15 and Oct. 31 of the present year.

At least 1000 kilometres (621 miles) must be flown in one day, half of the distance in one direction to make a flier eligible for a prize. The sum of $50,000 will be divided into six prizes and a special prize of $25,000 is to be awarded to the airman who exceeds 1600 kilometres (approximately 993 miles) in a single day.

Railwaymen's Strike Postponed.

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—(Can. Press.)—Late tonight the members of the Detroit Street Car Men's Union, decided to postpone until next Saturday night, action on a resolution to strike. This was done after union leaders announced that it was quite possible a neutral arbitrator could be agreed upon to assist next week in settling the long standing differences between the street railway and its motormen and conductors.

Schooners Wrecked.

NORTH SYDNEY, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—Telegrams received here state that the schooners Miletus and Irene, owned in Sydeny and North Sydney respectively, were wrecked on the Prince Edward Island coast Friday. The Miletus registered 85 tons and the Irene 65 tons. Neither was insured. All on board reached shore safely.

IN STATE OF SIEGE

Milan Occupied by Thirty Thousand Soldiers to Quell Strike.

MILAN, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—Today was the seventh day of the general strike here. Altho a state of siege has not been proclaimed, the workmen's quarters are occupied by the military forces and martial law practically is in full force. The troops concentrated here are from Lombardy and Venetia. They have raised the strength of the garrison to 30,000. Strong contingents of infantry, supported by cavalry and artillery, hold the stragetic points and prevent the strikers from reaching the centre of the city.

The movement is changing from an economic to a political one, like that which arose in 1898, and the leaders are encouraging the Separatist ideas, arguing that Lombardy, a most prosperous region, is unjustly being made to support the poorer districts of the south. Pope Pius is discouraging the clergy and Catholics generally from sympathising with the Separatist agitation.

Today the Milan Street Railway Co. succeeded in sending out 98 cars. The normal number daily in operation is 700. The strikers tore up paving stones and piled them on the tracks and also attempted to erect barricades, but they were charged by the cavalry and compelled to disperse. The cars ran thruout the day, escorted by policemen and squads of cavalry.

Numerous acts of vandalism were committed today, such as the tearing down of lamp-posts and the cutting of gaspipes. The authorities, however, are assured of sufficient gas to illuminate the town indefinitely. There is no scarcity of bread. The newspapers continue to appear, the printers having refused to go on strike.

Fritz Roessler, a German aviator, and a pupil named Stephan were killed at Brueck, Germany, when an aeroplane in which they were flying fell.

Disquieting rumors are reaching Pekin from the Thibetan frontier to the effect that all is not well with the Chinese Republic expeditionary corps operating there.

An earthquake shock occurred at Placid Lake, N.Y., yesterday, followed by a drop in the temperature of 16 degrees. The vibration was brief, but sharp enough to awaken sleepers.

Daniel Royle, head baker on the R. & O. steamer Kingston, was drowned yesterday at Kingston, Ont., while attempting to win a bet that he could recover a cane lost in the water.

A verdict of manslaughter was returned Saturday in London by a Coroner's jury against Benjamin Jewell, whose seven-year-old daughter died from diphtheria while under Christian Science treatment.

COLD WATER TOO MUCH

Bandit Gave Up to Sheriff After a Long Dip.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 10.—A lone robber who entered the First State Bank of Milwaukee, a suburb of Portland, shortly after noon yesterday and with a revolver induced the cashier, A. L. Bolstead, to permit him to scoop up all the gold within reach of the latter's wicket, was captured later in the woods, some miles distant.

He gave the name of Virgil Perrine and said he was from St. Louis. He is twenty years old.

After fleeing from the bank, with citizens in pursuit, the robber on gaining the woods hid himself by standing submerged to the neck in an encased spring. He remained there for two hours, until the chill of the water drove him from his hiding place into the hands of the sheriff. The robber's loot, about $500 in gold, was found in his pockets, with the exception of $40 he dropped in his flight.

Tuberculosis Among Dogs.

PARIS, Aug. 11.—The French Academy of Medicine is discussing the spreading of tuberculosis by dogs. It is estimated that from 12,000 to 18,000 tubercular dogs are running loose in the Paris streets out of a total dog population of 200,000.

It is found that dogs give tuberculosis to cats. A special study has been made of the presence of dogs in restaurants. A long study of tuberculosis in horses shows that it is extremely rare, with the minimum of transmission to man.

Chinese Government Victorious.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The government moved strong forces down the river yesterday and today, and landed them north of the foreign settlement. The rebels at Kiangnan have been driven in upon the Wu-Sung forts with insignificant losses. The rebels are extending their defences to Wu-Sung, while the government forces are advancing from four directions.

A number of war junks at Wu-Sung attempted to go over to the government, but all of them except one were burned by the rebels.

It is stated that the government is in control and has restored order at Nanking.

Dutch Seize Rebel Sloop.

WILLEMSTAD, Curacoe, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—The Dutch cruiser Zeeland today detained a sloop from Coro belonging to the Venezuelan revolutionists because of her lack of sailing papers. Those aboard the sloop said former President Castro, leader of the rebels in Venezuela, was not now at Coro, but that positive information as to his whereabouts would be given by them for $2000.

Diaz at Vancouver.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—Gen. Felix Diaz of Mexico, who says he is going to Japan for the sole purpose of thanking the Mikado for a favor done the Mexican Government some time ago, arrived here this evening and sails on the Empress of Russia on Wednesday.

WITCH'S LOVE CHARM

Four women were condemned to six months' imprisonment each at Lucera Assizes, Italy, for body-stealing and witchcraft.

It appears that Signora Antonia Nardella, living at Lesina, was determined that a railway signalman should marry her only daughter, and decided that the best way to bring this about would be to bewitch him. For this purpose she paid a couple of women to steal a corpse from a neighboring cemetery.

This they then consigned to Primiana Boffa, who enjoys a great reputation in the locality as a witch. Having selected a number of bones she set to work to prepare a love philtre, grinding the bones to powder in a mortar. She added a quantity of bronze filings which she had commissioned a gravedigger to scrape at midnight from the big bell of the parish church.

Some peasants who chanced to be watching while the incantations were in progress divulged the story to the police.

BURDEN OF WEALTH

Modest Request of a Londoner—He Asks Huge Fortune

"Will some millionaire kindly give me a million pounds for two years, and in return I will write a diary of all I do with it?"

Shorn of all verbiage, that is practically the request of an advertiser in the London "Times." It is four years since he first published his ambition to be made a millionaire, and as no lunatic came forward with the money he repeated his announcement. Heading it, "Notice to Millionaires," the advertiser says: "It has constantly been stated in the press that many millionaires have expressed views to the effect that their great wealth is a burden to them; that wealth does not bring happiness; and that, in short, they would rather be without it.

"The advertiser, a gentleman whose occupation has precluded him from 'making money,' but who would know how to direct its use sensibly and unostentatiously in a manner befitting the responsibilities of wealth, and who at the same time would derive pleasure and benefit from the handling of large sums, invites some dissatisfied millionaire to present him with one million sterling in order that the fallacy of "the burden of wealth" may be proved.

"The advertiser undertakes to keep a daily Diary of his "Investments, disbursements, thoughts and doings as a millionaire," the Diary to be produced at the end of two years before a selected Committee of Business Men for their opinions as to the success or otherwise of the venture.

"The advertiser must in the meanwhile have the sole and unhampered control of the money.

"It is against human nature to expect any genuine reply to this notice, but should anyone care to seriously consider it, the advertiser will communicate with principals only, whose letters will be regarded as confidential."

He promises to return the original capital at the end of the two years.

A Collier-composer

Among the residents of Bargoed, South Wales, is a man who has written and composed over 100 hymns and many songs. Yet he is only a working collier. Since he was twelve years of age David Jones has earned his livelihood in the mine, but he always had a passion for music.

Curiously enough his best work has been done when he has been in trouble. One hymn, entitled "Beautiful Home," which is sung in every household in South Wales, he wrote and composed after the death of one of his children.

Centenarian as Lodging-house Keeper

Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts, of Brynkir, Carnarvonshire, Wales, celebrated her 100th birthday recently. She was born in the district, and has lived there all her life. So independent and hard-working is she that she resents all idea of applying for an old age pension, and she still obtains her livelihood by catering for tourists and taking in lodgers.

Current Killed Boy.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 1.—(Special.)—William Lampkin, a five-year-old boy, is dead here under peculiar circumstances. Three weeks ago the little fellow got a black currant up his nose and his parents were unable to extract it until next day. Complications set in, resulting in the lad's death and leading to the belief that death was caused by another currant in the nasal organs which the parents failed to extract.

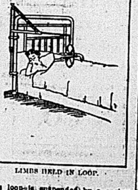
LIMB SUPPORT

Holds Arm or Leg Suspended From Danger of Shock

To facilitate the setting of broken bones in the arm or leg, the apparatus shown in the illustration would appear to be very effective. Upright rods with swinging horizontal arms are attached to posts of the headboard and footboard of the bed. The height of these arms can be regulated by chains, and their length is also adjustable. Hanging from each one is a resilient limb support in the form of a loop through which the injured limb in its cast or splints is thrust. This loop is suspended by a spring, and a limb supported by it is not subjected to any strain and has the effect of floating in the air as nearly as may be achieved. In this position there is no danger of further injury or displacing of splints and bandages by the patient's unconscious moving in bed.



LIMBS HELD IN LOOP.

Keep the Chicks Warm

Don't expect to be able to do justice to your chicks in boxes about the kitchen stove; have plenty of brooder capacity ready, and don't be afraid of having the brooders too hot if the chicks can go in and out at will. Keep a hen and her chicks in a nice sunny place out of the wind, letting her out only on warm days; give another one liberty to go and come at will, hustling for a living on cold, wet, windy days, the chicks following after chirping and crying to be cuddled; or try two hovers or brooders furnishing somewhat similar conditions, one a great abundance and one too little heat, and compare mortality. Piling a brood of chicks in a cold box is like putting twin babies in a cold bed and saying, "Now, kiddies, get warm;" they'll do it in time, but in the meantime, what?

Appeciative Words From Ottawa Paper

Belleville and One of Her Leading Education Institutions Subject of Laudatory Article in Ottawa Valley Journal.

The Intelligencer is pleased to reproduce the following article which was published without solicitation on the part of any one in the Ottawa Valley Journal of a recent date. It makes us all feel more proud of our city and its educational institutions when we are recipients of such strong testimonials from a disinterested outsider.

"The Belleville Business College is one of the oldest established and still one of the very best institutions of commercial learning in the Province. Its repute in the best business circles has always ranked it high and its graduates are to be met with all over the Dominion. It has, moreover, for its home one of the leading educational centres in the Province, and there is perhaps no city in the Dominion that so happily lends itself to the demands and necessary healthy relaaxtions peculiar to college life as does Belleville, "The Queen City of the Bay." As a residential city Belleville is ideal.

The aim of the Belleville Business College has, as set out in its prospectus, been and is to maintain a school that regards the advancement of its students' welfare and interests as one of the main objects of its existence—a school free from show and pretence—one that claims no more than it deserves and promises nothing that it does not perform—one that teaches thoroughly all that it claims to teach, and places duty above self interest and a good name above tuition money. It seeks to qualify its students to become bookkeepers, stenographers and type-writers, general office assistants and to qualify for the Civil Service examinations.

The Belleville district is fortunate to have at its local business and educational centre a good business school, like the Belleville Business College, which so aptly meets the needs of so many young people of both sexes at the most critical point of their educational career, putting them in a position to help themselves. To this a school must have good instructors, good methods and good management, and in these three respects, it is widely acknowledged that the Belleville Business College will compare favorably with any similar institution in the Dominion.

In its President, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, B.A., and barrister-at-law, the College has a citizen of Belleville, prominent in professional and educational circles, who takes a deep personal interest in the college and its graduates and who, on account of his wide interests in business and professional circles, is in a position to secure many a situation for the college graduates.

In Mr. T. W. Wauchope, the college has a thoroughly competent principal. An experienced teacher in the Public Schools of the Province before he became a teacher in the business college, with an expert commercial knowledge gained by study and practice with wholesale houses, insurance offices and banks, he worthily holds the position of Principal of the Belleville Business College. He is ably assisted by a capable staff of teachers and all are housed in one of the best equipped commercial teaching buildings in the Dominion.

The writer has no hesitation in saying that the young people in Central Ontario in search of a sound, practical commercial education can make no mistake in selecting the Belleville Business College.

"ALEXANDRA" AT TETE JAUNE

Miss Isabel A. R. MacLean, whose pen name is "Alexandra", contributed a lengthy article to the Vancouver Providence, July 12, 1913, on Tete Jaune, which point she visited with one hundred and more members of the Woman's Canadian Press Club.

Of conditions, as she found them, "Alexandra" writes:

"Leaving the luxuriously appointed Grand Trunk Pacific train which had brought us through enchantingly lovely scenes, the writer met the superintendent of construction, Mr. Fetters. The official who introduced him described him as "the man who built the road." He led the way • • • We went through a store-house piled to the roof with supplies for the camps—food and raiment and "small hardware." Labels on boxes and barrels proclaimed the best flour to be found on the market, the best hams, biscuits, tea, coffee and all sorts of canned fruits and vegetables. We called on the cook, who presided over a kitchen that glistened and shone and challenged comparison, in point of cleanliness and order, with any of your town kitchens. The mess room, where the ravenous five hundred men gather three times a day, was just as spotless. The cook had just completed a spice cake, a mile or so in length, topped by icing. This trifle reposed in the icehouse pending its appearance before the five hundred. Besides the cake the ice-house contained beef in quantity, dozens of eggs, butter and other perishables. It was very warm at Tete Jaune and I left the ice-house reluctantly. A huge ice-cream freezer projected from a neighboring door. On Sundays, if the cook feels well disposed to his flock, he gives them ice-cream for desert. To supply the camps with beef, carloads of cattle are taken in and killed at Mile 53, or come by way of the river. P. Burns & Company have the contract to supply beef. The commissariat department allows three pounds of beef per day to every man. The chief medical officer of this division was met. He was an Edinburgh man.

When a great railway throws its plant into the field of operations the usual modus operandi is this: First, cut a road. Next, put in a telephone the whole length of the road. Then comes the chief medical officer. He locates the principal hospital near the largest camp. Between Edmonton and Prince George there are 5,000 to 6,000 men working on the G. T. P. The hospitals are distributed as follows: In Alberta at 15-mile, at 30-mile, at 65-mile, 84, 116 and 129-mile. In British Columbia (same division) at 17-mile, 29-mile and 53. The doctor patrols the line and establishes temporary hospitals if advisable, at intermediate points.

THE MONARCH OF THE ROCKIES

Up to the present year, Mount Robson, the Monarch of the Canadian Rockies, and the highest peak in that magnificent range, has only been conquered by one man, Rev. G. R. B. Kinney, of the Canadian Alpine Club, who succeeded in reaching the summit of this giant mountain 13,700 feet above the sea level in the year 1910, but this year, in connection with the annual camp of the Canadian Alpine Club in Mount Robson Park, several members of the camp, under the guidance of Conrad Kain, the best of the Swiss guides in Canada, have placed to their record the difficult feat of reaching the summit of this peak.

For those who are unaware of the location of this great mountain, the following will be of interest: "Mount Robson lies only a few miles north of the valley of the Fraser River, to the west of Yellowhead Pass, through which the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway penetrates the mountain fastnesses on its way to the Pacific Coast. It is visible from the railway, and it crosses the Grand Fork, a tributary of the Fraser, which runs right around the western base of the great mountain. The view of the mountain from that side is one of the most impressive in the whole range of Alpine scenery. The valley is only some 2,700 feet above sea level, and the mountain rises straight, and in a sheer face of 11,000 feet, a face of black rock-ribed with transverse bands of snow and lit up by a great hanging glacier on the eastern shoulder of the summit.

The whole of this territory has been set aside by the British Columbia Government as a park reserve, and it is now known as Mount Robson Park, covering an area of 1000 square miles. In this area the mountains are so high, and in many cases higher than those of any on the Transcontinental routes, while the valleys are lower and wider, the above being one of greater spaciousness.

The glaciers in this northern region are truly magnificent and many of the individual peaks are remarkably bold in out-line. There can be no doubt that the Upper Athabasca and Upper Fraser Valley, where it opens out into Yellowhead Lake or the Moose Lake, and the valleys of the Moose River and Grand Fork, all districts which have been opened up by the advent of the Grand Trunk Pacific, will become resorts of the climber and the lover of glorious scenery.

Laid at Rest With Masonic Honors

Under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, of which deceased was a member, the funeral of the late Robert McCoy took place on Saturday afternoon. Many members of the society and friends were present to pay their last tribute of respect to one who in life was esteemed, and in death revered. In command of Chief Campbell, the members of the fire brigade in uniform attended in a body. The impressive burial services of the Church of England were first held at the family residence, and then conducted by Rev. R. C. Blagrave, rector of Christ Church, who also officiated at Belleville cemetery, where interment took place. At the conclusion of the services at the house the cortege moved off, being preceded by the Masons, followed by the fire brigade. Behind the hearse and mourners in carriages many vehicles followed, while many walked. It was indeed an evidence of the popularity of the deceased. Despite the fact that friends were requested to omit flowers, many floral tributes were sent, some of them being most beautiful. The bearers were friends of the Masonic fraternity, and friends of the deceased, namely, Bros. Henry Pringle, C. J. Bowell, R. McCrudden, B. Black, D. Watkins and W. Carnew. Bros. Rev. R. C. Blagrave, J. Canning and Barragar took part in the Masonic burial services.

Seeks Annulment of Aull-Reid Marriage

The Aull—Reid nuptials have taken another turn in the issue of a writ at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, for a declaration that the marriage which has figured so much in the limelight is null and void.

The action is brought by Doris Reid, of Toronto, by her father and next friend, George P. Reid, against Robert Aull, jr., temporarily staying at Cobourg, Ont., a permanent resident of St. Louis, Mo."

The writ is endorsed as follows:

"The plaintiff claims that an alleged marriage contract between the plaintiff and the defendant on or about the — day of July, 1913, is null and void, and that it may be so declared by this honorable court.

"The plaintiff claims a judgment of the court annuling and cancelling the said alleged marriage contract on the ground of illegality, and of fraud, duress, undue influence, deceit, and misrepresentation by the defendant."

Tobacco a Good Antiseptic.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—(Can. Press.)—Tobacco is exceedingly efficacious in the killing of microbes, according to Messrs. Langlais and Sartory, who state their experiments have shown that in five minutes tobacco smoke will kill almost all the microbes in the saliva, thus nearly completely sterilising the mouth.

One of the experiments carried out by MM. Langlais and Sartory was to place several cigars in water containing many million cholera microbes to the square inch. The tobacco sterilized and destroyed the microbes in twenty-four hours.

CHAPTER III

Making Amends

The widow Simpson's little home occupied the centre of a two-acre lot, the whole surrounded and protected by the regulation rail fence, the one entrance being by a set of sliding bars facing the weatherbeaten house. Evidence of the widow's thriftiness was noiceable in the large variety of vegetables now ready for harvesting, and the greater array of wearing apparel and household linens that hung from the many feet of clothes-lines, the washing and ironing of which for the more prosperous villagers brought her the greater portion of ready money.

Mrs. Simpson's deft fingers were making quick work of springling and rolling a large basket of pure white linens, her much worn voice the while keeping time with the motion of her hands. Her notes were not even, and the occasional squeak in the voice might have grated on the ears of an expert musician, but the spirit was in harmony with the words of the old hymn, which more than balanced the numerous discords. The widow was experiencing much lightness of heart on this particular morning, and as the words:

"In the sweet by and by,
We shall meet on that beautiful shore," floated out upon the air, her whole being seemed surcharged with gratitude to the Father of all mankind for His wonderful love to her. Presently she glanced through the front window, gasped, and stood still, watching the approaching form—a form that had for years meant only trouble to her both in a spiritual and temporal nature.

"If there hain't Samson Haskell a-comin' up the walk. I wonder what he's wantin' now. I've hearn about his takin' to preachin', but if he thinks I'm a-goin' to take any account of what he's got to say for his past doin's, I can tell him he's a-goin' to be mistaken. His probation hain't been long enough to make his religion of much account, and I for one hain't a-goin' to trust him 'till I'm tolerable well satisfied he's got it proper. I hain't forgot how he's treated me these many years, and he's got to show me he's sincere afore I'll fellowship him. Mebbe he'll—but I guess the Widder Simpson's enough for 'Zeke Haskell's scapegoat."

A loud knock upon the door announced his desire to enter, followed by the lifting of the latch and his presence within before she could answer the knock. Without waiting to be made welcome or repulsed, Samson appropriated the nearest chair, and seating himself near the door, looked the widow squarely in the face.

Nothing daunted, Mrs. Simpson stood her ground, placed her hands against each side, with arms akimbo, and fixing her eyes condemningly upon her visitor, awaited an explanation of his presence.

"Sister Simpson, I've come to ask your fergiveness for the mean things I've said and done in the past. I know it askin' a great deal. But as God has fergiven me for all my fightin' agin Him, so I feel that mebbe you might fergive me for all by transgressions agin you."

For a moment the good woman could not speak; then, stepping backward to the center of the room, she raised both hands, and in a voice noted for keennes of expression, exclaimed: "For years I've been lookin' for somethin' to happen; and it has come at last. For years I've put up with an amazin' lot of impudence from 'Zeke Haskell's son, and sech of his chums as he has put up to prosecute me. For years an' years have I prayed that the Lord would let me see this day, and it has come at last. IT HAS COME AT LAST.." Her sharp voice sounded the words as she majestically waved her hands, and Samson knew that he was to be placed on his good behavior for an indefinite period. But he was ready for the verdict.

"I hain't got nothin' agin your gettin' religion, Samson," she continued, eyeing him penetratingly. "It may do you a deal of good, an' I hope it will. But it's a satisfyin' portion to hear you say, 'Sister Simpson, I want you should forgive me for the mean things I've said an' done agin you.' "

"I'm awful sorry for the past, Sister Simpson," he said humbly; "and seein' you're a Christian, and I've started to walk in the straight an' narrer path, I want we should be in fellership the one with the other."

"Just think of Samson Haskell callin' the Widder Simson a Christian, after tellin' everybody in the deestrict over an' over agin what a hypercrite she was," and she smiled sarcastically at the very thought. "I allus kalkilated it would come back on you; that I should see the day when you would think differept, for it's a long road that hain't got no turnin'. But I hain't agoin' to make no promises about friendship, or even fellership, lest you slip in the way an' go back to your old tricks when your religion cools off. If you can stand a probation of six months, an' lurin' that time, if you will treat me with the same respect to other people that you do to my face, I'll call it we are friends at the end of that time. But, if you show any bad capers, I'll stop considerin' your friendship, and have you put out of the church."

When Samson found that such were her only terms, he acquiesced, asked her to pray for him, and went away.

As she watched him strtide along the path, vault the bars and disappear in the direction of the grist mill, where his arch enemy, Rasmus Hale, did business, her heart smote her for having been so severe in her treatment of him, and tears filled her eyes. 'May the Lord forgive me for treatin' him so; when Brother Hale gets done with him he'll think we are all agin him. I most believe Samson Haskell has got religion good an' plenty, or he wouldn't go near the grist mill after what Rasmus Hale has said a' done agin him, if he did have good cause at times. Yes, indeed, I'll pray for Samson", and a tender light came to the grey eyes. "I'll pray for him reg'lar mornin' an' night; for if I had the joy of beholdin' him humble himself afore me, and pleadin' for fergiveness, it will be real satisfyin' to know that my prayers have kept him in the straight an' narrer way."

Rasmus Hale was a character of whom a small village can afford but one. His occupation of miller and money broker was well known throughout the length and breadth of the district. His personality harmonized perfectly with the unsavory reputation given him by young Haskell as the meanest old skinflint in the county."

For years he had held mortgages on the most valuable properties in and about the village; his rates of interest varied in accordane with the need of money on the part of the applicant. His practice was to take the most vlauable stock available, at his own price, thereby more than douiling the specified precentage on the loan, and keeping his victim groveling to meet the demands, on threat of foreclosure. Several years previous he had thrown his net about the desirable property of a pioneer farmer, and but for the intervention of Ezekiel Haskell, the founder of the settlement, his possessions would have gone the way of many others. On several occasions he had bid in homesteads that Rasmus had caused to be sold, cancelled the mortgage, and given the debtor ample time to repay, thus standing between the oppressed and the oppressor, until, by many, he came to be looked upon as a public benefactor. The miller's attempts at retaliation were invariably met by the inborn Haskell keenness, so prominent a factor in the trading proclivities of the son.

On account of Hale's high profession of relgiion, Samson had nicknamed him "Deacon Rasmus," the appelation clinging to him ever after, until by force of habit, he accepted, and gloried in it as a legtimate addition to his name.

Never faltering in his determination that all personal differences should be eliminated, Samson manfully appeared at the grist mill and expressed the wish that all unpleasantness be buried, at the same time extending his hand as a token of reconciliation. But the miller had no desire to bury the hatchet, and ordered the intruder from his premises on pain of arrest for trespass.

Arguments as to consistent Christianity proving fruitless, and with the feeling that he had cleared his own conscience, Samson left the building, more than ever resolved to show the thoroughness of his changed life. The test came sooner than he anticipated.

Facing in the direction of his own home, he had gone not more than twenty rods from the mill, when a cry for help reached him, and upon hurriedly returning, found Rasmus frantically struggling with a current that led to the raceway, through which to pass was certain death.

In his anger he had followed the young man from the flouring mill, and while, in an exasperating state of mind, he walked over the narrow footpath of the dam between the grist and saw mills, his feet had slipped, and losing his balance, was precipitating into the water.

Without hesitation, Samson grasped a long-poled log-hook, and after much difficulty effected a rescue as the swiftly running water was drawing its victim from sight. Then carrying the semi-conscious miller to his home, which was near at hand, he left him in the care of the startled wife, with instructions to immediately notify him if further assistance was needed.

The test, so severe for one so young in the way, was but the clearing of Samson's spirtiual vision, and with a heart free from aught but the best of feeling for the man whom he had favored, he returned to the parental home, not to relate the incident for other ears, but to retire to the privacy of his room, where, upon his knees, he thanked God for the strength that made him more than a victor over the deep-set hatred that for years had possessed his heart. And, if within a few hours, he had become the hero of the settlement, it was through no effort on his part, for, search as the villagers might, he could not be found; nor did he again appear in the midst of his friends until he felt sure the incident had spent its interest.

THE GENTLE ART OF MAKING STARS

Leader of Giants Wants a Recruit to Start In With a Blank Mind and Learn All Over

How to become a big league ball player? Well, the less you remember about the game the better off you will be, said John J. ("Muggsy") McGraw to a sporting writer who put the question. What we want to teach you when you try for the Giants is the game and how to play it. If you have speed in your legs, in your arms; if you are physically strong, know human nature, don't drink or keep late hours, don't use tobacco, you'll make a ball player.

When I send my scouts out to look for material the last thing I say to them is: "Get the men with the physical qualifications and I'll make players out of them."

Some of the best ball playing material is found in the small towns. By this I do not mean brilliance but stability. I would rather have a steady player than one who takes spurts and plays to the grandstand. A player recruited from a college or high school usually thinks he knows enough about the game already and needs no further tutoring. The country boy, as a rule, wants to learn and is willing to be taught. However, college men often make good players.

Drink is the bane of baseball. It has ruined some of the best players —Bugs Raymond, for instance. There is the best man that ever donned a suit. Drink ruined him and finally killed him. He used to take from twenty to thirty drinks in a day even before he quit the game. Smoking also, is bad for the wind.

Another trouble we have with players is drinking water on the field. This is what we call the "water habit." Drinking water while playing makes a man bulky and may result in cramps. If a player gargles his mouth while playing it really does him as much good, if not more, than to swallow it.

JOHN J. McGRAW

I advise my players to eat only two meals a day and never eat lunch. I have not eaten lunch for 10 years even during the winter months. If one must eat, it should be a sandwich or light lunch before playing; a hearty dinner may result in cramps the same as drinking water.

I am not in favor of this winter training. The less training a player does in winter the better off he will be for the season's work. I'm not in favor of indoor training of any kind. This is where the country boy has the advantage. He works in the open air and can stand harder work than the city boy. If one must have winter exercise, play handball for the wind. However, if possible, running should be practised on the roads.

A Blind Bowler

August Steneck, a blind youth, made a score of 174 in a bowling tournament at New York. Steneck and eight other sightless persons played 108 games in the tournament scoring an average of above 100 each. Rarely did the ball go down the gutter. When pins were left standing after the first ball was sent down the alleys, the bowlers were aided by shouted directions as to the location of the remaining pins.

GRAND ENCAMPMENT OF ONTARIO IN SESSION

First Gathering Opened in City Hall this A.M. --Addresses of Welcome--Rebekah Assembly Held in Mizpah Lodge Rooms.

At nine o'clock this morning the Grand Encampment of Ontario I.O.O.F. was formally opened in the city hall, which was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the delegates and cantons. The Grand Encampment officers were escorted to the hall by Canton Toronto No. 7 and Canton Queen City No. 10. Colonel W. J. Foster, chief of staff, was in command of the B. M. battalion guard of honor. The Grand Officers present were: Ed. M. Clapp, Grand Patriarch; R. H. Ketcheson, Grand High Priest; Wm. J. Graham, Grand Senior Warden; John A. Macdonald, Grand Scribe; Ed. C. Garbutt, Grand Treasurer; Robert Meek, Grand Representative; James R. Thomson, Grand Representative; Charles R. Byam, Grand Junior Warden; James S. Lockie, Grand Marshal; W. M. Savigny, Grand Inside Sentinel; Dan. C. Parker, Grand Outside Sentinel.

Previous to the opening of the Grand Encampment the officers and representatives were tendered a welcome on behalf of the city by Aldermen Panter and Wallbridge, in the absence of Mayor Wills.

Ald. Panter said it afforded him great pleasure to be present to extend a welcome to the officers and representives of the Grand Encampment. Belleville was noted for its hospitality and he hoped all present would enjoy that hospitality. The city was noted as a beautiful city, and all should avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing it. He regretted that Mayor Wills was not present, but said the welcome was just as hearty as if His Worship had given it. He hoped their deliberations would be beneficial to the Order they represented.

Ald. Wallbridge said he was pleased that this gathering was taking place in this city, and said if the delegates took as much happiness out of their stay here as it gave the citizens to have them here, their cup of joy would be full and running over. The citizens heartily welcomed all.

Grand Patriarch Clapp of Picton replied, thanking Aldermen Panter and Wallbridge for the heartiness and cordiality of the welcome extended to the representatives of the Grand Encampment. He could assure them that the welcome and freedom of the city was appreciated and they would not abuse their privileges. They will carry nothing but the best of recollections away with them. He knew the hospitality of Belleville was genuine, as he had enjoyed it on previous occasions; Belleville was to him a second home. He again returned thanks.

Past Grand Patriarch Cooper of this city then read the following address:

To E. M. Clapp, Esq., Grand Patriarch, and Patriarchs and Representatives of the Grand Encampment of Ontario:

We beg to assure you that it is no ordinary pleasure to greet and welcome you to our city at the first session of the Grand Encampment to be held in District No. 20.

It is an additional pleasure and source of congratulation to know that a former esteemed resident of our city and native of the adjacent county of Prince Edward has been elected to the high office of Grand Patriarch. The splendid success achieved the past year under his direction has been ample justification of the wisdom of the choice made by this body.

We are delighted to know that there has been progress all along the line in Patriarchal Odd Fellowship in the year that has just come to a close, and this general prosperity has been reflected in greatly augmented membership in our two local encampments.

It will be the special aim and object of the Patriarchs of Belleville, during your too brief visit, to extend to you the hospitality, the lesson of which has been so strongly impressed in our beloved order.

Every resident of our beautiful town will join with us in extending to you a cordial greeting and will co-operate with us to make your visit agreeable and pleasant.

Again we bid you thrice welcome and express to you our grateful appreciation of the honor conferred upon us by this visit, and hope your return to visit us again will not be too long deferred.

Signed on behalf of the Patriarchs of District No. 20.

Belleville, Aug. 12th, 1913.

Grand Patriarch Clapp responded to the address.

Brigadier General Geo. M. Hemiston, department commanded of Ontario Patriarchs Militant, on behalf of that branch of the Order spoke, extending cordial and felicitous greetings.

To this address Grand Patriarch Clapp responded.

The Grand Encampment then went into session. A synopsis of the reports is given below:

GRAND PATRIARCH'S REPORT

Grand Patriarch Clapp delivered his annual message, which was a voluminous document. In part he said:

As your Grand Patriarch I bid you a hearty welcome, and submit a report of my stewardship for your perusal and disposal. I desire to express the hope that your deliberations may be tempered with justice and mercy, and that in your dealings one with another you will keep constantly in view the beautiful lesson of the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them under similar circumstances do unto you."

Several matters of importance will be presented for your consideration, not the least of which is the revision of the Subordinate Encampment Constitution, which has received the very careful attention of the committee appointed for that purpose, and is now thoroughly up to date.

May the result of your labors redound to your credit and to the benefit of the Encampment branch of the best fraternal benevolent organization in existence today.

The past year has been one of marked progress in the Patriarchal branch, both in regard to efficiency in conferring degrees and in admittance of new members, and I do not believe that I will be accused of egotism when I say that, generally speaking, Encampment Oddfellowship in Ontario is now on a more substantial basis, owing to the house-cleaning that has taken place during the year. There have been admitted during the year ending June 30th, 1913, about 1,141 members; suspensions, withdrawals, deaths and transfers, about 707 members, which would leave a neat increase for the year of 557.

Again we are reminded of the fact that "Death is in the world" when we glance over the list of Patriarchs who have during the past year been called by the "Grand Master" above to cease their labors here below and enter into the reward of faithful service. While some of those mentioned below were well and favorably known over the entire jurisdiction, the others who were not so fortunate were each in their own sphere equally as zealous workers and beloved by their brother Odd Fellows. Among the list will be noticed: R. H. Cowan, P.G.M., London, June 26th, 1913; Geo. Bell, P.G.R., Ottawa, Sept. 10th,

DID A DARING AVIATOR GO DOWN IN LAKE ERIE?

Residents of Port Dover Witnessed Seeming Collapse of Monoplane and Hurried Boat to Rescue - Machine Had Disappeared.

TORONTO, Aug. 12.—Special—A daring aviator is believed to have perished in Lake Erie about two miles out from Port Dover. Prominent people at the attractive summer resort fear a tragedy occurred last evening about 7.30. Inquiries were made of a press representative from Port Dover over the long-distance telephone as to whether over the "wires", word had come of any birdman who had essayed to cross Lake Erie from the American shore. What seemed to be a modern air craft was observed out over the lake, bearing almost directly upon Port Dover. Several people saw it and were watching it from one of the cottages in Globe Park, when it suddenly seemed to collapse and disappear.

A boat was promptly manned and a party set out to render any assistance that might be effective, but, though they rowed far out into the lake and satisfied themselves and the others who were still watching from the shore that they had been close to the spot where the machine was believed to have dropped, no trace of any floating object was found.

The Port Dover people say that the machine appeared to be of the monoplane type. They surmised that the aviator had undertaken a trip across the lake from Cleveland, Ohio, or Erie, Pa., to Canadian territory, or perhaps was bound for Detroit.

Session is Likely To Be Late

Ministers Have More Trips East and West to Make Before Parliament Re-Opens.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11.—It will probably be well on in September before there is any general reunion of the Cabinet Ministers to dispose of matters apart from the ordinary routine. The Prime Minister plans to remain in Ottawa most of the autumn, though he may take a few week-end trips. The Hon. W. T. White, who is returning from England at the end of the month, has not, so far as is known here, cancelled his plans to go to the west.

The Hon. T. W. Crothers is thinking of going on a trip to England, and the Hon. Sam Hughes will go there next month, surrounded by a brilliant staff, to witness the manoeuvres at Aldershot. The Hon. Dr. Roche leaves on Friday for an extended tour of the West, and Hon. J. D. Hazen was to leave Dawson City to-day. He will be back on September 1st.

The Hon. Robert Rogers has wired that he will return to Ottawa on the 26th inst. The Hon. Mr. Cochrane will leave on the 24th for a tour of Northern Ontario. Mr. Coderre leaves to-morrow for the Pacific coast. Most of the other Ministers will remain within calling distance.

The growing probability of a late session, starting only after New Year, will not require the return of the Ministers of the Cabinet at as early a date as would be necessitated by a November session.

Are English Women Becoming Arnachists

London Magistrate so Characterizes Militants who Riot Sunday -Sylvia Pankhurst Hurt in Struggle.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—"You women are overstepping the ordinary bounds of lawlessness—you are becoming anarchists," said the Magistrate in Bow Street Police Court to-day in sentencing the militant suffragettes who took part in street fighting yesterday, when Sylvia Pankhurst led a mob of 10,000 women in an attempted assault upon the residence of Premier Asquith.

Edith Billings was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, or spend one month in jail, and Kathleen Jarvis was sentenced to two months at hard labor.

Verity Oates and Gwendoline Cook were discharged on their promise not to take part in any of the Sunday riots of women in future.

Four other suffragettes were bound over in the sum of $40 to keep the peace. A laborer who had taken part in the rioting was sentenced to two months. He announced that he would not go on a hunger-strike.

Sylvia Pankhurst had a special bodyguard of men for the occasion, but her escort was overpowered, and she was taken to Holloway Jail. She was cut and bruised, while helping her male companions to fight two foot and two mounted policemen.

MASSASSAGA

The weather is still dry and hot, and rain is needed very much.

Mrs. Lewis and daughter Blanche, have returned to their home at Havelock, after spending a couple of weeks at Mr. George Spencer's.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lent and Abbot, visited at Mrs. A. Gorslin's over Sunday.

Mr. Henry Walker of Warkworth, who is visiting at David Walker's, is improving in health and is able to be out again.

ALLIANCE IN DANGER PREY TO DISSESSIONS

German Emperor Is Alleged to Have Said That He Did Not Want Austria to Rattle With His Sword—Kaiser's Congratulations to King Charles of Roumania Sign of German Policy.

VIENNA, Aug. 11.—A dark cloud has been hanging over the triple alliance for some time, and anxiety is shown in well informed quarters over the development of the dissensions that have arisen between Austria and Germany, and to some extent Italy.

The origin of these differences is betrayed in an utterance attributed to the German Emperor:

"I do not want Austria to rattle with my sword."

Whether he really said this or not, the fact is that the recent course of Austria's policy, particularly her efforts for a revision of the Bucharest treaty, was adopted without the approval of Germany and even with German disapproval.

Emperor William's congratulatory telegram to King Charles and his decorations of Premier Majorico, altho Roumania sided with Servia and Greece, and his making King Constantine, a field marshal in the German army, are visible expressions of the new direction which German policy is taking on the Balkan question, all of which is causing great uneasiness in Vienna.

TENSION RELAXES.

Situation in Mexico City is Considerably Relieved.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11. — (Can. Press)—Distinct relief was apparent in official circles here today over the course of events in Mexico. The statement of Frederico Gamboa, the new Mexican minister of foreign relations, that he had "great faith in the reasonableness of the judgment of the United States," holding the conviction that the difficulties between the two countries "soon would be adjusted," produced a very favorable impression in administration circles.

President Wilson pointed out during the day to callers what seemed to him conspicuous efforts on the part of some people unknown to him, thru published misrepresentations, to involve the United States in intervention. He reiterated that the attitude of this government toward Mexico in the present situation was one of peace and friendliness solely.

The safe arrival in Mexico City of John Lind, personal representative and officially designated adviser to the American embassy, ended some tense moments in the situation. Administration officials tonight looked forward hopefully to a favorable reception of their efforts to suggest measures of peace in ending the struggle between the contending factions in Mexico.

With the air cleared of rumors of hostility in the Mexican capital to Mr. Lind's presence there, officials were disposed to believe the program of the American Government would be carried out quietly and in such a manner as seemed most expedient to Mr. Lind and the embassy at Mexico City.

Capt. Capehart of the battleship Michigan, which proceeded last Thursday from Vera Cruz to Ciudad del Carmen, as the result of a complaint to the state department by Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, that rebels were threatening American life and property in the region of her ranch near that place, has reported "that American subjects are not in danger; American subjects have not been threatened; and American subjects and foreign subjects have received proper protection from the Mexican authorities."

CODY IS BURIED.

British Aviator's Body Interred With Military Honors.

ALDERSHOT, Aug. 11. — (Can. Press).—The body of F. S. Cody, the Anglo-American aviator who was killed here in a hydro-aeroplane accident on Aug. 7, was buried with military honors in the soldiers' cemetery here this afternoon. Enormous crowds lined the route of the funeral procession, paying a splendid tribute to the popularity of the dead airman.

The coffin was mounted on a gun carriage and covered with the Union Jack. It was followed to the grave by contingents of all arms and the full strength of the royal flying corps. As it passed the various barracks in the camp the troops turned out and stood with bared heads.

The pipers of the famous Black Watch (the 42nd Highlanders) headed the procession, playing a Scottish "lament," while the bands of the other regiments played funeral marches.

The only military feature omitted from the funeral was the firing of a volley over the grave.

GREY IS SUPPORTED.

Hon. Mr. Buxton Says Panama Show Attitude Is in His Hands.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press)—An effort to resurrect British participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco was made in the house of commons this afternoon by Col. George A. Gibbs, a Unionist member. Col. Gibbs asked Sydney Buxton, president of the board of trade, for his reasons for withholding British official recognition of the exposition. He put the following question:

"In view of the importance attached to the Panama-Pacific Exposition by Americans, will the board of trade reconsider its decision?"

Mr. Buxton referred his questioner to Sir Edward Grey's reply as fully covering the official view of the matter, and held out no promise of reconsideration of the British Government's attitude.

JAPAN IS EMBARRASSED.

Presence of Chinese Rebels in Country Causes Trouble.

TOKIO, Japan, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press)—The Japanese Government is somewhat embarrassed by the presence in Japan of Dr. Sun Yat Sen and Gen. Huang Sing, leaders of the recent Chinese rebellion, both of whom arrived in disguise. The government was at first disposed to refuse them permission to land, but eventually consented to their doing so, in view of the fact that if they were deported to China, where a price was set on their heads, it certainly meant their arrest and death.

It is reported that Dr. Sun Yat Sen does not intend to proceed to the United States, as at first stated, but will try to gather funds to continue the campaign against Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai.

Escaping Gasoline Kills Three.

QUEBEC, Aug. 11.—News reached here today from the north shore of a very sad accident which occurred on board a schooner belonging to Capt. Mercier, while en route from Mutton Bay on Friday last. Three passengers, Mr. and Mrs. James Bobbitt and Madame Charles Vigneaulo, were found dead in their cabins, death being due to escaping gasoline.

Mr. and Mrs. Bobbitt were residents of Mutton Bay, while Madame Vigneaule belonged to Natashquan.

Fatal Panic in Movey.

VALENCIA, Spain, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—Forty-nine persons were seriously hurt today at Gandia, a town in the Province of Valencia, near the Mediterranean, as the result of a panic which occurred in a crowded moving picture theatre. A slight outbreak of fire caused the audience to rush blindly towards the exits and of those hurt in the tremendous crush, fourteen are believed tonight to be dying.

Fatally Injured in Runaway.

DUTTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—While unloading grain at the mill this morning a barn belonging to Nason D. Graham of Dunwich became frightened and ran away. Mr. Graham, in heading them off, was thrown under the wagon, the wheels passing over his head, breaking his jaw in two places. Little hope is held out for his recovery.

Killed in Auto Wreck.

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—(Can Press.)—Mrs. Ovenden, wife of H. R. Ovenden, secretary of the Cartier Centenary Memorial committee of Montreal, was instantly killed near Knowlton, Que., this afternoon when a 100 horse-power automobile, in which she was riding, turned turtle. Mrs. Ovenden was accompanied by her brother-in-law, Z. V. Martin, a wealthy paint manufacturer of Chicago, Mrs. Martin and their son, who was driving the car.

Mrs. Ovenden's head struck a huge boulder at the roadside, and while the other occupants of the car were badly shaken up they escaped serious injury.

Sweden Conceded Rights.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 — (Can. Press.)—Sweden was today conceded the right to send wood pulp and paper into the U. S. free of duty. The state and treasury departments have decided that the recent decision of the customs court that nations having "most favored nation" treaties with the U. S. were entitled to free wood pulp and paper, because that privilege was granted to Canada, is applicable in principle to Sweden. Claims of other countries not directly parties to the customs court suit are under consideration by the government. Russia will not be given free entry, because of the abrogation of the treaty of commerce and navigation of 1832.

Want Subsidy for Dry-Dock.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—The Amalgamated Drydock and Engineering Company of Vancouver is applying to the department of public works for a subsidy for the construction at Vancouver of a floating drydock to cost $2,500,000. The dock will be capable of accommodating the largest class of vessels now doing business on the Pacific Coast, and as it is necessary the promoters will receive the encouragement of the Dominion Government. The chief engineer of the department of public works will make a report on the plans of the company as soon as they are filed with the department.

Lightning Losses.

GALT, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—William Harkness, a farmer on the West River road, had his barn struck by lightning yesterday and destroyed, together with a large amount of grain and costly implements. His horses were saved, but the pigs and fowl cremated. Loss was $5000, partly insured.

John W. Riddle, 9th concession of Beverly, suffered a loss of several cattle by lightning.

Explaining the Needle.

A typesetter in a printing house became very adroit in explaining the large number of misprints for which he was responsible. Even when he changed his work and became a waiter in a restaurant, says the Berlin Echo his skill did not forsake him. One day he had served a guest with a plate of soup and was turning away when he was called back sharply.

"This is an outrage!" cried the indignant diner. "I find a needle in my soup! What does this mean?"

"Just a misprint, sir," explained the former typesetter. "It should have been a noodle."

REPORT IS ADOPTED

Debate on Proposed Unseating of Sulzer Comes Today.

Report of Frawley Legislative Committee Charging New York State Governor With Diverting Campaign Funds is Adopted by the Legislature—Throngs in Chamber Witness Scene.

ALBANY, N.Y., Aug. 12.—(Can. Press.)—The report of the Frawley legislative committee, charging Gov. Sulzer with having diverted campaign contributions to his own private use was adopted by the legislature early today and a resolution to impeach him for "wilful and corrupt conduct in office and for high crimes and misdemeanors," was offered in the assembly by Majority Leader Levy.

The Frawley committee report and the Levy resolution charge the governor with having falsified under oath his campaign contribution account, diverted some of the funds to his own use for the purchase of stocks, traded executive approval of bills for support of his direct primary measure and having done everything in his power to obstruct the committee's efforts to bring proof of his alleged misconduct to light.

The adoption of the report carries with it a recommendation that Louis A. Sarecky and Frederick L. Colwell, who refused to answer certain questions propounded by the committee's counsel, be held in contempt of the legislature and punished. Sarecky and Colwell are characterized in the report as Governor Sulzer's dummies.

Never in the history of the state has her chief executive been impeached.

After introducing his resolution to impeach, Assemblyman Levy asked that its consideration be postponed until today. This motion was opposed by Minority Leader Hinman, who had championed the governor's cause, and by Assemblyman Sharp, leader of the progressives.

The fight in the senate over the adoption of the report was brief, the session lasting but 45 minutes. The upper house was dark long before the question came to a vote in the crowded assembly chamber. For two hours there a crowd that thronged every niche and cranny of the big chamber stood patiently and silently—save one occasion—waiting for the vote.

The light in the library of the executive mansion was burning low and the rest of the big house was dark when the assembly voted to receive the report. Gov. Sulzer had waited there all evening, contrary to his usual practice of visiting the capitol when the legislature is in session, and heard the news over the telephone. He made no comment thereon.

Before the sun sets today the governor will be impeached, the majority leaders assert.

NEW ZEALAND LEAVES.

Last Courtesies Paid to Battleship at Victoria, B. C.

VICTORIA, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—The last interchange of courtesies between British Columbia and the battle cruiser New Zealand were performed on Saturday on board the warship just before she steamed out on her way to San Francisco.

There were speeches by Sir Richard McBride in handing over a message sent by Premier R. L. Borden on behalf of Canada as a whole, by Lieut.-Gov. Patterson, in presenting a loving cup to the ship in token of its visit to these waters, and by Capt. L. Halsey in response.

Thousands of persons, displaying the carnival spirit, were aboard craft of every conceivable size and shape, following in the wake of the New Zealand as the warship, shortly after 5 o'clock, majestically steamed out of Esquimalt Harbor to the cheers from the massed crews on the U. S. S. West Virginia, H. M. C. S. Rainbow, H.M.S. Shearwater and deafening good-byes from the hundreds of throats of those who lined the waterfront. The New Zealand will visit Halifax in Octobe.

Became Fascinated With Dog.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 11.—A novel contest was started today over the will of Alfred H. Miles, a Colorado pioneer millionaire and nonagenarian, by his grandchildren. The contestants charge that the love for a little dog was instrumental in causing the aged pioneer to give his estate to a brother. They charge that the old man became fascinated with a dog; that he would sit for hours and caress the little animal; that this affection became a mania with him, and that the brother took advantage of this affection and compelled the nonagenarain to execute the will before he would permit him to have the companionship of the animal.

Rebels Hope to Take Hankow.

HANKOW, China, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—An army of 25,000 rebels from the province of Hu-Nan marched yesterday from Yo-Chow with the professed intention of capturing Hankow and proceeding thence to Pekin. A further shipload of northern troops completing a force consisting of probably 6,000 men was sent from Hankow on the way to Sinti in the province of Hu-Peh, where the Hunanese rebels are preparing to make a stand. It is believed here that the northern army will be successful owing to the fact that the Hunanese are largely untrained recruits.

Bad Spot Wrecks Third Auto.

GALT, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—John Haas of Caledonia, one of a party of five autoists driving to Berlin, lies in Galt Hospital with a fractured spine as a result of an upset between Preston and Freeport, where their car encountered a piece or road newly patched with gravel. The machine skidded and rolled over an embankment. The other occupants escaped unhurt. The injured man is a resident of Galt. He is paralyzed from his waist down and has little chance of recovery. Three serious upsets have occurred this season at the spot mentioned, and suits for damages are in prospect.

Skull Fractured by Anchor.

KINGSTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—Wm. Bridson, Lachine, was badly injured while working for Fallon Bros. in the construction of the causeway for the new Cataraqui bridge. With other workmen he was engaged lowering the anchor of the dredge when a pin which holds it in place slipped. The anchor fell back and struck Bridson and fractured his skull.

GHASTLY CRIME IN FRANCE

Religious Fanaticism Led to ..Horrible Murder

PARIS, Aug 10.—Religious fanaticism caused a terrible tragedy at a farm near Avignon. A farmer, his wife, and three children, aged 2?, 25 and 19, and a grandmother of 80, lived there. One day the eldest daughter, Julie, asserted that she was possessed by Satan. Every day she had a new tale about the demon in whose power she believed herself to be. The other members of the family, with the exception of the grandmother, were so worked upon by her statements that at last they believed her.

Yesterday she lay on the floor and began crying "Go away, Satan! Go away." Suddenly her brother, sisters and parents joined in the performance, and all began to cry, "Demon, go away." The grandmother tried to comfort them, but they bound her to her armchair and the girl and shouted, "Demon go away!" and beat the poor girl's head till it was an unrecognizable mass.

When the girl was dead her brother and sisters called at the house of the parish priest to tell him that they had succeeded in driving Satan away. The priest informed the police who arrested the whole family.

TO WALK ON THE WATER

German War Department is Trying a New Invention

BERLIN, Aug. 11.—The Prussian war department has placed an order for 1,000 pairs of "water shoes" with a German firm. They are to be used during the grand military manoeuvres in the fall.

The invention, which somewhat resembles an upturned box, has been throughly tested, and will, no doubt, be generally adopted by the corps of engineers and similiar bodies working in lake districts. Certainly at the manoeuvres the spectacle of a German regiment working over liquid terrain will be watched by foreign experts with keen interest.

The shoes are collapsible and are carried on the back by the pioneers, who are naturally proud of this new and useful auxiliary.

ARE YOU AN ASTRONOMER.

If So, Here is a Chance to Win Twenty Thousand

PARIS, Aug. 11.—A prize which will, perhaps, never be awarded, is among those offered by the French Academy of Science for the encouragement of research.

Twenty thousand dollars is in the coffers of the Academy and will be paid to the first astronomer who puts the earth in communication with any planet of the solar system other than Mars.

This curious prize was instituted by a woman named Guzman, who died in 1899, and left the money for founding it in her will. The reason why Mme. Guzman excepted the planet Mars is not explained. She may have though this too easy of accomplishment to be rewarded with $20,000.

AN ERROR COST HIM POSITION

W. Quinn, formerly C. P. Railway agent at Sulphide has removed with his family from Tweed, having lost his position as the result o an error in his work. We understand the cause for his dismissal was for delay in reporting to the despatcher the passing of a freight train through the yards. Mr. Quinn's many friends were sorry to learn of his unfortunate circumstances and the removal of his family from town is very much regretted by all who knew them—Tweed Advocate.

I desire to give expression of my gratitude to the Patriarchs of this Jurisdiction for having honored me with election to the office of Chief Executive of the Grand Encampment, and while I have devoted no small amount of my time during my tenure of office in the upbuilding and extension of Patriarchal Oddfellowship, I feel that I have been amply repaid in the friendships and associations I have formed, which I trust will last as long as life exists, and in the success that has attended our efforts. I fully realized that sacrifices had to be made, and started out with the determination to visit as many of the Encampments as possible, and thus demonstrate to the rank and file that their services were being appreciated by the Grand Encampment, and I am now satisfied that it is expected of a Grand Patriarch not only to look promptly after his correspondence and office duties, but to extend the sphere of his usefulness by visitations. I trust that you will be charitable, and accept my shortcomings and errors as of the head and not of the heart, and give me credit for at least having done my best.

That the Grand Master above may grant a continuance of his smile of favor on this organization is the earnest wish of

Yours fraternally,
E. M. CLAPP,
Grand Patriarch.

GRAND HIGH PRIEST'S REPORT.

To the Officers and Members of the Grand Encampment of Ontario, I.O.O.F.:

Patriarchs,—During the past year I have had the privilege of visiting a few of the Subordinate Encampments, as follows:

On January 24th I paid a visit to Stirling Encampment, No. 80. I was accompanied by M. A. Branscombe, D.D.G.P., who installed the officers for the term. The meeting was a splendid one, every officer being in his place and every one appearing to have the work of the Encampment at heart. At the conclusion of the work we were entertained by the Patriarchs and a very enjoyable evening was spent. I have every reason to believe that Stirling will soon be one of the best Encampments in the district.

On January 28th I was present with the Grand Patriarch at a joint installation of the officers of Quinte Encampment, No. 19, and Moira Encampment, No. 59, at Belleville. The meeting was largely attended by members of both encampments. D.D.G.P. Branscombe, of Picton, was present and installed the officers in a very creditable manner. I can assure you that all present enjoyed the address delivered by Grand Patriarch Clapp. At the conclusion of the work we were entertained at a banquet, where speeches were delivered by the Grand Patriarch, P.G.R. Cooper, and others. The I.O.O.F. Band being present added much to the musical part of the programme. The meeting broke up at an early hour, all well pleased with the night's proceedings.

On February 5th I had the pleasure of being in the town of Milton, and witnessing the institution of Halton Encampment, No. 100. Among the Grand Officers present were: Grand Patriarch Clapp, Grand High Priest Ketcheson, Grand Senior Warden Graham, and Grand Scribe Macdonald. The degree work was exemplified by the degree staff of Imperial Encampment, No. 97, of Toronto, and the work was beautifully done. The new Encampment promises to be one of the best in the district. R. Gillespie, D.D.G.P., of Hamilton, installed the newly-elected officers, his work being done in such a manner as to reflect great credit upon himself and his staff. About midnight all present were invited to another hall, where a most sumptuous repast was provided by the good sisters of the Rebekah Lodge of Milton. Too much praise could not be accorded to our good sisters.

On April 25th I accompanied the Grand Patriarch on his official visit to Picton Encampment, No. 71. The meeting was largely attended. During the evening some ten candidates were advanced to the Golden Rule degree, the work being done by the staffs of Picton Encampment. At the conclusion of the work, a banquet was tendered the Grand Officers, and it is needless to say we were right royally entertained, because the Patriarchs of Picton are noted for their generous hospitality.

On June 30th I accompanied the Grand Patriarch on his official visit to Trenton Encampment, No. 71. Grand Senior Warden Graham and P.G.R. Cooper were also present. There was a fair attendance and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The greater part of the night was spent in conferring degrees. Trenton Encampment promises to be in a very short time one of the best Encampments in their district.

Yours fraternally,
R. H. KETCHESON,
Grand High Priest.

GRAND SCRIBE'S REPORT

To the Grand Patriarch, Officers and Representatives of the Grand Encampment of Ontario, I.O.O.F.:

Patriarchs,—After a pilgrimage of thirty-six years, travelling throughout the Province of Ontario, this Grand Encampment returns to the City of Belleville to hold its forty-fourth annual session. The ninth convocation of our Grand Body was held in this fair city in August, 1877, with our revered brother, Col. W. H. Cole, P.G. R., officiating as Grand Patriarch. Very few of those who participated in the deliberations of this Grand Encampment on that occasion now survive, yet there are present some of the old veterans who will remember with pleasure the very pleasant and profitable session held there on that occasion. These old Patriarchs who have grown grey in the service, will look with pride and gratification on the great progress and advancement that has been made by the Patriarchal branch in this Jurisdiction since our last visit to this beautiful "Bay City," a place which has steadily maintained its reputation as being "the Hub of Oddfellowship" in the Quinte District. To our Heavenly Father we owe deep gratitude for the many mercies and blessings He has vouchsafed us, and for the blessings bestowed upon our Order; therefore we should ascribe to Him all glory, praise and thankfulness for His watchful care over us, and for the prosperity which we have realized.

It is with great pleasure and gratification that I am enabled to report another magnificent increase in membership. During the past year all of "the live wires" in our system of Patriarchal work seem to have been super-charged with electricity, and under the masterful hand of our Grand Patriarch, who kept "close tab" on the situation and "pushed the button" just where and when it was most needed, the power lines were kept busy, and the net result is one that we should all be proud of. There were many dead limbs on the Patriarchal tree which badly needed pruning, and this work has been attended to with such skill and care by the Grand Patriarch that he can now hand over to his successor a perfect tree, shorn of its tangles and encumbrances, and fit for the grafting on to the parent trunk of several healthy buds in the way of prospective new Encampments, which are ready for his attention.

Initiated during the year ending June 30th, 1913	1,141
Reinstated during same period	81
Admitted by card	42
		1,261
From which deduct:
Suspended for non-payment of dues	570
Withdrawn	57
Suspended for cause	1
Expelled	4
Died	75
		707
Net gain		557

I wish to return my sincere thanks to the Grand Patriarch and other officers of the Grand Encampment for kind courtesies extended during the year. It has been a period of joy and harmony within our Patriarchal circle, and through the united efforts of all we have prospered beyond measure. To the many Patriarchs who have assisted in the work of promoting the growth of the Encampment Branch and extending its sphere of usefulness when called upon, I am deeply grateful. To the various D.D. G.P.'s, officers and Scribes, with whom I have had such pleasant official relations, I again desire to express heartfelt gratitude for their kind cheery words and brotherly consideration, which has lightened my labors materially, and encouraged me on to greater effort in the work we have to do.

Hoping that the Encampment Branch will prosper to a greater degree in this Jurisdiction during the coming year, I am,

Yours in F., H. and C.,
JOHN A. MACDONALD,
Grand Scribe.

REBEKAH ASSEMBLY.

The Rebekahs met in annual assembly this morning at Mizpah Lodge room. Many delegates and members were in attendance. The officers present were as follows:

President—Mrs. L. Brandt, of Berlin.

Vice-President—Mrs. M. Taylor, of Hamilton.

Warden—Miss Linda Clarke, of Cornwall.

Past President—Mrs. C. Edwards, of Bridgeburg.

Secretary—Mrs. Ida G. Moore, of Ottawa.

Treasurer—Mrs. Nellie Dodson, of Chatham.

Previous to the assembly, an open meeting was held. Hon. D. Derbyshire, Bro. O. L. Lewis, P.G.M., and P.G.R., and Bro. J. O. Herity, of this city, gave addresses, the latter delivering the address of welcome on behalf of the local Odd Fellows.

These addresses were most appropriately replied to by Sister L. G. Ryan and Sister Mrs. Taylor, Vice-President of Hamilton.

The ladies then went into a business session and several reports were presented and adopted.

The President, Mrs. L. C. Brandt, presided and presented a most comprehensive report. Amongst other things she said: "Sixteen years ago our Assembly met in this beautiful city, and our dear Sister, Past President Ryan, was the President on that occasion. Only one who has gone to the Assembly year after year can realize what strides have been made in that time, how our Order has grown, and what has been accomplished."

During the year 10 new lodges have been added, two resuscitated, and two revived. The membership has increased materially during the year.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Mrs. J. G. Moore, Secretary, presented her annual report, a synopsis of which is given.

During the past year we have every cause to be thankful, our branch of the Order being in a very prosperous condition. During the year eleven lodges have been instituted and two resuscitated, with a gain in membership of 1,760. A few lodges have failed to report as yet, which might have made the increase somewhat larger

During the year the following lodges have been instituted:

Nov. 18—Bee Hive, No. 125, at Bowmanville.

SLOW WORK WITH BATTLESHIPS

Several years ago Spain decided to build battleships for herself. She started considerably before 1909, arranging with an English firm to establish a ship building plant at Ferrol. It was decided to build three small Dreadnoughts, each displacing 16,000 tons, and armed with only eight 12-inch guns instead of the ten or twelve guns of that size carried by most Dreadnought battleships. The first of these, the "Espana," was begun on December 5, 1909, and launched on February 5, 1912, after being 26 months on the stocks. She is now about completed, after being a further eighteen months completing afloat. She will be ready for service about October. It thus has taken nearly four years to build her, although she is about half the size of one of those which the Borden Government will place in the British Navy. The second of these ships, the "Alfonso XIII.," was laid down in February, 1910, and was launched in May last, having been on the stocks for three years and three months. It had been hoped to launch her in June, 1912, so that she is eleven months late. She is likely to take about five years to complete. The third, the "Jaime I.," is on the stocks, and has been there for eighteen months.

These ships are being built by British firms who have taken a great number of British workmen to Spain to do the work. None the less it has proved a tedious job to build these small battleships, about half the size of those now under construction. The example throws some light on the proposal that Canada should build her battleships in Canada.

WEST GETS ELEVATORS
TENDERS ARE CALLED

Still another of the Borden Government's promises is being carried out, as they will all be carried out. Liberals whose leaders when in office made promises only to break them, find the Borden's rapid performance difficult to understand. The general public, however, understand the situation perfectly. They understand that the Laurier Government promised a lot at election times and did nothing, and that the Borden Government has been making up for Liberal lost time.

The case of the elevators is an illustration. The prairie provinces have been sorely in need of terminal elevators. They would have gone on needing them if there had not been a change of Government and the elevators are being provided. The Department of Trade and Commerce is on the point of commencing the construction of one at Moose Jaw, and another at Saskatoon. It is mailing a call for tenders to every individual and firm that is known ever to have built an elevator.

It is expected that each elevator will cost about $1,000,000. Copies of plans and specifications can be seen either at the Department at Ottawa, or at the office of the Board of Trade Commission, at Fort William.

It is understood that the Board of Grain Commissioners has recommended the immediate construction of a third elevator in Alberta. The location will be determined before long.

LIBERAL PARTY IS FALLING TO PIECES

The once great Liberal party has fallen upon very evil days. It has no leaders in whom it can trust. It went down to defeat on the reciprocity issue because these leaders were false to Canada and it has been reduced to a still sadder ruin because these same leaders are false to the Empire. It is hard to see in what respect the banner of Canadian Liberalism could be worse besmirched or the old principles of the old Liberal party more utterly abandoned. The loss of office has been followed by an exhibition of party mismanagement and of a shameful opportunism in the face of a great imperial crisis which has had the inevitable effect of alienating thousands of decent minded Liberals from the party of which they once were proud.

The name of Laurier, once a name to conjure with, has become a by-word in Canada. The instinct of true leadership does not exist in any of the men who are striving and jostling for first place in the party at Ottawa. The party has tumbled to pieces and those who should have rebuilt it have brought upon it a more complete destruction. Since the close of the session, a session which brought the very name of Liberalism into disrepute, there have been numerous evidences of the hopeless condition in which the party finds itself.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has spent the whole summer so far in personal missionary work in Montreal and Toronto, vainly seeking by explanations, promises and persuasion to get the party together and to satisfy them that a continuance of his leadership does not mean a still more dismal wreck in the future. The tragic part of this situation is to be found in the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is compelled to do this sort of work at all, and to do it alone. It is not so long since this man had merely to lift a finger and bring to his door all those leading party men whom now he has to go a-seeking, hat in hand, wherever they happen to be.

This change of attitude and position is not the result of defeat alone or of the loss of power alone. It is the result of the absolute lack of confidence of the leading Liberals of Canada in the men who now constitute themselves leaders of the party.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has twice shown himself utterly incapable of representing the people of Canada on questions of vital national concern. He has shown himself out of touch with the great bulk of Canadian public opinion. That being so, his usefulness to the party would seem to have gone, and recent happenings would indicate that this is the view of the more prominent men in the Liberal party.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier went wrong on these two great questions: the question of reciprocity and the question of naval aid, because in the first instance he blundered, and in the second he was unwilling. He blundered into an agreement which the man on the street was quick to understand in its true and dangerous significance. That he could make this blunder was in itself fatal to further successful leadership. That he remained in the leadership at all, having so blundered, was due to the fact that there was no one to succeed him.

The Naval Aid issue gave Sir Wilfrid Laurier the great chance of his life, a chance to rehabilitate himself with the people of Canada to some extent at least, a chance to prove himself a great Canadian and to give to the world an illustration of Canadian unity in support of the Empire at a critical time! Liberals from all over Canada urged him to take this high statesmanlike course. He did not listen to them. He listened, instead, to a group of ex-Ministers, a number of whom were without responsibility to the electorate, and these men persuaded him to take the Little Canadian course, to make party politics out of a great political question, and to shame Canada in the eyes of the world. It will be a long time before Canadians forget that injury. It will require a lot of missionary work by Sir Wilfrid Laurier before that stain is worn away.

JAPAN HAS SPIES AT COAST MAKE OUT CASE AGAINST B. C.

Yellow Men Not Allowed to Work in Lumber Camps or in Salmon Fisheries —Farmers Would Legislate Against Them as Realty Owners

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 11—Unusual activity is being displayed just now by prominent Japanese, who are believed to represent the Mikado's Government in an investigation of how the Orientals who live in the vicinity of Vancouver are getting along; how they are being treated by Canadian citizens and the Government, and how they are succeeding in certain commercial pursuits.

Chief of the investigators now in Vancouver is Yuya Yamaguchi, a former member of the Japanese Diet, who has been here for a month quietly looking over the situation.

It is learned that the Japanese Government is securing the most minute information to back up a protest she is making to Great Britain in regard to the anti-Japanese laws of British Columbia. The protest is similar to that made against the California discriminatory laws.

The British Columbia laws prohibit Japanese labor in logging camps on Government licensed timber lands and the yellow men are also legislated against as salmon fishermen. To extend the anti-Japanese feeling, Boards of Trade in the farming sections are now taking up the question and at the next session the Legislature will be bombarded with demands for the enactment of an Act based on the California measure, to entirely prohibit Chinese and Japanese ownership of land.

Immigrant Grafter Caught in Act

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—A well-dressed man at work at the Bonaventure Station last night came within an ace of getting $8.50 from each one of a party of six Polish immigrants. They were only in the city a short time when they were offered jobs at Napanee, Ont., at $2.50 a day. This fellow mixed with the immigrants at once, as he spoke their language, and soon had an interested audience, for $2.50 a day looked "big."

They were about to deliver the money when Detective Gorman came on the scene and asked a few questions, one of which was in relation to his license for conducting a labor bureau. He said he was taking the men to Napanee for contract work, and they were to work for him. The man's story fell down in one or two spots and he was taken in charge. He gave his name as Gustave Poalinski, and was arraigned yesterday morning.

Died in Attempt To Save Girl

QUEBEC, August 11.—"I'll save her or die with her," said Henri Barbeau, aged 20. Then he dived into a muddy pond and never came up again, and his young lady friend, Blanche Alma Landry, aged 15, was also drowned.

The sad accident occurred at Chateau Richer yesterday afternoon. The victims are two Quebecers, who were spending the summer there. Miss Landry is the second daughter of Mr. J. M. Landry.

A canoe overturned by a sudden gust of wind was the cause of the sad mishap.

A commercial traveller was paddling along with a young man named J. Turcotte when the canoe upset.

Henri Barbeau, who is a son of a well-known printer of Quebec, witnessed the accident, and gallantly gave his life in an attempt to save that of the girl. Cries for help soon brought Mr. W. R. Turner, son of the Hon. R. Turner, M. L. C., to the scene, and in his turn he jumped into the artificial lake and grasped Turcotte by his coat as he was going to disappear. Search was immediately started to recover the two bodies, but it was not until three hours later that they were fished out of the lake.

Both the girl and the boy had been caught by the lily pads, and had sunk head first in a bed of mud.

The parents of the two victims had gone to Chateau Richer for an afternoon excursion.

A Safe Port

A total loss of one ship only, in more than a quarter of a century, is a unique record for any port. Halifax harbor (Nova Scotia), which makes the claim, is one of the safest in the world. No other port in Eastern Canada has so clean a sheet. At most, if not all, of the competing ports—including New York—on the same coast, ships have to wait for the tide, whereas at Halifax the mariner has no such embargo on his movements.

A Rideau Girl is Shot Dead

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Aug. 11.—A shocking tragedy took place on Saturday night at Rideau, four miles north of Wesport, when Edith Hawkins, an English girl, nine years old, only two months in Canada, was shot and killed at the home of David Laceck by a gun in the hand of Herbert Wilialms, a young man placed in that vicinity some years ago by the Barnado Home.

Both the young people were alone in the kitchen when the accident happened and apparently the girl was sitting on a stool about twelve feet from where Williams was standing. The shot took full effect in the region of the liver, and the girl died before medical assistance could be secured.

Owing to the circumstances of the fatality, Williams was taken into custody by County Constable Steele, and will remain in his charge until after the inquest, which will be held tomorrow night. Williams declares that it was entirely an accident and that he did not know the gun was loaded. Other reports in circulation allege that the shooting followed a quarrel between Williams and the deceased.

Five Thousand Panic-Stricken in New York Storm

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Lightning struck a big elm tree that sheltered 150 people in Sunday's storm at Pelham Bay Park. It killed an Italian, as yet unidentified. It broke off a great bough, which crashed to the ground, falling upon twenty of the crowd.

Seven or eight were so badly hurt by the lightning and by the falling bough that they had to be held fast on the long ride to the hospital lest in their writhing they hurt each other worse.

The dreadful flash and thunderclap threw into a panic five thousand other pleasure-seekers in the park, some of them under trees. There was a mad stampede for the trolley cars. Men, women and children plunged through the mud toward them. A deep ditch lines the road. Many fell into it.

In a few minutes the ditch was full of struggling men and women. As they tried to rise others ran over them, and left them unconscious. The women's clothes were torn off in the fight to gain the cars.

The bolt that killed one left twenty unconscious under the elm.

Peddlers Beaten With Axe and Bar

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—Charged with highway robbery and aggravated assault, Joseph R. Patryulk, Martin Maroway and Stephen Sipousky, were arrested to-day by Constable Bribant, of the Point St. Charles police station. It is alleged they held up Joseph Berger and Benjamin Berger, peddlers, and took away their money, after a battle with guns and an axe.

With their heads swathed in bandages the Bergers appeared in the Police Court to-day. They told Judge Leet that when they displayed a roll of bank notes they were attacked by "the gang", with an axe, an iron bar and a gun. They had to capitulate, they said, and hand over their cash.

The accused were taken to the Recorder's Court, where they were charged with being drunk and disorderly; and then sent over to the criminal courts, where the more serious charge was registered against them.

A CAMPAIGN OF ODDITIES.

When the Log Cabin and Hard Cider Enthusiasts Rejoiced.

Political enthusiasm has taken many forms during the lifetime of this nation. The Harrison-Van Buren presidential campaign of 1840 was in some respects the most remarkable the country has ever seen. "From May till November," says one historian, "it seemed as if all ablebodied citizens simply went about in processions to attend mass meetings."

The great oddity of the campaign was the log cabin, the coon and the cider barrel. The log cabin idea originated with an opposition paper which had said slightingly that "William Henry Harrison better go back to Indiana and stay there in his log cabin drinking hard cider."

The taunt was taken up by Harrison's followers. Log cabins sprang up all over the Union. In every town there was a house warming, and the log cabin was thrown open to the public amid general rejoicing. On the roof was a live raccoon, and a barrel of cider stood before the door, where any one who desired might drink all he chose.

It was a campaign of oddities. Some of the symbols have never been surpassed for genuine absurdity.—Magazine of American History.

CAMPERS DROWNED

Two Toronto Boys Tipped From Canoe at Sparrow Lake.

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—Sparrow Lake was the scene of the drowning of two Toronto boys on Saturday, when they upset a canoe in a squall. Creighton Robinson, aged 23, of 308 Robert street, and Edward Vrohman, aged 14, of 177 Harbord street, were the victims. Both were members of the Massey Camp of the Fred Victor Mission.

In order that Vrohman might visit his mother, who was staying at a cottage on the opposite side of the lake, Robinson offered to take the boy across in a canoe, the two starting out in the canoe shortly before noon on Saturday.

When they were about half way across the lake a heavy squall came up and the young men steered the craft to a small island situated on the lake not far from where they were. After reaching the island they gathered a number of stones and placed them in the front of the canoe to act as ballast, doing this so they would be able to successfully continue the journey across.

The youths only got a short distance from the island when they were seen to be in distress and a moment later the canoe capsized, both the occupants disappearing.

The double drowning was witnessed from the verandah of the Lakeview Hotel, which is about a mile and a half further down the river. From the hotel a motor boat was at once despatched to the spot where the young men were seen to sink, but a floating paddle was all that remained.

Creighton Robinson, the older of the two victims of the drowning, was the eldest son of J. S. Robinson of 308 Robert street, a department head of the T. Eaton Company's store. The young man was a member of the registration staff at the Toronto General Postoffice, and had been with the postoffice here for the past six years. He was president of the Epworth League of Trinity Methodist Church, and also a member of the choir.

The parents of Edward Vrohman, the 14-year-old boy who sank with Robinson, resided at 177 Harbord street.

FOUR ARE SAVED

Motor Boat Party Nearly Lost Lives by Fire.

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—When their motor boat caught fire in the lake just west of the Humber River shortly after 11 o'clock Saturday night four young people had a very narrow escape from being burned to death or drowned. But for the plucky work of the two youths in the boat and a daring rescue by residents of the Lake Shore road two or more fatalities would have resulted. The motor boat party consisted of: Frank F. Reeves, jr., aged 20, College street, Humber Bay; Winnie Harding, aged 19, stop 14, Lake Shore road, Mimico; Thomas Roberts (Skidmore), aged 21, Cockburn avenue, Humber Bay; Gertrude Williams, aged 20, stop 14, Mimico.

The two girls were in a hysterical condition when taken off the launch and lapsed into unconsciousness. They were reported to be much better last night, while the young men have completely recovered

The accident occurred in the lake half way between the Humber River and Mimico Creek, or almost opposite stop 9 on the Lake Shore road. Roberts was in charge of the launch, which had been rented, and altho he had had considerable experience with gasoline engines, this season was his first in running a marine engine. Reeves also had worked around gasoline engines of different types while in the west, but had never run a motor boat.

After going up and down the river the party decided to take a little ride up the lake past the houses of some friends. They were on the point of turning around and returning to the boathouse at Humber Bay when the engine stopped. Roberts attempted to start it again and failing in this looked around for the trouble.

WOLVES AFTER THEM

So Say Minnesota Couple Who Were Lost in Woods.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 10.—(Special.)—According to their own story, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Boyd of Minneapolis were in danger of being overtaken by wolves while out camping in Northern Minnesota, near upper Red Lake, recently. They went for a walk thru the woods, lost their way and at night, as they were going in the direction of what they believed to be the camp, they crossed an open space, only to see the gleaming eyes of two wolves staring them in the face.

Mrs. Boyd became frantic, while Mr. Boyd built a fire to keep the dangerous denizens of the northern wilds at a distance. The ruse succeeded, for, altho the wolves paced back and forth all thru the night, they never came nearer than twelve feet.

At daybreak the Boyds made their way back to camp, which was not more than a half mile distant. Mr. Boyd is chief clerk in the Vendome Hotel, Minneapolis.

SIMPLICITY IN THE HOME.

There Is Such a Condition as Having Too Many Furnishings.

Many nervous, irritable, dissatisfied, unhappy women would become calm and contented if they would store, give or throw away half of their belongings. Some have abandoned elegant residences and taken their families into hotels or boarding houses who could have continued to keep up their homes if, instead of giving up their houses themselves, they had done away with the superfluous furnishings.

Some one, often the mistress herself, must clean and care for every article of furnishing, no matter how humble its use or how ornamental its function, and this round of duties proves many times to be a grievous burden on delicate shoulders.

There is such a thing possible as having too many utensils and tools to work with, so that taking out, replacing and keeping them clean and in order add to the daily labor. Too much furniture in a room, so that walking through it seems a perilous attempt to steer a course without disaster, too many garments to wear, for time is consumed in caring for them, and even in choosing what to put on.—Suburban Life Magazine.

A Widow's Curious Cap.

A very curious cap forms the "widow's weeds" of the Australian aborigine in one part of the great island continent. Near the northeast bend of the Murray river it is the custom for widows to attend upon the tombs of their departed lords. Then after shaving their heads they cover them with pipe clay kneaded into a paste. The head is first covered with a net to prevent the clay from sticking too tightly to the skin, a misfortune which is partly averted by the amount of grease with which every Australian native is anointed. A layer of this clay several inches in thickness is plastered over the head and when dry forms a sort of skullcap exactly fitting the head on which it was molded. As it weighs several pounds, the widow's cap cannot be comfortable.

BEMIS HURTS HIS HAND

RUMORS OF A BASEBALL WAR

Toronto, Aug. 10.—Rumors are travelling about to the effect that the major league baseball magnates will be drawn into a baseball war before the opening of next season. It is said that the Federal League plans an eastern invasion, also that the Baseball Players' Fraternity, which includes practically all big league players, will demand a number of changes in the present contracts between players and clubs. Furthermore, it is stated that the Fraternity will take up the cause of the players in the International League and American Association looking towards the abrogation of the much-condemned salary limit.

MEEKNESS DOESN'T HELP IN BIG LEAGUES

New York, Aug. 10.—Willie Mitchell has become a great pitcher because he has ceased to be a good-natured guy.

When Willie joined the Naps he was the object of much kidding. The players took advantage of him because he was mild-mannered and seldom got back at them.

Willie wasn't much of a hand at getting back. He never liked to hurt another fellow's feelings. As a result the players lacked confidence in his ability and Willie also lacked confidence in himself. That was why he was sent to Toledo last year and why he was on the ragged edge this spring.

Manager Birmingham took him aside one day and told him to cut out being good-natured. "Don't take anything from anybody," said Birmy.

Mitchell perked up. He came back strong in the kidding matches and the player soon ceased to bother him. He was no longer the mild-tempered Willie that came up from the south with a wonderful curve ball and a perpetual smile.

When Willie said a thing, he meant it, and the players knew it. Somehow or other they began to play better ball behind him. They felt that the new Willie Mitchell could win and worked their heads off behind him.

As a result Mitchell has become the Naps' most dependable pitcher. When Birmy is anxious to win a game he picks Willie to do the twirling, and the former mild-natured lad generally comes through.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON

New York, Aug. 10.—Looking at it in an offhand, impersonal sort of way—it is Bob Edgren of the New York Evening World who is doing the lamping stunt—"doesn't it seem about time to drop that "grand old man" line when when mentioning Christy Mathewson."

Looking at it according to the directions prescribed by Dr. Edgren, and also by and large, and up one side and down t'other, and taking into consideration box scores and averages, and such like, it does seem that Bob is right, as usual, and that the "grand old man" thing should be taken out on some dark night thrown into the water, and held there until it stops bubbling and the attending physician pronounces life to be extinct. And in support of this statement there is the following timely statistics: Christopher Mathewson will celebrate his thirty-third milestone to-day.

Now, I take it, and I think even Doc Osler would take it, that a party of thirty-three summers is not a grand or any other variety of old man. Looking at it from the present angle there appears to be no particular reason why Big Six should not go right on hurling the pill for another decade. No other pitcher has ever had the art and science of saving his wing down to so fine a point as Matty. Early in his career as a hurler, Mathewson doped it out that the average batter has only one chance in three of swatting the leather safely, even if given a good opportunity. Having arrived at this conclusion, with the aid of a college education at Bucknell, Matty decided always to save himself for the time of need, and has been following the program ever since.

Matty was playing with Norfolk, in the Virginia State league, in 1900, when he was drafted by Cincinnati. Before the 1901 season opened the Reds traded him to the Giants for Amos Rusie. The sun of the great Rusie was even then fading, and his career was over before Matty's was fairly begun. Rusie is now a plumber at Seattle, while Mathewson is—well, even the natives of Timbucto must know what Matty is. But, then, the chief mission of the Reds has always been to be stung, and when they swapped Matty for Amos they were certainly stung good and proper.

UMPIRING BAD IN THE MAJORS

P. T. Knox, baseball writer of the New York Telegram, takes a slap at the umpires in the major leagues in the following article:

The unanimous opinion is that the umpiring this season has been unusually bad in both major leagues. Johnson and Lynch have scoured the country for efficient officials, but it appears as if competant umpires are scarcer than good ball players.

It is hard to understand why this should be. It is a profession that offers good remuneration and the hours are certainly great. "Tim" Hurst once said, "You have to stand for a lot of abuse, but you can't beat the hours."

One would think that more baseball players would become umpires after their playing days are over. It is an interesting thing that of the sixteen umpires in the American and National Leagues, but five of them have ever been major league players and all five were pitchers.

It would appear that catchers more than other players would be qualified to umpire behind the plate at least. Every fan knows how frequently a catcher tells a umpire that he missed a strike, and yet there is not one of the umpires who ever was a catcher.

The sixteen major league umpires are O'Day, Emslie, Rigler, Byron, Klem, Orth, Brennon and Eason in the National League, and Dineen, Egan, Connolly, Ferguson, Evas, Hildebrand, O'Loughlin, and Sheriden in the American League. O'Day, Orth, Emslie, Dineen and Eason are the only ones who have played major league ball.

Hank O'Day and Connie Mack at one time formed the battery for the Washington club. Bob Emslie was once a pitcher for Pittsburg. Bill Dineen used to pitch for Boston. "Smiling Al" Orth was the curveless wonder of the Yanks, and Mal Eason pitched at Brooklyn.

Two of the best umpires, Bill Evans and Bill Klem, never played anything but amatur baseball, yet they are conceded to be about the best there are.

ROWING

DONS WILL SEND DIBBLE FOR THE DIAMOND SCULLS

Toronto, Aug. 10.—The sensational rowing of Bob Dibble of the Dons at the America national regatta, which closed at Boston on Saturday, and at the Canadian Henley at St. Catharines a week ago, stamps the young Don sculler as a very promising candidate for the Diamond Sculls next season. In fact, arrangements have all but been completed even now to send him to Henley next year. He was told by his fellow-members of the Dons that if his showing at the Canadian and American regattas warranted a trip after the diamonds he would be sent. Dibble "delivered" handsomely.

Saturday was his fourth defeat of E. B. Butler of the Argos, and the third in two days. Before winning the national championship he won the association singles and assisted Lepper in winning the senior doubles. "He rowed himself out" to such an extent that he collapsed twice. He laughs at the report of Eddie Durnan and thereby becomes a professional. Dibble is bent on taking a crack at the Diamond Sculls, and ought to fully justify the enterprise of the Dons in sending him even should he not win the world's greatest rowing honors. Needless to say the Dons are very highly elated, and quite naturally so. The hustling East End club to have three scullers—Dibble, Finley and Lepper—who can beat Butler. Finley and Dibble will improve next spring, both being new at sculling. Dibble rowed last year, but Finley whose showing at St. Catharines was quite sensational, was never in a single until this season.

THE RING.

DILLON'S EASY WIN

Winnipeg, Aug. 10.—Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, scored an easy and decisive victory over George Ashe, of New York, in a 12-round bout last night. Dillon landed at will and finished fresh. Ashe took a lot of punishment, and in the last round rushed to a clinch to save himself from a knockout.

LONG LIVED LEGEND OF DEMON BARBER

Sweeny Todd's Fictitious Deeds in Fleet Street—Historic House Pulled Down

It is more than likely that the gruesome story of Sweeny Todd, the horrible barber of Fleet street, will cling to the famous London thoroughfare long after every one of the supposed scenes of his atrocities has been completely cleared away.

The actual building in which Sweeney Todd was supposed to have carried on his murderous trade was recently demolished, and once again the legend—for legend it is from beginning to end—was revived.

The house referred to was 185 Fleet street, next door to the famous old church of St. Dunstan-in-the-West. Here Sweeney Todd, as the legend has it, was wont to pose to the unsuspecting world as a harmless and even useful, necessary barber.

His barber's chair was supposed to have been fixed over a trapdoor, and no sooner had the customer taken his seat and lain back confidently for the "clean shave" guaranteed by Sweeney Todd, than the trapdoor would fall, the customer would disappear beneath the floor, and down below the work of darkness would be completed with a blow on the head.

Sweeney Todd was not a man—so the legend would have us believe—who wasted anything. He would not only take great care of any money or jewels on the persons of his victims, but even their bodies were made to serve the ends of his demon machinations. What was more likely to such a creature, than that the flesh should be served up next door as pies!

Such was the legend. The truth as searched out not many years ago showed that Sweeney Todd should really be classed with Mrs. Harris—there was no such a person. No barber was ever known, in Fleet street who treated his customers with other than courtesy, and with all despatch though of a different kind from that meted out by the "demon barber."

So completely had this story got hold of the public that even Charles Dickens makes use of it in "Martin Chuzzlewit." And when, in some excavations on the spot, a pile of human bones was dug up, it seemed that the seal of complete proof was set upon the story of the barber's butcheries. Nobody seemed to see that the bones were, of course, those of persons long buried and forgotten in the churchyard of St. Dunstan.

By some curious means this legend arose out of a true story from Paris. In this there was a barber, and there was a pie-maker, but it is not supposed that they joined forces in the manner suggested by the Sweeney Todd story. An ingenious writer was responsible for bringing the story over the Channel, and fixing it—apparently for ever—on Fleet street. A play was even written round the story.

PUNCH'S HUNCH

Tumor in the Brain is Cause of Eccentric Growth Says Professor

According to Professor W. Stirling, who lectured at the Royal Institution London, that eccentric individual "Punchinello" is an acromegalac.

This description he applied to persons with certain parts of the body developed in gigantic proportions. Their state was brought about by a tumor in the brain, and as this enlarged so the person grew.

Describing the disease, the professor stated that an acromegalac in most cases could be identified by his large hands and feet and jaw. In some cases a person's tongue grew so much that it became too large for the mouth. Acramegaly did not affect all its victims in the same way, however, for giants abnormal in every proportion had lived at different times.

It was a curious fact, added the professor, that the bones of all such giants remained in their infantile state till their usually early death. It very often happened that, after reaching a certain state of abnormal growth, they became hunch-backed and had a protruding chest. Hence the description of "Punch" as an acromegalac.

The "A" in Cocoanut

How an error led to the accepted spelling of cocoanut was explained by Sir Everard im Thurn, in the course of an address to the members of the Royal Horticultural Society at London.

He said that in the course of its growth the nut which was now known as the cocoanut was similar to the face of a monkey, and so the Spanish and Portuguese word "coco," meaning a grin or grimace, was attached to it.

When Dr. Johnson was compiling his famous dictionary he had an article on the "coco nut," but a careless proof reader passed a mistake in the spelling of the word, the compositor having inserted an "a," and the word appeared as "coccanut," a spelling which has been used ever since.

KEEP KNIVES LIKE NEW

Some Timely Hints About Table and Kitchen Cutlery

A word to "those about to marry." Don't buy cheap knives! It is an expensive economy, for in a very short time the handles will work loose, the rivets will come out, and the blades, being of inferior steel, will neither polish well nor sharpen.

The following hints, which might be cut out and pasted on the knife-board or machine, will, if followed, lengthen the lives of your table knives and keep them in good appearance for years.

Never wet a knife-handle other than those of the same material as the blade. Have a "knife-jug" of such depth that if filled to the top with hot water the knife-handles are untouched. Handles that are indiscriminately plunged into water, not only become loose, but the color of the ivory, composition, or bone permanently turns dirty.

Those who have to clean knives would find their work much lightened if they warmed the knife-board before using it. And if women would only realize that half a minute spared to wipe dirty knives as soon as they come from the table means much labor saved, they would gladly do it.

Stains on knives can be instantly removed if rubbed with a piece of raw potato dipped in brickdust or knife powder.

Knives that have been used for onions can be rid of the taste if the blades are run two or three times through a raw potato.

Handles that have become loose can be refixed by half-filling the hole with resin and quicklime, equal parts. Then heat the blade and insert it in the hole.

Knife-blades which have worn thin at the top—through bad cleaning—should be snapped off, and rounded with a file. Ivory-handled knives, if discolored, should be cleaned with lemon-juice and salt. To repolish the ivory, scour it with the finest sand paper, make a paste of whitening and oil, and apply with a piece of flannel rubbing it well, and polishing with a lightly oiled linen rag.

Bone handles should be sandpapered and polished; and pearl handles cleaned by rubbing with a soft cloth dipped in fine salt. Polish with a chamois leather.

"Reserve knives" can either be oiled and wrapped in brown paper before being put away, or dusted with finely powdered quicklime, and wrapped in flannel. This latter is the better plan, as there would be no suspicion of an oily taste if the knives were suddenly needed.

Special knives should always be kept for onions, bread, and for hot fat. The two latter will make the sharpest knife dull in a very short time.

Very good knives should be cleaned in charcoal powder. It gives a wonderful silver-like polish.

WOMEN FARMERS

Sheep farming and the raising of pigs has been successfully carried out by women in the West. For both of these enterprises a considerable amount of money is required at the outset as suitable quarters for the stock must be built at once after the initial outlay for land and stock, says a writer in the Toronto Globe. Then too, several people, one or more of whom should have some special training in the caring and raising of stock would be needed to do the work.

In those districts where an occasional coyote or wolf prowls around the sheep are a great temptation, and being unable to make much resistance are often lost. The pigs, on the other hand, put up a much better fight and so are very seldom attacked. But for any kind of stock the farmer must have water, and this is not always available.

A woman experienced in the farm and ranch life of the West suggests that the intending purchaser obtain some training in the branch or line of work she chooses before going out. Then select the district most suitable, and visit it, or have a competent friend visit it before purchasing. In this way the failure, or at least the poor results that have been the fate of enthusiastic but careless settlers will be avoided.

Memorial Stones

In every part of Palestine, along the roadside and in the fields, particularly on the hilltops, may be seen piles of stones, usually not over three feet high. If we should question a native about them he would tell us that they are "memorial stones" set up in recognition of some special providence of God. If we should examine the stones closely we would discover that they are blackened with oil, which indicates their sacredness, as they had been anointed. These stone heaps actually became objects of worship so common that Moses issued edicts against them. —Christian Herald.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

CARNIVAL IS OPENED

Hamilton Inaugurates Its Centennial Celebration.

Twenty-Five Thousand Visitors Have Arrived in the Mountain City and Streets Present an Air of Festivity—Sir John Gibson Formally Opens the Week of Merry-Making.

HAMILTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—For the past five hours Hamilton has been trying to remember what things were like before the storms broke on this the first day of Centennial Week. It can't be done. Last night Hamilton was a city, tonight it is just a merry riot. The mountain city, which for a hundred years has been growing up, is showing what it can do when father and mother are not looking. James street an dthe Gore are, of course, the centres of celebration.

It is impossible to get away from it. The narrowest streets are the most crowded, and after a few hours on the sidewalk you feel lost unless someone else is treading on your heels or blowing a horn in your ears. It is intoxicating to be in the crowd, jostling and jostled in the midst of a medley of discord that drowns out the band. Before darkness fell you could see that the streets were decorated with banners and bunting, but now it is all lights and joyous, thronging along in groups of two and three and five. No one is alone. Conventions are thrown away, for it is carnival, and it only comes once in a century.

Twenty-five thousand visitors have arrived already and 1500 are on the way; hotel accommodation has been growing scarcer all day, until bed and board are hardly to be had at all. Hamilton hotels were only built to house 14,000.

SAMUEL BARKER, M.P.
President of the Carnival and Old Boys' Reunion.

Centennial week was formally opened at 11 this morning, when Sir John Gibson, with a knife of gold, cut the barrier of ribbon which guarded the gate to the armories. Simultaneously all over the city whistles and bells loosed their jargon of sound and the crowds pressing along every street felt an added thrill as each resident and old boy felt that the big week, so long expected, was at last fairly under way.

Nearly all the business houses closed down shortly after 1, and very soon Main street and James street, near the Gore, were almost blocked. Instead of lorries and drays, automobiles held the right of way, and it was a strenuous session for the police traffic squad. Ferris wheels, palaces of fun, and all varieties of amusements were in course of erection in the public squares and at street intersections, and band music seemed to be everywhere.

The armories, where an enormous exhibit of Hamilton-made articles is on view, has not drawn much of a crowd since dark. It is the entrance ways to the animal shows and pleasure devices which are packed, these and the city hall steps, where hundreds pause each moment to rest for awhile, away from the swirl of the curb. In a moment they are back again, tho, for it is as fascinating as a snake's rise. There is no lawlessness. The town is wide open for pleasure, but not for misdemeanor.

False mustaches, wigs and masks are frequent. One man wears a big sun bonnet, another comes a bright colored parasol a foot in diameter, still a third has featherpuff in each hand with which he tickles the neck of each pretty girl that passes and there are thousands of them. The girls are not mere spectators either, they take the offensive in hundreds of cases, tipping off stiff straw sailors and showering the crowd with confetti. On the first night of Carnival no one will be still. Now at it draws to midnight, the packed area contracts, but there is no thinning out of the crush.

It is hard to realize that such tumult and abandon is to continue for six days, but so much as a program committee can do has been done, and energetically.

Tomorrow afternoon, at Britannia Park, a two-storey brick house is to be built and decorated within the space of a few hours. Mayor Allan will lay the cornerstone, and the house will be given as a prize to the winner of a guessing competition. Aviation flights will be of daily occurrence. On Thursday evening 20 bands will enliven a military tattoo at the cricket grounds, for which every seat has been sold already. Games and races will figure largely in Friday's program, and the centennial will work itself up to a climax Saturday evening, when King Carnival will hold sway in the centre of the city.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—At the Montreal stock yards, West End Market, receipts of live stock for the week ended Aug. 9 were 1600 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs, 2400 hogs and 1000 calves. For sale today 1100 cattle, 1800 sheep and lambs, 1250 hogs and 525 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle today, but the feeling was easy, owing to the increased offerings of the medium and common class, and the fact that the demand from packers was somewhat limited for all grades, as they carried over from last week a larger stock of dressed beef than usual on account of warm weather. Choice steers sold at high as $7, but the bulk of the trade in choice stock was done at $6.25 to $6.50 per cwt.

Owing to large supply of lambs the tone of the market was weaker and prices showed a decline of 25c per cwt. Local buyers paid $6.75 to $7 for western, and $6.25 to $6.50 for Quebec stock. Sheep were quiet and about steady at $4.50 for ewes. The demand for calves was good and sales of milk-fed stock were made at 5½c, and grass fed at 3½c per pound.

The feature of the hog trade is the weaker feeling which has developed in the market since this day week, and prices have declined 25 to 30c per cwt., owing to increased receipts.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.50 to $6.75; medium, $5 to $6; common, $4 to $4.25; canners, $5 to $5.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5 to $5.25; medium, $4 to $4.50; bulls, $4.25 to $5.50; milkers, choice, $70 to $75 each; common and medium, $60 to $65 each, springers, $50 to $55; sheep, ewes, $4.50; bucks and culls, $4 to $4.25; lambs, $6.25 to $7; hogs, f.o.b., $10.50 to $10.70; calves, $3 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Cattle—Receipts 14,500; market, strong; beeves, $7.20 to $9.20; Texas steers, $6.85 to $7.90; stockers and feeders, $5.40 to $7.75; cows and heifers, $3.65 to $8.60; calves, $8.25 to $11.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 28,000; market, steady; light, $8.90 to $9.35; mixed, $8.10 to $9.30; heavy, $8.75 to $9; rough, $7.50 to $8.05; pigs, $4.75 to $8.50; bulk of sales, $8.30 to $8.95.

Sheep—Receipts, 37,000; market, 10c lower; native, $3.50 to $4.85; yearlings, $5.10 to $5.85; lambs, native, $7.25 to $7.40.

Will Increase Privy Council.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(C.A.P.)—Lord Haldane's appellate jurisdiction bill, which already has been approved by the house of lords, and which provides for two additional judges to sit on the judicial committee of the privy council, passed its third reading in the commons last night. The amendment to reduce the number to one was rejected by a large majority.

Munro Ferguson thought the proposed judges would not be wanted if all the present ones were "active."

COURSE WAS PROPER.

Nothing Else to Do But Recognize Huerta, Says Britain.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—(Can. Press).—The British Government, nettled by the comment of certain American newspapers concerning Great Britain's recognition of President Huerta, declares that the comment is based on a misconception of facts. It also repudiates the insinuation that the influence of powerful financial interests were used in bringing about recognition. In a statement issued today the government says:

"The recognition of President Huerta was the recognition of a provisional president pending an election. It was done on the advice of the British minister to Mexico, as being likely to assist in the restoration of order—an important consideration, in view of the large British interests involved.

"The French and German Governments also recognized President Huerta after a reception by him of the whole diplomatic party, at which a congratulatory speech was made in their behalf by the American ambassador."

DEPUTIES BETTER.

U. S. Regulars at Calumet Will Be Replaced by Sheriffs.

CALUMET, Mich., Aug. 11.—(Can. Press.)—One thousand of the 2,500 troops which have occupied the copper mining district of Northern Michigun are on their way home and their places will be filled by armed deputies. The sheriff has recruited his forces up to about 1,000, and believes he will be able to take care of the strike situation unless there comes a severe clash between strikers and the men returning to work.

The strikers renewed their pickets today around Calumet and Hecla and the Quincy mines, where it was reported work was to be started, but only pumpmen and shaftmen were sent underground, and the pickets did not try to stop them. An attempt will be made to resume actual mining to-morrow.

PROGRESS IS SLOW.

Underwood Tariff Bill in U. S. Senate is Hard Fought.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(Special).—Democratic leaders in the senate are considerably perturbed over the failure to make progress on the tariff bill, and for several days informal conferences have been held with progressive Republicans and regular Republican leaders in the hope that some means to hasten consideration might be found. It was stated tonight, however, that nothing definite had been accomplished.

For the purpose of sounding Republican sentiment in the matter, Democratic leaders have enquired what progress could be made on the tariff, should it be definitely agreed that the senate would not take up the currency bill at the present session. No assurances, it was reported, were given as to a definite time for voting on the tariff, but it was asserted by minority leaders that such an assurance undoubtedly would lead to earlier action on the tariff.

Certain suggestions also have been made as to possible amendments affecting wheat, barley and other agricultural rates, but minority members were not disposed to bargain, because they could receive no assurances of confidential action on amendments of this character.

The informal negotiations gave rise to a rumor that currency legislation would not be insisted upon at the special session, but this was declared to be entirely without foundation in so far as the views of the president and a majority of the Democratic senators were concerned.

Warden Takes No Chances.

KINGSTON, Aug. 11.—(Special.)—The warden of the penitentiary is not inclined to take any chances with the Stony Mountain desperadoes given long terms in the prison for making an escape last fall. For months these four men, accompanied by McNeill, a Woodstock youth implicated in the escape, were kept in close confinement, but just recently McNeill, Brown and Kelly have been taken from the confinement ward, and are working in the shops in the prison. McNeill is working in the shoe shop, while the other two are learning the stone cutting trade. Bonner and Jones are still looked upon as too dangerous to be at large, and are still kept in close confinement.

BEAUTIES OF THE MILKY WAY

The milky way or galaxy is an apparent ring extending entirely around the universe of stars visible in the largest telescope. It is composed of suns in literal millions. They are so remote that as seen from the earth they appear to be close to each other, while in reality they are separated by millions and millions of miles.

To the eye, the belt of soft light looks like a continuous band of clots of pearl but telescopes have the effect of bringing objects nearer. This separates the filmy cloud into many millions of glittering but minute points on the black background of space. At a distance forest trees seem to be close together, but as they are approached they separate and stand alone.

It is next to impossible to describe the matchless beauty of the milky way as seen in a telescope of great power. Carpet a large room with black velvet. Have many electric lights in the ceiling. Throw down and scatter all over the black floor a bushel of minute diamonds, rubies, pearls, sapphires, opals, amethysts and other gems. Then turn on the light. You would have a faint imitation of the supernal glories of the galactic hosts. For the appalling depths of space look black in our great telescope.

In places the suns look by perspective as though they were arranged in piles, heaps and banks, or built up into colossal windows, or twisted into spirals, or dashed into wisps and cosmic spray.

In some places the concentration is so great and dense that only the most powerful telescopes on earth can magnify enough to bring out details. A few clusters exist that have not, so far, been resolved into these needle points. And the height of human happiness is to watch these vast congeries of distant suns in a huge telescope.—National Magazine.

FOR THE FARMER

Odds and Ends of News and Timely Suggestions

Dairy stables should be well ventilated, lighted and drained. They should have tight floors and plainly constructed walls. Keep the stable and dairy room in good condition, and then insist that the dairy, factory or place where the milk goes be kept equally well.

Whitewash the dairy stable twice a year; use land plaster in the manure gutters daily. Use no dry, dusty feed just previous to milking; if fodder is dusty sprinkle it before it is fed.

Do not move the cows faster than a comfortable walk while on the way to the place of milking or feeding.

Never allow cows to be excited by hard driving, abuse, loud talking or unnecessary disturbance. Do not expose them to cold or storms. Do not change the feed suddenly.

Feed cows liberally, and use only palatable feedstuffs; in no case should decomposed or mouldy material be used. Provide water in abundance easy of access, and always pure, fresh, but not too cold.

An English-born Canadian, now growing apples in Nova Scoela, made successful experiments with growing the famous Caville Blanc in the land of his adoption.

Some of the apple trees in the wonderful apple belt of Nova Scotia are fully two hundred years old, and still yield their full quota of luscious fruit.

To prove the possibilities of an acre of land, and to interest young men in Agriculture, the Ontario Department of Agriculture offers a prize in each county to the young man who produces the greatest profit from an acre of land.

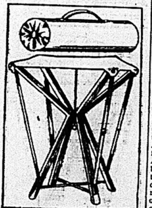
No garden is complete without some of the herbs. Among the best for use are mint, sage, lavender, summer savory, thyme, annis, coriander, dill and winter savory.

The butcher can never pay the breeder what a good heifer calf is worth when she is sold as veal.

STEEL FOLDING CHAIR

Can be Collapsed Into Smaller Compass Than Music Roll

Here is a steel folding chair that can be collapsed into a compass smaller than that of the ordinary music roll. There are numerous folding chairs, but the strong point (literally) of this one is the material of which it is made—steel. The frame is guaranteed to support 400 pounds and the illustration so completely explains the principle that it is unnecessary to go into that. The seat is of strong cotton duck, and from each corner stout straps reach down to the lower legs. Such chairs are handy for automobilists, artists on sketching tours, campers and picnic parties and for use on the verandas of cottages and clubhouses. When folded the chair is carried in a waterproof cover of cylindrical shape and with a handle to it.



WILL HOLD 400 POUNDS.

MARKING SHEEP

France Objects to Daubing on of Tar or Pitch Solution

The means prevailing at present for the marking of sheep for the purpose of identification is unsatisfactory for the reason that the coal tar or pitch solution which is made use of has a serious effect on the wool, not only where the mark has been made on the hair, but all that which is being put through the cleansing process at that time. Such wool brings a decreased price. The National Society of Agriculture of France investigated the matter and the report of those appointed to do the work contains the following: It has been proposed to use analine colors, but this is even worse, since the colors do not merely soil the fleece, but actually dye it. Other means are not lacking, notably that of tattooing the ear of the sheep. Also, a small metallic plate can be fastened in the ear, as is done with African sheep to prove that they have been "clavelized," i.e., inoculated with the special serum which combats their dangerous and contagious eruptive malady, rot or scab. The Chamber of Commerce advises the employment of a color composed of linseed oil, essence of turpentine and Prussian blue or similar color. It recommends marking on nose, forehead or nape of the neck.

OLD ONTARIO'S ROADS

In the organized counties of old Ontario there are 50,000 miles of road according to a report made by Mr. W. A. McLean of the Highways Department of the Provincial Government. A classification would be approximately as follows:

Trunk roads connecting the large towns and cities	2,500 miles
County or leading market roads	6,000 miles
(a) Main township roads	25,000 miles
(b) Secondary township roads	16,500 miles

The roads described as trunk roads are, with the exception of a few connecting links, among the most important of the county roads. Main township roads comprise principally the concession roads on which numerous farms front and which converge into and create the traffic of trunk or county roads. Secondary township roads include the little travelled connecting roads.

CLEANING THE TEETH

The right way to brush teeth is to work the brush down from the gums to the teeth. The old way of rubbing the brush crosswise of the teeth is likely to cause recession of the gums. Some dentists claim that it leads eventually to Riggs disease.

To brush the teeth properly is a more tedious process than the common way, but it insures the welfare of both gums and teeth. Put the brush on the gums and brush toward the teeth and off their points. Thus the bristles serve to stimulate the gums and keep them in place as well as to clean the surfaces of the teeth. The surfaces of the molars may be cleaned in the ordinary way by a back and forth motion of the brush.

IVANHOE

JAMES GUNNING

Yesterday forenoon, about 11.30 o'clock, one of the oldest residents of this neighborhood, in the person of Mr. James Gunning passed away, at his home here, at the advanced age of 82 years and ten months.

Mr. Gunning was always a healthy, rugged man, until a few month ago, when he showed signs of decline, but nothing so serious was thought of until about five weeks ago. Since then he hadn't left the house very much, but was not confined to his bed until about two weeks ago, and since then he rapidly sank, until yesterday, when death ended his sufferings.

He was of Irish descent, being born in the County Down, Ireland, in October, 1830, and came to Canada in 1874, settling in Huntindon, where he had since resided. He was a man of good sound common sense, and one of the best neighbors, and will be greatly missed in this neighborhood.

Over fifty years ago he was married to Miss Charlotte Reid, who died suddenly over four years ago, and since that time Mr. Gunning had not taken a very active part in the work on the farm, but had visited among his family and relatives, who live within driving distance.

He is survived by two brothers and two sisters, John and William of St. Thomas, the former of whom came here two weeks ago on a visit; Mrs. I. McEwen, of Bannockburn, and Mrs. Dawson of Tyendinaga. He also leaves a family of two sons and five daughters, James on the homestead; William, and Mrs. Haig, of Hoard's Station; Mrs. L. Dafoe, of West Huntingdon; Mrs. Wm. Downey and Mrs. B. Davis of Manitoba, and Agnes of Buffalo. To these the heartfelt sympathy of the community is extended at this time.

Mr. Gunning was a staunch member of the Presbyterian church, and in politics was a Conservative.

He was a member of the Orange Lodge for over sixty years and the funeral service, which will be held to-morrow afternoon, will be under their auspices. The service will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, and interment will take place in West Huntingdon cemetery.

Speed Boat Wrecked On Errand Of Mercy

Crashed Into Motor Boat While Hurrying For Medicine For Dying Woman.

KINGSTON, Aug. 11.—Running wild with speed at a clip of thirty-eight miles an hour, in order to reach a dying woman, "The Baby", a speed boat owned by Andy Truesdell, of Ivey Lea, was smashed and cut in two by the "Overland", a motor boat from Grindstone, N. Y., near Gananoque, Thursday.

Two passengers were thrown into the river and might have been drowned but for the prompt assistance extended to them by the A. C. A. campers, on Sugar Island, who jumped into their canoes and saved the people.

It appears that in their hurry to get medicine for a dying woman the passengers did not take the essential precaution of putting on lights, and consequently were not seen till the boat was on top of them. The men from the other boat yelled to them, but the noise of the engine prevented them from hearing.

As soon as "The Baby" did see the boat it attempted to get on the right side, but the other one also turned to the right, but from the opposite direction, when the two crashed together.

Willie Wing, superintendent of Sugar Island, took the ill-fated passengers to their destination in his speed boat.

SAMSON HASKELL OF BENTLEY

—BY—

CHARLES A. MACFARLANE

(Copyright Applied For)

CHAPTER IV.

Unrequited Love

It had been a long and patient wait, extending over the major portion of his existence; and now, at the age of four and twenty, he was no nearer the consummation of his heart's desire than two and twenty years earlier—the date of her birth.

From the time his mother had found it necessary to rope him to the stove-leg, that she might know where to find him, Samson Haskell had been the slave of the nearest neighbor's daughter and only child, catering to her every wish, protecting her from the thousand and one pit-falls of child-life, and, anticipating some pleasing desire, had supplied it in a round-about manner, leaving himself so completely out of the act that the recipient never once suspected the source of its origin. And in return for his thoughtfulness and many sacrifices in her behalf she had hated him with an intensity peculiar to the petted and wilful child.

When her school life began his troubles increased an hundredfold. She had been under tuition less than a week, when she assumed the task of making him the most unpopular student in the school, was the instigator of numberless schemes tending to hamper him in his studies, or bring him before the school in an unfavorable light.

She would bribe others to pin "Samson the Fool", in large black letters to the back of his jacket; she placed tacks on the seat where he sat to see him jump; she tore pages from his reader and speller, poured ink over his writing book, stole his pens and pencils, and when he was reprimanded for uncleanness, or imperfect lessons, she partook of the innocence of a saint.

But, while aware of her misdeeds, he scorned the thought of being a party to her punishment, and refrained from reporting the condition of his school equipment to the teacher, even to suffering for acts of which every scholar knew Delilah Gaylord to be the author.

His hands, he argued mentally, were harder than hers, and could receive the hickory with less pain; he could never be the cause of her disgrace before the other students. It was hard lines, to be sure, but he did it for the sake of future prospects, which, he had great hopes, would turn in his favor. In spite of her antipathy, his boyish love for the young torment was unchangeable, and even when charged with aunrequited affection, he denied it not.

When a new teacher came to the school she at once located the animosity, and notified Miss Gaylord that Samson was entitled to better treatment, which must be accorded him by her, and for a time her demeanor underwent an improvement, with an occasional reference to Samson's exalted position as "Mary's pet lamb."

A month later the teacher, with a view to establishing a more friendly feeling, retained the two after the school session to talk over their differences, but only to put Delilah in a rage. She announced plainly that there could be nothing in common between herself and 'Zeke Haskell's fool;' that he never did, and never would, amount to anything, and the settlement would be a gainer if he died.

By way of helping the teacher in her effort for harmony, Samson remarked pleasantly that his desire had been to treat her with the respect due a lady, and, enlisting all his reserve courage, he turned to her, his earnest gray eyes looking intently into the brown, "The day will come, Delilah, when you'll be sorry for treating me so badly. The day will come, too, when you'll be glad to call yourself the wife of Samson Haskell, the richest man in Bentley county."

Instantly the pretty eyes flashed fire; the always ruddy cheeks turned to a brilliant red; and the tongue, noted for its power in repartee, broke loose, when in the following three minutes Samson received more information regarding himself than he had learned during all the years of his life. With a bound she left the teacher's platform, where the conference had taken place, and bolting through the door, nearly upset Theresa Harding, who awaited the outcome, that she might convey to his home the remains of poor Samson.

"You can have 'im if you want 'im, Theresa", exclaimed Delilah, as she darted from the doorstep. "He's no use to me," and racing up the rough road toward her home, was soon out of sight.

"I'm awful sorry, Samson", greeted the sympathetic Theresa, taking the crest fallen youth by the hand. "Delilah ought not to talk to you so. But she's sassy anyway, and jealous because we walk home with each other sometimes. Delilah is awful spiteful when she can't have her own way; but she'll get over it some day, and then she'll have a better feeling for you."

Theresa had always been his champion in the presence of Delilah, not only as a matter of principle, but because Samson's life-long rival, Henry Rollins, was much set by in her affections. It had been the bane of Theresa's young life to see Henry escort Delilah to her home with an air of rightful possession, totally ignoring herself and Samson, and as a natural sequence, she sought to comfort her companion in sorrow as a balm to her own troubled heart.

There was a substantial unity of feeling between those two that caused them to look to each other for fellowship withheld by Delilah and Henry.

Yet, despite his present uncomely appearance and crude mannerisms, the more Delilah lashed Samson with her tongue and spurned him with her adverse attitudes, the more he determined to be a credit to his nativity among his other ambitions being the desire for riches, influence, and the exalted positoin of president of the Board of Selectmen of Bentley.

Theresa Harding and William Feltus were the only true friends Samson possessed in the school prior to the coming of the new teacher, and while unusually large for his years, and physically powerful, the fact that Delilah had won the other scholars to her way of thinking, practically isolating the subject of their dislike, there was loneliness attached to his position that was pathetic in the extreme.

Theresa, usually friendly with Delilah, had, in conjunction with William, decided that Samson was being treated unfairly, and demonstrated their belief in plainly expressed words. By them Delilah had been repeatedly reminded that Samson did not originate from common stock,—that he was of honorable birth, and even though he had been born in a canvas covered wagon on the shore of Lake Bentley while his parents and grandparents were journeying from California to Maine, he was, through that incident the cause of the founding of the settlement, by his father, Ezekiel Haskell, who hired Delilah's father to chop wood for her parents because they had no money to build one for themselves. Because of this, and the fact that the settlement was named for Samson's grandmother Bentley and also that he was the first baby born on its soil, he was entitled to more respectful streatment; all of which advice Delilah scorned, and treated the "firstborn" with even more pronounced vindictiveness.

But while their disagreements over Samson were at times sharp, their friendship continued; and through it all the subject under discussion moved among his schoolmates in the even tenor of his way, bearing and forbearing as occasion required, yet overlooking no opportunity to advance the construction of his air castle, i.e., the coveted riches, the influence, and the municipal leadership.

Nothing so pleased Delilah as an opportunity to spell the word that sent Samson nearer the foot of the class. Herself an apt scholar, and ambitious to become an instructor of others, her lessons were always perfect, in which she exhibited a natural pride. As young Feltus frequently expressed it, "Dave Gaylord's gal is cut out for a schoolmam; she hain't got no boss, and an injustice starts a fracas on the spot."

At the age of seventeen Delilah had reached the limit of instruction at the Bentley school, and to equip their daughter for the profession she had chosen, the parents placed her in a boarding school some miles distant, from whence, two years later, she graduated with a diploma for teaching, and the following autumn was tendered and accepted a call from the committee of the district school at Crow's Corner, six miles from home, where she was to teach twenty scholars the science of letters for ten dollars per month and board, with the promise of a two dollar increase for the second term should her work prove satisfactory.

Canada's Exhibit To Cost $500,000

Natural Resources of Dominion to Form Basis of Showing—Provinces to Co-Operate—Building will be Begun in Autumn.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11.—Canada's plans for participation in the Panama Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, are yet in the formative stage, but the exhibit, it was learned to-day at the Department of Agriculture, will be on much the same lines as at similar exhibitions elsewhere. The natural resources of the country will, of course, be the basis of the showing to be made.

A year ago Mr. William Hutchison, Dominion Exhibition Commissioner, went to San Francisco on the instructions of the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agricultue, and selected a site for the Canadian building. It is the intention to start construction work this autumn.

The structure and the expenditure in arranging and transporting the exhibits, will cost probably half a million dollars. It will be of a design in keeping with the importance of the country.

In featuring the natural resources of the Dominion, there will be exhibits of all kinds of wheat and grain; fruit in the natural and preserved forms; vegetables; minerals; all kinds of wood produced in Canada, including pulp; fish, game, fur-bearing animals mounted, and other exhibits along the same line.

Curry Block at Frankford Burned

The village of Frankford, situated in Sidney Township, was last night visited by a disastrous fire, which destroyed the Curry block. The block was of brick and is owned by Mr. Samuel Curry of this city. At about 10.30 the fire broke out and in a few minutes the block was enveloped by flames. It was only by the most strenuous efforts that the flames were prevented from communicating to adjoining property. Adjacent to the burned building is Mr. B. Ostrom's drug store, and it was considerably damaged but was saved from destruction. In the burned block was situated the post office, McMahon's grocery and furniture store. Above the store was a large hall used for public gatherings. Nothing remains of the block but the bare walls. The loss will amount to several thousand dollars. Mr. Curry had an insurance of $3,600 on the building which will by no means cover the loss. The insurance upon the contents of McMahon's store and post office we were unable to ascertain. How the fire originated is not known.

Mexico Recalls Senor Didapp

MONTREAL, Aug. 11.—"Contradict news in the press regarding Senior Didapp being consul-general and that Mexico intends to cut off commercial relations with the United States."

Such was the effect of a wire, worded in Spanish, received by Mexican Consul-General for Canada, D. A. Ansell, Saturday morning and exhibited yesterday to a press representative. It was signed by Senor Garza Aldape, Acting Secretary of Foreign Affairs for Mexico.

Enquiry at the Queen's Hotel proved that Senor Didapp had left the city Saturday evening for New York, en route to Mexico, whither he had been recalled earlier in the week.

A short two weeks ago Senor Didapp came to Canada. His stay was brief but eventful. Barely had he landed in Quebec when he permitted himself to be heralded in the press as the new consul-general to Canada. Mr. D. A. Ansell, who, for twenty-six years has represented the Mexican Government in this country, under four different regimes, was at the time spending a few days at Old Orchard's Beach. He had received no word from his government of a new appointment being made to his post, and returned hastily to Montreal to welcome Senor Didapp, who turned out to be an appointee of the present Mexican administration as Trade Commissioner to Canada.

Both in Quebec and in Montreal he handed out interviews to the effect that Meexio intended to have nothing more to do with United States commercially. These were given under his self-assumed title of consul-general, and were printed broadcast in American papers. It was not long until some of these interviews were brought to the attention of his home government, who hastened to send out official contradiction in the message printed above. Meantime Senor Didapp was recalled.

Shocked at Women Going Into Saloon

MONTREAL, Aug. 11 Mr. John H. Roberts, secretary of the Dominion Alliance, returned to Montreal yesterday in the Hesperian, accompanied by Mrs. Roberts and his family.

With regard to temperance conditions in England he said he noticed a marked improvement as regards outward signs of drunkenness. "One thing however, shocked me more than ever it had done before I saw Canada," he said, "that was the sight of women going into saloons. I am most thankful that we do not see that here on this side."

Fortunately for the summer girl the hammock cannot talk.

OPENING OF GRAND LODGE, I. O. O. F. SESSION

Address of Welcome by His Worship Mayor Wills—Response by Grand Master Evanson—Reports of Departments Show Progress

The Grand Lodge of I.O.O.F. of Ontario opened at nine o'clock Thursday morning at the city hall, which was taxed to its utmost to accommodate the representatives. Cantons from Toronto and Kingston formed a guard of honor and escorted the Grand Lodge officers to the place of meeting. Previous to the Grand Lodge going into session an open meeting was held at which addresses of welcome were given.

COL. L. B. COOPER,
Newly Elected Grand Warden

P. T. COUPLAND
Dept. Grand Master

F. S. EVANSON,
Grand Master

Bro. Mayor Wills being introduced, spoke of the great pleasure it afforded him as Mayor of the city to be present upon this occasion. He was pleased that the Grand Lodge was meeting in the beautiful City of the Bay. He was proud of the fact that he was an Oddfellow and had passed through the chairs of old Belleville Lodge. It was a pleasure to meet all as brothers. He desired to extend to them a hearty welcome on behalf of the citizens of the city, and hoped all would feel at home. Their stay in the city he hoped would be a most pleasant one. The city and our home are yours (loud applause), The Grand Master was a brother who was in every way qualified to fill the honorable position to which he had been elected. In speaking of the city His Worship referred to the fact that it was progressing, and he hoped all would form a favorable impression of it. In conclusion he extended the freedom of the city to the members of the Grand Lodge and hoped their deliberations would be profitable and their recollections pleasant.

W. J. McCORMACK
Grand Treas.

Grand Master Evanson replied most appropriately, thanking the Mayor for the kind words. Sixteen years ago the Grand Lodge met here and it was a pleasure to return to this city, which he was pleased to learn was progressing. Oddfellowship was also progressing here as it is throughout the whole jurisdiction. The society was a great factor in the life of the city. Sixteen years ago when Grand Lodge met here the membership was 28,825 for Ontario; now it is 51,500. Not only has the Order grown numerically and financially, but morally it is exerting an influence for good. Grand Lodge met here because of pressing invitation to do so. We are here for the benefit of all humanity. We accept from you, Mr. Mayor, the key of the city, and assure you it will be returned untarnished. We return to you our gratitude and say from the bottom of our hearts, thanks.

Bro. L. B. Cooper, Grand Warden elect, then read the following address:

To F. S. Evans, Esq., Grand Master, and members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Ontario:

It is now sixteen years since we had the pleasure of welcoming to Bay of Quinte District No. 35, the Grand Lodge of the Jurisdiction of Ontario. It is today not only a pleasure, but a source of congratulation to welcome you to our midst again, for in those intervening years we are deeply gratified to know that the representation to this body has more than doubled.

We highly appreciate the honor conferred on this district by choosing Belleville as the place of meeting for this important fraternity, and we sincerely trust that you will carry away from this city not only pleasant recollections but that this annual session of 1913 will be an inspiration to provincial Odd Fellowship for many years to come.

H. W. HERMISTON,
Bregadier General

It will be the aim of every member of the Order in our district to make your visit one long to be remembered. We are all proud of our beautiful City of the Bay, the superb attractions of which have been so capably dilated upon by His Worship, our Brother Mayor Wills. The entire citizenship consider it no ordinary honor to join in hospitable greetings to our beloved Order, knowing as they do that it stands for what is noblest in human ideals. It is with feelings of gratitude that we report that Odd Fellowship has never shown so great vitality and prosperity in our city as in the year that has just passed, and we trust that your meeting here will be a stimulus to greater efforts in the year to come.

Again we welcome you and express the hope that you will carry away only the most agreeable impressions of your visit to Belleville from this the fifty-ninth annual session of the Grand Lodge.

Belleville, Aug. 14th, 1913.

To the address Grand Master Evanson replied, expressing his appreciation and that of the members of the Grand Lodge for the kindly greeting. He referred to Col. Cooper and to the honors which had been conferred upon him by the Patriarchal Branch, and said that no doubt other honors were in store for him.

D. M. McINTYRE;
Grand Warden

Grenadier Park of the Patriarch Branch, spoke briefly, extending to the Grand Lodge, the fraternal greeting from that branch of Odd-Fellowship.

Grand Master Evanson replied, stating that the Patriarchs had added dignity to the occasion by their presence. Their words of greeting were appreciated.

This concluded the open session and the Grand Lodge proceeded to business. The Grand Lodge officers are as follows:

S. A. Poplestone, Junior P.G.M., Blyth, Ont.

F. S. Evanson, Grand Master, Prescott.

P. T. Coupland, Deputy Grand Master, St. Mary's.

D. M. McIntyre, Grand Warden, Kingston.

Wm. Brooks, Grand Secretary, Toronto.

W. J. McCormack, Grand Treasurer, Toronto.

D. Derbyshire, Grand Representative, Brockville.

Joseph Oliver, Grand Representative, Toronto.

John Dawson, Grand Marshal, Sault Ste. Marie.

George Powers, Grand Conductor, Ottawa.

E. H. Gregory, Grand Guardian, Walkerville.

Alex. Abraham, Grand Herald, Stratford.

Rev. W. M. H. Quartermaine, Grand Chaplain, Renfrew.

At the Grand Lodge Session this morning the Grand Master F. S. Evanson, delivered the annual message, reviewed minutely the work of the year. Among other things the Grand Master said: With pardonable pride I beg to report that the past year has been one of great progress, and while the numerical strength of our Order has grown, and the financial status improved, I rejoice that the power of its influence for good has also increased and is daily developing higher and nobler qualities in the lives of its members.

Four lodges were added to our list during the year. This number might have been increased had I not been so careful in selecting only fruitful soil for the planting of the seed of Odd Fellowship. The new lodges were Connaught Lodge No. 440, Brighton; Home Lodge No. 441, Owen Sound; Lincoln Lodge No. 442, Wellandport; Keppel Lodge No. 443, Shallow Lake.

I am pleased to report remarkable activity and much progress in the Rebekah Branch of the Order. The President has been very energetic and ably assisted by the Secretary.

Much of their time and ability has been freely given to advance the work and it is indeed pleasing to note that their efforts have been crowned with success.

While the mortality was somewhat greater than in previous years, $277,404.28 having been paid on this account during the year 1912, yet I am pleased to report that a remaining balance of $122,307.23 was placed to the credit of Reserve fund, making the total of this fund $1,122,307.23.

After detailing visits to various lodges the Grand Master concluded his address as follows:

My relations with my associate officers have been of the most cordial and fraternal character, and I desire to thank them, as well as the several D.D.G.M.'s and every member of the Order for the courtesy and kindness shown me upon all occasions. Espec-

WM. BROOKS,
Grand Secretary

STARTS AERIAL FERRY

Jack Vilas, Millionaire Aviator, Causes Diversion at Islands

Jack Vilas, the millionaire aviator, has established an aerial ferry between the Vilas summer home and the Thousand Island Yacht Club. He has not had to want for passengers, for society has been captivated by the thrills of the exciting sport and has overwhelmed Mr. Vilas with requests for flights in his hydro-aeroplane.

The hydro-aeroplane which Mr. Vilas uses has a rather heavy case underneath, which allows it to float readily upon the water. The aviator claims that it is unsinkable and has no fear of venturing out even under more or less adverse conditions. The machine is remarkably steady, while in the air, and does not make sudden rises and falls which characterize the ordinary aeroplane.

England Apathetic on Home Rule

QUEBEC, Aug. 13.—That the general feeling in England seems to be rather apathetic on the Home Rule question and that the people do not seem to care whether the measure passes or not, was the statement made at the Chateau Frontenac yesterday by Lord John Thomas Manners, of London, England, who arrived on Saturday on the S.S. Megantic, accompanied by his daughter, the Hon. Angelina Manners.

What about the suffragettes and their tactics?" he was asked.

"The suffragettes have a great number of supporters in the House of Commons," Lord Manners replied, "although their militant tactics have lost them favor with the public, and I should think that a candidate for Parliament who favored the suffrage cause would be wise not to air it too much."

Asked about the feeling in England on Canada's naval policy, he said the people of Great Britain felt that Canada should do just as she pleases in the matter, and he added that taking it all in all the people in general in England seemed to think that the affairs were safe in the hands of Hon. Winston Churchill.

SPORTING NEWS

BASEBALL.

TORONTO CLUB NORTHERN

Brooklyn, Aug. 12.—The Brooklyn National league club today announced the unconditional release of Outfielder Scheer. Catcher Erwin was sent to Toronto. The club has exercised its claim on Outfielder Hub Northen, of Toronto, and relinguished claims on Pitcher Schardt, of Indianapolis..

TORONTO CLUB GETS FIELDER

Toronto, Aug 12.—Yesterday the Toronto management wired to the Dallas team of the Texas league an offer of $3500 for two young outfielders, Duncan and Dugey. A few hours later a wire was received in reply to th eeffect that both had be sold, Dugey to the Boston Nationals and Duncan to the Philadelphia Nationals, a coupe of hours before the receipt of the Toronto offer, which was higher than those of the two major league clubs.

Outfielder Wilson, who is a team-mate of Duncan and Dugey, was purchased by Toronto last night. He is a .300 hitter in the Lone Star state.

HURRY FUNERAL FOR GAME

Dixie negroes are great ball fans and will pawn their shirts to the the price of a game. Catcher Carver, of the Knoxville team of the Appalachian league, declares he heard this conversation between two blacks on his way to a ball game:

"Goin' to de funeral dis ev'nin?"

"What funeral ",

"What funeral Ain't you' bruthah done gone an' died "

"He done died—co'se he died. But he done buried, too. Niggah, didn't you' know dis wer' de Fo'th of July? And, Niggah, didn't ye know dat dere was a ball game in dis town today? When we could bury dat po' niggah yestiddy, what was de use of holdin' him ovah until today?"

BROWNS BUST DOPE

In 1910, when Detroit had only to trim the St. Louis Browns in an eight-game series to take the lead, and probably to shake off the Athletics for the year. St. Louis produced Ray, who won three straight games. Two veterans also came through, and the Browns took the sehies by a wide margin, sent Ray to the bushes because he couldn't beat anyone else, and the Tigers were never heard from again.

Last season with Earl Hamilton pitching, the Browns stopped Walter Johnson, after he had won sixteen straight games. This year, when he established a world's record for consecutive scoreless innings, it was the same club that stop-him, on hits by Pratt and Williams.

Early in the present year the Athletics were on their way to a league record for consecutive games won. Leverenz stepped in and in a game in Philadelphia beat the leaders 5 to 2, and thus ended their hopes.

Now Mitchell, a second string man, ends Boehling's run, with eleven games straight the count. This is the 1913 major league mark to date. Marquard, of the Giants came near it.

SLANG VS. ENGLISH IN BASEBALL WRITING

Chicago, Aug 11.—To dertermine whether a majority of baseball bugs prefer to read a story of the game immersed in slathers of slang or recited in the purest of English, the sport editor of a Chicago paper printed two versions of last Saturday's Cub-Phillies combat and extended Chicago fans an invitation to ballot on their preference. The opening paragraphs are as follows:

Slang—Stupendous swatting by the invading Phils put the bee on the intermittent Cubbers. With Alex. the Great working slab miracles while three Trojah flingers were floundering about in approved bush league fashion, Skipper Dooin and his sprightly troopers made merry with vengeancee, giving Evers and Company the once-over at regular and stated intervals.

Enlgish—By hitting three Cub pitchers to every corner of the field, Philadelphia yesterday defeated the Cubs 16 to 3 at the West Side park. The trio of tallies represented the compliments of Grover Cleveland Alexander, in Quakertown known as the "Great."

TOM WAS FAST

Tom Bannon tells a funny story on Pat Flaherty. It was in 1901, when both men were playing for Brooklyn. Flaherty was at first when Tom hit the ball to deep left. Bannon stuck his head down and made for first. He looked and was sure he could make three bases. He made third by a nice slide before the ball. The umpire yelled that he was out and Bannon immediately started an argument. "You passed a base runner," said the umpire. And sure enough Flaherty was on second. After the innings Pat told Bannon that he stepped on his foot when he was rounding second.

Jack Bliss, formerly a catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals and now with Sacramento, has a solid underpinning, but his legs are curved somewhat after the fashion of the pickaninny that walks too soon. He was asked what made him so bow-legged and told this truthful story: One day in St. Louis he came out of a mixup at the home plate with both legs broken. A doctor was called, a barrel from a nearby brewery furnished splints. He was fixed up and finished out the game—hence the curves.

CONTEST FOR AUTO

The contests in the two leagues for the automobiles that go to the players considered most vauable to their teams are waxing hot. In the National it seems now between two men—Pitcher Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Phillies and Firstbaseman Jake Daubert of the Brooklyns. Daubert is the real batting leader of the league, though several men who have played in less games top him. He is the life and the steadying influence of the team in the field as well as its brains, and his great work was the inspiration that made the others fight as they did in the early season, when the team was disputing first place. Alexander not only has pitched more than his share of the Phillies victories, but he has saved many games that might have been lost without him on hand, and in this respect he tops his mate. Seaton, who has a slightly better winning average. Matheweon has done more effective pitching than Alexander, but the policy of shifting the prize to different teams puts him out of it, for Larry Doyle of the Giants took it last year. And anyway Matty has an Auto of his own already.

Joe Jackson is almost certain to get the American League buzz wagon whether he beats Ty Cobb for the batting leadership or not. The shoeless one has been a tower of strength to the Naps with his pinch hits, and it is a certainty that they would be no higher than fourth or fifth without his splendid services.

THE SONG OF THE WHITE HOPES

Langford's leaving the country,
Hooray! Hooray!
We'll get rest from that black pest
When he has sailed away.
Now we won't have to fight him,
Hooray! Hooray!
Across the foam, far, far from home,
We hope that Sam will stay!
He's going to meet Jack Johnson,
Hooray! Hooray!
He'll cop the champ right on the lamp
And grab his crown away!
That we won't have to meet him
Each day we pray!
That coon is tough, and far too tough,
So keep him far away!

THE JOURNAL OF COMMERCE

Canada's mineral production last year amounted to over $133,000,000, an increase of $30,000,000 or 29% over the figures for the previous year. The per capita production of minerals was over $18.00. Forty-six per cent. of the mineral output is credited to metals and fifty-four per cent. non-metallic. These and many other interesting facts in regard to the mineral industry of the country are contained in an illustrated article in this week's Journal of Commerce. This was contributed by Mr. Reginald E. Hore, Editor of the Canadian Mining Journal and treats the subject in an unusually interesting way.. Other articles found in the same issue deal with the World's Trade, Filthy Money and the Decreased Meat Supply of the World, as well as many statistical tables, quotations on the wholesale markets and other data of interest to business men.

Our building contractor, G. A. Bennett, is well known by all, for the work that he has been doing has given him a widespread reputation.

For our lumber supply and mason materials we call on The Holton Lumber Co., Ltd., as they carry on hand the largest stock to be found in the city.

The building hardware and tools will be furnished by The Stafford Hardware Co. The ready roofing for the house also comes from there.

For our plumbing and steam heating we call J. H. DeMarsh in to have him install one of his systems, for we have found on investigating that the work he has done in the past has given more than satisfaction.

For our electric wiring and fixtures we have Greenleaf & Son attend to that part for us, as they stand pre-eminently in this line of work.

Our automobile needs as much attention as does the rest of our home, for with proper care it will not be a luxury, but a necessity. Let Greenleaf & Son take care of your car.

For our paints and oils we call on Geen's Drug and Stationery Store, and select a line of their Elephant Brand Paints that will beautify our home.

For our cement walks, stoops and cellars, we need a man that has experience in this particular line, for cement work if not done right will not last, and becomes an eyesore to the model home owner. Mr. Britton, the senior member of the firm of Britton Bros., has been working at this one particular line for twelve years and with that as a recommendation let us patronize him.

For our painting and wall papering let us see what W. A. Cornelius will do for us. His stock of domestic and imported wall paper is of the latest designs.

The furnishings, such as furniture, carpets, etc. can be secured at The Dominion Bedding Co., at the right terms and prices.

What is home without a piano? Call on W. B. Riggs, the piano man, and look over his full line of musical instruments.

Have E. C. Sprague call for your clothes, clean, press and dye them for you. He has installed a new up-to-date plant and can handle any kind of work.

If you have not called on The Belleville Steam Laundry and had them explain their rough dry system do so at once and see how pleased you will be. Phone today.

Another month has passed by and the price of coal is advancing. Buy it now from N. Allen before it gets any higher.

The Misses Bulgers are now ready to show you the advanced styles in millinery. Before buying, look over their large and up-to-date line.

The Palace Theatre has been renovated and enlarged and there will be no more crowding as before. A perfect system of ventilating has been installed and the use of a germicide has made it the picture show of the town.

Thus ends the story of a home. Now turn to the page, read every sign, and visit the enterprising firms whose names are displayed thereon. Watch for the next installment of the house in thirty days.

THE LOST CHILD IS FOUND IN DENSE BUSH

Child Who Wandered Away on Burnt Island Near Haileybury and Has Been Sought by a Small Army of Searchers Since Last Friday Is Found Caught Between Two Logs.

HAILEYBURY, Aug. 13.—(Special.)—By nothing short of a miracle, little Grace Cooper, the five year old child, who was lost on Burnt Island, which lies in Lake Timiskaming, midway between Ontario and Quebec, and about three miles from Haileybury, since one o'clock on Friday afternoon, was found alive and well at 2.30 this afternoon, five days and three hours after her disappearance. The child was found by C. H. Burton and John McLennan of Haileybury, on the east shore of the Island, about two miles from the camp from which she had strayed. Her head was resting on one log and her feet on another, and caught in this position, she had evidently been unable to free herself.

"Will you come with me?" said Mr. Burton, when the rescuers discovered her. "No," replied Grace. "Will I take you to your mother then?" and the child stretched out her arms and cried "Yes."

A search party of eighty-eight men, all familiar with the bush, left Haileybury on the steamer "Meteor," at eight o'clock this morning for the purpose of making an exhaustive search of the island. The whole forenoon was spent in a most systematic search, but when every bush and nook and cranny had been thoroly examined on that side of the island, towards which she had been seen straying, and no trace of the missing child had been seen, practically all hope was abandoned of ever finding the child on the island dead or alive, and the general opinion was that she must have been drowned in the lake.

The south end of the island had been scoured on Sunday by hundreds of people, and it was thought useless to conduct a search in that quarter and the afternoon was devoted to searching the western shore in both directions and to dragging and dynamiting for the body. Meanwhile Messrs. Burton and McLennan had quietly made for the other side of the island on their own account, and in searching around there they found little Grace at the foot of a cliff about two feet from the water. A gasoline launch arrived most opportunely just as the child and her rescuers returned to the main party, and she was rushed back to Haileybury for medical attention with all expedition.

Grace looks none the worse for her terrible experience, and Dr. Arnold says that all she requires is careful nursing. How the child reached the other side of the island and was found alive is a mystery. The bush in many places is almost impenetrable to a strong man, and want of food and the wet and cold weather might have caused the death of many a seasoned bushman lost for such a period.

SAVED FROM DROWNING

Steamer Sowards Picked Up Two Men Off Sodus Point

KINGSTON, Aug. 13.—The steamer Sowards, on her way over from Oswego, on Monday night, with coal for Rockwood hospital, picked up two men and saved them from drowning.

When a short distance off Sodus Point Capt. Max. Shaw and the members of his crew noticed two men, both wearing life peservers, struggling in the water. Capt. Shaw immediately put his vessel out to the scene of the rescue, picked up the men and returned to Sodus Point with them. The men had been out in a skiff and had upset in a squall. They were in an almost exhausted condition, and, no doubt would have perished had not the Sowards come to their assistance. The men belonged to Sodus Point.

Many a good man is married to his boss.

Must Have Help From Dominions

Great Britain Cannot Otherwise Meet Full Naval Responsiblities of Empire.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The "Daily Telegraph" to-day points out the serious influence which the retention of so many ships of the Navy in home waters may have on the professional character of the officers and men, inasmuch as travel is of most value as an educational factor. The Telegraph urges in this connection more ships from the outlying stations, and above all the formation of an Imperial squadron, provided jointly by the Mother Country and the Dominions. It adds:—

"Its realization is delayed by the adverse vote of the Canadian Senate and by the fact that the present standard of British shipbuilding and ship-manning is anadequate.

"Only with the assistance of all the Dominions, and possibly India, can the full naval responsibilities of the Empire be met; and it is upon the evolution of some scheme of co-operation that the future of Imperial naval defence depends, and not only this, but in the professional standing of the Royal Navy itself."

Australia in naval affairs has tried to run before she is able to walk, with the result that she is paying a heavy price for her error. Her navy, such as it is, is costing her this year nearly $12,500,000.

She decided to build one cruiser herself, the Brisbane, which is under reconstruction at Sydney. In fact, however, she is not building the ship, but merely putting together the prepared material, which was sent out from this country.

This process ministers to the pride of the Australians, but is not what is regarded as naval construction in this country.

Naturally the Admiralty will not disclose the difficulties being encountered even in this simple task, which is being carried out under British supervision, but while all the British-built ships of the fleet unit have been completed, the Brisbane is still a mere shell.

GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT

Opening of Grand Lodge

ially am I indebted to the D. G. Master, who has been a most zealous worker throughout the year, and I would bespeak for him the co-operation of a united brotherhood during the coming year.

I would indeed be remiss in my duty if I closed my report without a kindly reference to our Grand Secretary. He is indeed a most indefatigable worker and at all times is devising ways and means to promote the welfare of the Order. The record of the year is before you and while the work has been at times difficult, yet I can conscientiously say that I have freely given of my time and whatever ability I possess in an earnest endeavor to extend the influence of the Order which is doing much to ameliorate the condition of man and elevate him in the scale of social existence.

Reports from other Grand Lodge officers will be given in tomorrow's issue.

BOUND TO RID WINDSOR OF OPIUM SMOKING

WINDSOR, Aug. 14.—(Special.)—Frank Lee, the leader of Windsor's Chinese colony, who pleaded guilty last week to having opium in his possession, following a raid by the Windsor police, in which a quantity of the drug was confiscated, was made an example of today by Magistrate Leggatt. He was fined $50 and costs or 60 days in jail.

"It is my intention to rid Windsor of any opium-smoking dens if a heavy fine will help," said Magistrate Leggatt to Lee. "Not only is traffic in opium a disgrace to the city, but I understand your rooms have been frequented by young girls. This report is made by the police and if such is the case you should be given the limit fine of $500."

Lee denied permitting girls to frequent his rooms.

DECORATION OF CHIVALRY AND AWARDING OF THE PRIZES AT ARMOURIES

At the armouries last evening an immense concourse of people assembled to witness the conferring of the decoration of chivalry on six ladies of the Rebekah branch who have served the Order well. This was without doubt a pretty and interesting ceremony in which a number of the staff officers and others took part. The various cantons, in their beautiful uniforms, presented a most attractive appearance. The drills executed by the ladies' degree team of Toronto and the ladies' uniformed team under command of Captain Mrs. Bush, were all that could have been desired. The latter exemplified the degree of Friendship. The ladies marched well and in perfect unison, executing some intricate movements with the utmost precision. At the conclusion of the exemplification of degree works and drills, the valuable trophies won in canton drills were presented after Col. W. N. Ponton had, as one of the judges, made some appropriate remarks. The other judges were Col. Marsh and Col. Stewart. The prizes and the successful competitors were as follows:

Class A.—Competitive Canton Drill (24 men and 3 officers)—1st prize, silver trophy, value $100, donated by Brig.-Gen. Dr. G. M. Hemiston, Toronto, Department Commander; won by Canton No. 7, Toronto.

Green, of Canton No. 7, Toronto; 2nd prize, silver medal, won by Chevalier Bucknell, Canton No. 10, Toronto. 3rd prize, bronze medal, won by Chevalier John Whinton, of Canton No. 9, Ottawa.

Patriarchs Militant Degree—Best exemplification by a Canton. 1st, silver trophy, value $75, donated by Colonel Joseph Oliver, P.G.M., Toronto; won by Canton No. 7, Toronto.

Canton showing greatest increase in uniformed membership during the year (from July 1st to June 30th)—the "Robert A. Allis Memorial Trophy," value $250, donated by Mrs. Annie Allis, in memory of her late husband, Chevalier Robert A. Allis, who was a member of Canton Toronto No. 7, from its inception in May, 1886, to the time of his death, March 1912; won by Windsor Canton, No. 2.

During the evening the I.O.O.F. Band was present and rendered a number of tuneful selections. It was near the midnight hour before the function was brought to a close.

Boy Exonerated For Killing Girl

Will Stay in Employment of Farmer Where Both He and Victim Worked.

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 13.—The inquest into the shooting tragedy on Saturday near Westport, was held in the Westport town hall last evening.

The accident, as previously reported, was that Edith Hawkins, a young Barnado Home girl of 10 years, on the farm of David Leacock, was shot and killed by a gun in the hands of Herbert Williams, aged 19, also from the home and employed on the same farm. The verdict of the jury was that the shooting was entirely unintentional and the boy was completely exonerated.

Various ugly rumors which had been current in the village were proved to be unfounded and the case was very thoroughly cleared up.

It's easy to fool the man who thinks knows it all.

CABLE RATES TO THE WEST INDIES DECREASED

By means of a small annual subsidy the cost of telegraphic communication between Canada and the West Indies has been reduced by almost 60 per cent. Not only will the new arrangement bring the Mother Country, Canada and the West Indies into more sympathetic relationship withone another, but it will help them commercially. Already Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Postmaster General, has been successful in securing two striking reductions in the cable charges between Canada and the Mother Country. This last with the West Indies is the third good achievement which he has to his credit. The new rates will also help in getting the best results out of the preferential trade agreement concluded last session with the West Indies. An improved steamship service between Canada and the West Indies is almost ready. Thus it can be seen that the process of linking up the British Dominions into one solidified whole commercially, is being carried out by the present Government.

The scheme will secure the approval of all sound business men who know the value of good telegraphic service, and Canada will contribute $40,500 a year towards the reduction of the rates.

The new rate between Canada and the Islands will be 1s 6d per word. That is, a cable from Canada to Barbadoes, which at present costs 91 cents per word, will, under the new arrangement, be transmitted for 36 cents a word.

That the excessive cost of telegraphing has tended to restrict trade with the West Indies has long been realized, and negotiations have frequently taken place between the governments interested and the cable companies, looking for a reduction. The Royal Commission of 1910 on West Indian trade relations, upon which Canada was represented by the Minister of Finance and Customs, gave some attention to the subject and obtained estimates as to the cost of a state-owned line.

In view of the reduction in rates about to be secured by the aid of the Canadian Government's contribution of $40,000 yearly towards increased subsidy, it is unlikely that the proposal of state ownership and control of cable communication between Great Britain and Canada and the British West Indies will be regarded as one demanding immediate consideration, although with the enhanced trade which is expected to result from the preferential tariff arrangements recently inaugurated, state ownership, as a future policy, may not be lost sight of.

Things are moving rapidly for the benefit of the Canadian people with a progressive government in power.

THE PROVINCE OF MOUNT ROYAL

Why should the city of Montreal and its contiguous municipalities and districts not be organized as a separate Province by the Dominion Parliament? asked the Montreal Trade Bulletin of last week. To quote further:

"Is it not about time that the Island of Montreal, which leads in population any one of the provinces of Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Saskatchewan, should assert its right and title to a place equal to any of the above provinces. Why should our city of Montreal at the foot of Mount Royal, commanding the finance and commerce of the Dominion, and first in the Arts and Sciences, be tributary to the backwoods of Quebec? Why should we not demand our provincial laws, instead of being compelled to trot down to the city of Quebec for every improvement the majority of whose law makers know little about our needs, and care less? What London is to the United Kingdom, Montreal is to the Dominion of Canada; and the Dominion Parliament could not perform a more graceful act in the provincial interests of the country than by using its influence in constituting the city of Montreal and its contiguous municipalities and districts into a separate province to be known as the Province of Mount Royal or any other designation it thought more suitable."

It would perhaps be doubtful wisdom to go as far as the Trade Bulletin advises. The creation of a new Province out of the Island of Montreal and the adjacent districts would involve a great deal more than the Bulletin probably realizes, to say nothing of the opposition aroused and the precedent thereby established.

The Bulletin is, however, quite right in its demand for a greater measure of self-government for Montreal. The weakness of the present system has been demonstrated too often to be further insisted on here. The majority of the members of the Legislature do not, as the Bulletin points out, know anything about city affairs, and care less. As in every other Province there is, on the part of the rural member, the disposition to thwart its legitimate demands whenever possible. The civic representatives know best what the city requires and should be given a freer hand than they have at present in obtaining those requirements. There is far too much interference and dictation in purely civic affairs on the part of the Parliament at Quebec.— Montreal Herald.

AYLESWORTH DITCH SCANDAL

The last has been heard of the notorious Newmarket Canal, better known as the Aylesworth Ditch. This remarkable work constituted what was technically described as the Holland River section of the Trent Canal. It was to connect the town of Newmarket with the Trent System via the Holland River.

The canal was never anything but a joke, although a very expensive joke for the taxpayers of Canada. There was never the slightest excuse for undertaking the work as a business proposition, nor was there anything to justify it from an engineering standpoint.

The real object was to spend money in what was then a Liberal constituency, represented by a Minister of the Laurier Government. This object was attained. Much money was spent, but so great was the popular outcry against the continuance of this folly that the Liberal Government was forced to move slowly. The attempts of Ministers to justify the work were ludicrous. It developed that even if the canal were completed there would be no way of getting water into it. It would be a dry canal. This, however, did not discourage the Liberal politicians who were boosting the project along, and year after year the Government continued throwing hundreds of thousands of dollars into the ditch.

The Conservative party in Opposition vigorously condemned the Liberal Government in connection with the Aylesworth Ditch expenditure. When the Conservative Government took office the useless and wasteful expenditure of public money on the ditch was stopped. Now the machinery has been taken away and little remains to commemorate the folly of the Liberal ditch-diggers except a hole in the ground.

DOLLAR WHEAT IN WINNIPEG

What farmer in the West would have reciprocity now? Last week there was a spread of fifteen cents in the price of No. 1 Northern wheat between Minneapolis and Winnipeg. Here are the figures quoted from the Winnipeg Free Press:

At Winnipeg, July closed $1.00
At Minneapolis, July closed .. .84⅞

For nearly a year now the Winnipeg price has been ranging higher than the Minneapolis price. The much talked of American wheat market for the western farmer is a myth. These figures prove it, and what emphasises it more, is the fact that the American farmer last year had millions of bushels of wheat for export.

The Liberal press which tried to impose the reciprocity pact on Canada ought now to explain to the western farmer just how many millions of dollars this difference in price between Winnipeg and Minneapolis saves the producer of grain on this side with a crop in sight which promises to break all records.

The situation in Minneapolis and other American wheat centres today is that the elevators are filled with old wheat for which there is no market at home. The new spring wheat is already pouring into a congested market. In one day last week over 250 cars of spring wheat arrived in Kansas City. With a domestic market already congested this means that grain must ultimately go into the export field, and trade figures show that the United States shipped last year some 146,000,000 bushels to Europe. The reciprocity treaty would have opened the Canadian market for this surplus.

CURRENT COMMENT

Ottawa Journal: "At Toronto a learned geologist said the ice left Ontario 24,000 years ago. Correct; and some of these warm days it hardly seems long enough ago at that." Where is the joke?

Telegraph and Witness: "The California Japanese are going to prove themselves worthy of American citizenship if possible. Even Uncle Sam will hardly be able to repress admiration for their latest move in hiring a press agent."

The fact that we have 170,000 volunteers and cadets training in this country is an illustration that Canadians take kindly enough to military service, so long as it does not interfere with their making a living—perhaps a fortune—in other ways.

* * *

Toronto Star: "Mayor Hocken is about the only living opponent of the Telegram that it has not denounced as pro-clerical. But he cannot hope to escape it." Would it not be an act of courtesy to inform Mayor Hocken of the catastrophe that is to overtake him?

* * *

Prince Albert Times: "The city would be better today and for many days to come if every man and every woman too, would register a vow to taboo absolutely the use of two phrases for even a single month — financial stringency and money tightness. They are being repeated with such parrot-like frequency by some people that the sound and sight of them is getting positively abhorrent.

Toronto News: "The Montreal Telegraph speaks with fond regret of "a moderate measure of protection such as was in force under the late Liberal Administration." But surely it is the Laurier tariff that is still in force, and surely the Laurier tariff was based mainly on the National Policy of Sir John Macdonald. Surely The Telegraph must know that during fifteen years of office the Liberal Government reduced the average customs schedules less than one per cent."

North Battleford News: "Medicine Hat is something like North Battleford, it is exposed daily to flagrant breaches of the provincial act concerning motoring. Here autos scorching as a kind of four wheel street vaudeville is run off weekly. Dogs are killed, pedestrians pressed, and narrowly averted accidents recorded every once in a while." For the information of the News we would say that the same things occur in the East, even here in Belleville, Ont.

ORCHARDS AND GARDEN NOTES

String beans may be sown early in August for late fall use.

Winter radishes and turnips may also be sown at that time.

Sweet corn is due for table use. Golden Bantam is an excellent variety for home use.

Keep all weeds from going to seed.

Well graded, ripe, and clean fruit will always sell.

Now is a good time to make up a list of flowering and fruit shrubs for use on the farmstead.

Lettuce may be sown during the second or third week in August for hotbed or greenhouse use later.

Early apples and plums will soon be ready for use or market. See that they go to market in clean carriers.

Rhubarb should not be allowed to go to seed if the best root growth is wanted.

The red and yellow berries of the Tartarian honeysuckle make it a very attractive bush the latter part of July. It is one of the easiest ornamentals to grow.

Budding of apples and plums may now be done. Try a few buds on the limbs of some of your trees. Small trees are preferable, but large ones may be used. Some nurserymen think better results are obtained from budding in the tops of the trees than from grafting.

FEMININE WISDOM ON HAYING

A great many of our best meadows have been visited by the mower. Much of the hay is safely stored in the barn. But in a great many instances the work in those fields has not been completed, though doubtless the farmer would tell you he had finished. As I was driving recently I noticed much slip-shod work; for instance, fields with fence corners unmown.

Why does the haymaker not give thought to the loss he sustains by this practice? Besides, as these corners are left year after year, they soon grow up to brush and shrubbery, and present a most sorry spectacle. Much land, which cost so much, is entirely wasted in this way. And the beauty of the fields is marred. The most expensive farms will, if treated in this way, soon decrease in value; and appearance counts for so much. There is but one way to do our work, and that is the right way. We should have a perfect system and never vary from it.

Most farmers, I believe, have far too many fence corners for profit. If all unnecessary fences were removed and this land tilled there would soon be a vast difference in the crop yield, and in many many ways there would be a vast improvement. A good rule to follow is to have as few fence corners as possible, and keep the necessary ones tidy.

THE BEST FLOOR.

Cement concrete, although somewhat higher in first cost than wood, meets the requirements of a good stable floor better than any other aavilable material.

They are economical because they are durable. Wooden floors last from three to five years with a maximum of about 10 years, if of the best constuction, while the durability of good concrete floors equals that of the building.

They save labor because of their evenness which permits of thorough and easy cleaning.

They are sanitary an not only because they can be kept clean, but because the yare easily drained and are water tight enough to exclude ground water and prevent the liquid from leaching into and polluting the soil.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM HAS MANY DISAPPOINTMENTS

Just as the Minister Was to Pronounce Couple Man and Wife

Police Interferred

(Port Hope Guide)

Cobourg's recent marriage sensation hasn't anything on Port Hope's programme of Saturday evening. In fact this town seems determined not to allow Cobourg to lead in any particular. Of course, groom to be, now a prisoner, may not have all the nice things said about him like Mr. Aull, of Cobourg, and the society ladies are not likely to shower him with bouquets. But we are going to have the Police Court case nevertheless.

It was on Saturday evening last that love's young dream received such a rude jolt. The time was the present, the scene was at the home of Mr. Woodstock, Margaret street, the groom to be was William Henry Franklin Dixon, of Port Hope, engaged on the C. N. R.; the bride was Clara Saddler, of Peterborough. Clara had arrived in town that day and all arangements were completed for the ceremony, the marriage to take place at 7.30 o'clock..

The minister was in waiting and the ceremony might have been over had not the groom remained down town a little too long inviting a few of his friends to attend. As it was everything was in readiness and the nuptial knot was all but tied when Chief Gummerson stepped in and brought things to a sudden stop. The Chief had learned that the bride to be was only 16 years of age and was being married without the knowledge of her father. Not being like the most of the fair ones she would have liked to add a few years to her age, but it was no use and while standing under the arch of evergreen and facing the minister she admitted that sweet sixteen was correct. The groom was dumbfounded and he threw himself into a chair to brood over his disappointment.

Yesterday a wararnt was issued charging Dixon with perjury in that the said Dixon did swear to a marriage license that a young girl, Clara Saddler, was of the age of 20 years when the said Clara Saddler was of the age of 16 years. Mr. Chisholm representing the Crown, asked for a remand until Wednesday and the same was granted. The prisoner gives his age as 28, but he looks more like 40.

WALT MASON ON THE GOOD TIME

I put a mortgage on my home, to buy a motor car, and now all joyously I roam on rural roads afar. I take the children and the wife, and scour the countryside; I'm to lead a merry life, and let all business slide. We pass the poorhouse as we race, and wearily my frau remarks: "Alas! that dismal place! It's where we're heading now!" I go in debt for gasoline, for this and that repair; but oh, the country's bright and green, and I am happy there! We pass the poorhouse as we scoot, and wife, she says to me: "Oh, mark it well, my dear galoot—that's where we'll shortly be!" I used to deal in earthen jars, and made all kinds of chink; but now the chugging motor cars are all of which I think. The clerk conducts my little store, and when I am away, they take their coats and lock the door, and fishing go, folk say. But merrily my good car spins, and on the poorhouse grass the paupers sit and stroke their chins, and hail me as I pass!

No Corns Next Week

Would you like to think that your oldest corns would be ended forever next week?

They can be ended in a simple way. A million corns monthly are ended in this way.

Apply a little Blue-jay plaster. That ends the pain, and from that time on you simply forget the corn.

In 48 hours take the plaster off. Then lift out the corn. There will be no pain or soreness.

The B & B wax gently loosens the corn so it comes out root and all.

And that corn won't come back. Another corn may come if you still pinch your feet, but the corn that comes out is ended.

Millions believe this because they have done it. Millions of others still putter with corns. Please, for your own sake, make a test of this scientist's invention.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

Blue-jay Corn Plasters

ON SLAYERS' TRAIL

New York Police Partially Solve Murder of Martin.

They Are Trying to Trace a Woman and Three Men Who Are Believed to Be Responsible For the Garrotting of William G. Martin, a Milliner's Buyer—Rough Looking Man Entered House.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Three men and a flaxen-haired woman, not more than 23 years old, are being sought by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, for the murder of William G. Martin, a milliner of Toronto, Ont., who was drugged and garroted in a rear room on the first floor of a furnished rooming house at No. 453 West 57th street, Tuesday night.

The chief of the detective bureau is also interested in the whereabouts of a young man described as Frank Beatty, who married Miss Hannah Grieve, an aunt of the milliner.

Beatty and his three sisters, Dougherty learned last night, came to New York from Toronto after the death of the father. Beatty's mother, the deputy commissioner was told, died in this city two months ago, and her body was sent to her birthplace for burial.

"I just met Frank Beatty. His mother is dead and he moved downtown," Martin told his friend, Mrs. Anna Barrett, just before he left her home, No. 355 West 58th street, where he had taken a room on Monday evening at 7 o'clock. "Beatty lives around the corner and I will be with him a short time. Then I will come back and go to a show with you and the young ladies." He referred to Miss Bessie Collins and Miss Margaret Graham, buyers, who are staying at the Victoria Hotel.

At 10 o'clock on Tuesday night Martin's body was found lying crosswise on a bed in one of the furnished rooms, first by Theodora Jones, wife of a steamboat engineer. A man and a woman, who a week before paid $4 as an instalment of the $5 demanded for the place, had vanished. Two men had frequently visited the pair.

The police have secured good descriptions of the people who were the last known occupants before the body of Mr. Martin was found. The room was rented on Aug. 5. On that day two people called on Mrs. Theodore Jones and told her they wanted to hire a room. One was an undersized and dandified youth; the other a woman whose hair was so light she might almost be taken for an Albino. The youth introduced himself as Mr. Johnson, said the woman was his brother's wife, and that when they had picked out a room the brother would come with their effects later in the day.

They chose the rear parlor on the ground floor. Near night a tall, slender man with black hair and a thin, drawn face came with two grips. He said he was Mr. Johnson, husband of the woman who had already installed herself in the room. The dapper youth in the flashy clothes left when the older man came.

Nothing occurred in the rear parlor to break the even tenor of the rooming house until last Thursday night. Then, near midnight, Mrs. Jones, who sleeps in the front parlor, was aroused from sleep by the noise of a fist banging on a door. The bang-bang continued uninterruptedly. Mrs. Jones, going to the wall which separates the front from the back parlor, heard the noise of whispering in the room occupied by the Johnsons. Then she heard Johnson open the door and call:

"Beat it, you. We won't let you in and we don't want you around here."

Mrs. Jones opened her door and saw a stranger leaving the hall, while Johnson peered thru the partly closed door. She demanded of Johnson an explanation of how the man got in the house. Johnson declared he had not admitted him, but the next day, Mrs. Jones notified Johnson that on Monday he would have to give up his room. Monday she saw Johnson and his wife leave the room, but carrying no baggage.

She did not enter the apartment until Tuesday night, when she discovered Mr. Martin's body and notified the police.

Short after 4 o'clock Monday afternoon a young woman and a five-year old girl, who was dressed in white, came to the lodging-house and enquired for the Johnsons.

"Step into the rear room," Mrs. Jones told the visitors. George Needham, 14 years old, who lives with his parents on an upper floor of the house, stood in the vestibule. After a half hour the young woman and child left the house with the woman lodger and her husband. They walked toward Ninth avenue and that was the last time they were seen by members of the Jones household.

"At 7.30 o'clock Tuesday night I saw one of the men enter the room with a friend and lock the door," George Needham said last night. "The first man I think was the one who rented the place. I'd never seen the other man before."

From Mrs. Jones, Deputy Commissioner Dougherty learned that a tall, roughly clad man, who looked like a laborer, also entered the room Monday night. He walked into the hallway without ringing the bell. When challenged by Mrs. Jones he said he had permission to visit his friends.

"Have you the key to the house?" she demanded.

"I have not, but everything is all right," he replied and entered the room.

The detectives today found in the closet in the room a photograph of a chauffeur who was a former roomer at Mrs. Jones' house, with whom Johnson, on one occasion, claimed acquaintance. This chauffeur was identified as Joseph Smith, who lives at Coney Island. Smith said he had formerly occupied the room, and had probably left the picture behind when he moved. He admitted knowing a man named Johnson, who described himself as a writer of vaudeville sketches and who used to call on a pronounced blonde girl rooming at Mrs. Jones' house, known as Miss Rosy.

The police incline to the belief that Martin was lured to the room in West 57th street and refusing to submit to blackmail without a fight, was murdered and robbed.

Claims Descent From Napoleon.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Juan Bonaparte, who says he is the great-grandson of Napoleon Bonaparte, is in the London Bankruptcy Court. He looks remarkably like the great Corsican.

For some years he has been an actor in various companies touring in melodrama relating to Napoleon, and showing considerable histrionic talent. He says he got into debt traveling on the continent.

COAL MINERS RIOT

Serious Situation Has Broken Out on Vancouver Island.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—Nanaimo is under martial law today after a night of terror. Saloons are closed and a large number of special officers have been sent from Victoria and Vancouver. The home of Alexander McKinnon at Ladysmith was attacked and the building wrecked. A stick of dynamite with a short fuse attached was thrown thru the window, and McKinnon, calling on his family to escape, snatched it up and attempted to throw it out. The dynamite went off in his hand, blowing off the hand and probably fatally injuring McKinnon. The temperance hotel at Ladysmith was blown up with dynamite after the occupants were driven out.

At midnight the mob bombarded the office of The Nanaimo Herald and were incited to wreck the office. No police were available, and members of the editorial staff armed themselves with chunks of lead. F. H. Shepherd, M.P., attempted to address the miners and secure a twenty-four hours' armistice. His reward was a rock which whizzed past his head. Fifteen people in all, including several policemen, were injured.

The provincial executive at a special session in Victoria this afternoon decided to order several militia companies to Nanaimo. The men are now being assembled and a special train will probably take them north tonight.

Twenty-five special policemen left Vancouver early this morning aboard the steamer Princess Patricia for Nanaimo to assist in quelling the riots there. They reached the coal city at noon, but a mob was waiting for them and drove them back aboard before they could leave the wharf. A crowd of strikers remained on guard until 3.10 o'clock, when the steamer started back for Vancouver. At two o'clock seven special policemen reached Nanaimo from Victoria, but these men were set upon by the mob, robbed of their guns and taken down to the steamer Patricia to be sent back with the others to Vancouver. Two Wellington officers were terribly beaten by the crowd. A city policeman who rushed to their assistance was taken away in a fainting condition to the police station.

Objects to Being Left Out.

CORK, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—A deputation representative of all the business interests in Cork and Queenstown started for London today to protest against the decision of the postmaster-general to permit the big Cunard line mail steamers to omit Queenstown as a calling port. The decision of the postmaster-general was rendered on the plea of the Cunard line that it is dangerous for such vessels as the Mauretania and Lusitania to enter the harbor, but members of the deputation deny this, and as proof of their contention point out that the White Star line steamer Olympic, which is much larger than the Cunarders mentioned, has no difficulty in calling at Queenstown.

SULZER FACES TRIAL

Governor of New York Is Impeached by Lower House.

After an All-Night Session the Legislature Votes to Send Governor to Senate to Be Tried on Charge of Diverting Funds—Eleventh Hour Declaration of Wife Accepting Blame Not Believed.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—William Sulzer, governor of New York, was impeached by the lower house of the legislature at 5.15 o'clock this morning after an all-night session by a vote of 79 to 45 on charges of having diverted campaign contributions to his private use and having made under oath false statements as to his campaign receipts.

An eleventh hour declaration on the part of the governor's wife that she had diverted some of his campaign contributions to the purchase of stock because she felt the household needed money, failed to avert impeachment. The roll call was one of the quickest accomplished since the assembly began the consideration of impeachment proceedings. But one member rose to explain his vote.

Organization leaders who had sparred for time all night in the fear that their program of impeachment would be wrecked by lack of votes, welcomed new-comers to the assembly chamber, summoned from New York during the early hours, and assured of victory by their presence started a rapid fire of legislation with the adoption of the impeachment resolution.

A roll call showed the adoption of the resolution by a vote of 79 to 32. A committee was appointed to acquaint the senate with the assembly on the findings at the meeting of the senate scheduled for 11 o'clock this morning. Majority leaders asserted their belief that with the presentation to the senate of the articles of impeachment, William Sulzer would automatically cease to be governor and Martin H. Glynn, lieutenant-governor, would assume his office and functions as acting governor. Mr. Sulzer's lawyers entertained a different view.

With the adoption of the articles and the appointment of the two committees the assembly sat down to further work. A resolution calling for the appointment of nine managers to conduct on behalf of the lower house the impeachment proceedings was adopted, and Speaker Smith announced its membership.

Shorn of Their Terrors.

In the light of revelations contained in Mrs. Sulzer's declaration to Senator Palmer yesterday afternoon, Governor Sulzer's friends are inclined today to view the ordeal which confronts him with less apprehension than before his impeachment. By her assertion that she diverted part of the campaign contributions sent her husband to private purposes without his knowledge and used them to purchase stocks in Wall street, she has shorn the articles of impeachment of many of their terrors, his friends declare.

Monday, Sept. 22, was this afternoon made a tentative selection for the date of trying Governor Sulzer on the impeachment charges. This selection, subject to change, was reached at a conference among Senator Wagner, president pro tem of the senate, and judges of the court of appeals.

The impeachment has raised a vital question as to whether, under the constitution, the governor will vacate his office pending final adjudication of the impeachment issue by the senate and court of appeals sitting jointly as a trial court. The indications are that he will contest bitterly the theory of the opposition that he becomes automatically barred.

Lieutenant-Governor Martin H. Glynn came into Albany from his summer home at Cedar Hill during the forenoon and went to his newspaper office as usual. He declined to comment on the situation.

The fact that the various state departments and bureaus are divided in their allegiance to the executive and the Democratic organization which is seeking to depose him stimulates interest in the complicated situation. The possibility of two men endeavoring to discharge the functions of the chief executive at the same time suggests conditions that the courts alone would have power to deal with.

BROUGHT UP AS NEGRESS

Sixteen-Year-Old White Girl Is Found by Aunt.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Aug. 14.—Mrs. N. J. Thompson has commenced action in the Muskogee juvenile court to get possession of Viola Brown, sixteen years old, a white girl who has been living with a wealthy negro family in Muskogee for thirteen years. She has discovered that the girl is her niece.

When the girl was three years old, and after the death of her mother, the father, "Cokkie Brown," gave the child to Mrs. Wiley Jones, a negress, to keep until he made a trip to Pennsylvania. He died in the north.

The child has been brought up and educated by her negro foster parents. She and Wiley Jones' son have been sent to Kansas to school, where there is no discrimination between the white and black races.

It is charged that there is grave danger of the girl marrying Jones' son, a negro, and on this ground the removal of the girl is sought from the negro home.

The Joneses, as stated, are wealthy and will resist the taking of the girl, who they declare was given to them by the father.

Coal Oil Can Explodes.

MONTREAL, Aug. 13.—(Can Press.)—Flora Mercier, aged 17, and Lee Colson, 15 months old, were burned to death, and Mrs. Madere and Mrs. Colson, mother and grandmother of the dead child, are in a serious condition, in Notre Dame Hospital following the explosion of a coal oil can used in lighting the kitchen fire.

Mrs. Madere poured oil on a smouldering fire. The can exploded, scattering oil and flames thruout the room, setting fire to the women's clothing. The baby also was a victim of the flames and was burned to a crisp in the excitement. Miss Mercier lost her life in an effort to save the others. The tragedy took place at the home of J. A. Colson, assistant superintendent of the Soulanges Canal, Cascade Point, yesterday.

Two tugs went to her assistance from the Soo, but returned this afternoon and reported that they were unable to release her. The Lakeport has a few passengers on board, who are in no danger, however.

DELAYED AGAIN

Action on Wheat Schedule in U. S. Is Postponed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—Discussion of the agricultural schedule and the proposed free listing of wheat in particular enlivened the tariff discussion today in the senate, Senator Gronna of North Dakota, proposing in lieu of free wheat a duty of six cents a bushel.

Action on the amendment was deferred owing to prolonged debate, a fact which aroused Democratic leaders to a realization of the necessity for some action to speed up consideration of the measure if possible. To this end a Democratic caucus has been called for tomorrow, when plans for expediting the bill will be discussed, and a proposal will be made for an agreement that a recess of congress be taken until Nov. 1 after the passage of the tariff bill in the senate and the currency bill in the house. This, some Democrats assert, would induce Republicans to cut short discussion of the tariff and would also overcome all Democratic opposition to currency legislation at the special session.

Debate on the free listing of wheat came to a climax late in the day when Senator Borah of Idaho, referring to the countervailing duty which the Democrats have proposed, asserted it was the same as Canadian reciprocity passed by the Republicans to the betrayal of the farmers of the country.

"We have heard a great deal of discussion," said Senator Borah, "about the desire of the present incumbent of the White House to enforce his tariff ideas upon congress. I am not going to discuss that. I will only say that if the Republican senators had voted their convictions when Canadian reciprocity passed this body there would not have been ten votes for it on this side of the chamber.

CANADA STANDS WELL

Dominion's Credit in Europe is High, Says Railroad Man.

MONTREAL, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—"Canada stands well in the European financial world and will be able to get all the money she wants," said William Wainwright, vice-president of the G. T. R., on his return from England today. "The British investor, however, will ask higher rates of interest for his money than formerly and will scrutinize more closely the class of securities brought under his notice. Wildcat schemes are barred, but anything gilt-edged will command all the money necessary.

"The Grand Trunk credit stands, as is shown by the manner in which the million and a half sterling notes were taken up, the issue being largely oversubscribed and going to 1¾ premium before I left.

"Financial men believe that prospects are much brighter, and that this fall the purse strings will be loosened and money become more plentiful. I found many over there who had invested in lands in the west disappointed with the setback that has taken place. I advised them, however, to stick to their investments, and they will surely realize handsome profits. If the crops are good this year Canada's continued prosperity seems assured."

STARTS OFF WELL

Ex-Premier Fisher of Australia Roasts New Government.

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 13.—(C. A. P.)—The first step taken by the opposition in the federal parliament today was the tabling of a motion of censure. The late Premier Fisher submitted a resolution of regret that the prime minister's speech indicated no intention on the part of his government of reducing the cost of living and revising the present tariff. The government program, which he described as oldtime Toryism, would destroy the beneficial effect of existing industrial laws. He regarded the prohibition of preferential treatment of trade unionists as a stab in the back of associated labor.

Reported Success of Rebels.

HANKOW, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—It is reported that 25,000 rebels from the Province of Hu-Nan have crossed the border into the Province of Hu-Peh and defeated a small force of loyalists. It is reported to be their intention to capture Hankow and afterwards to move against Peking. Northern troops with artillery have left here to intercept the rebels, and it is believed they will easily rout them.

WILSON ASSAILS GREY

Ex-Ambassador Accuses British Secretary of Subterfuge.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—Henry Lane Wilson, the furloughed ambassador to Mexico, issued a statement here today attacking the recent statement accredited to the British foreign office, declaring that Great Britain had recognized the Huerta government as a provisional government only; that its recognition was prompted by a desire to contribute to the restoration of order and also because of Wilson's congratulatory speech on the occasion of the reception of the Mexico City diplomatic corps by Huerta.

Mr. Wilson characterized the statement as at "variance with the traditions of the British foreign office, and with the character it has maintained before the world for two centuries."

"I doubt the genuineness of the statement, as it is a pure subterfuge unworthy of the British foreign office," said Mr. Wilson in a lengthy discussion.

Mr. Wilson said: "If this statement really emanated from the British foreign office, it is at variance with its traditions and with the character which it has maintained before the world for two centuries. I doubt the genuineness of the statement, as it is a pure subterfuge unworthy of the British foreign office. As there existed at the time of this reception only a provisional government, the government of Great Britain could naturally recognize nothing but a provisional government, which it did in exactly the same manner and practically the same phraseology as all other European governments. That Great Britain was moved to recognition by its desire to assist in the restoration of order is most likely true, and I believe this factor was the determining one with all governments which followed the example of Great Britain, the most of them recognised the Mexican provisional government at a much later date.

Misfortune Dogs Family.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 13.—(Special.)—William Edward Bracken, the youth who was drowned while bathing in the Welland Canal Tuesday night, was a nephew of Mrs. Bracken of Toronto, the last of the family of six who all died within a year. The local youth, who was 17 years of age, was taken with cramps, made just one outcry, sank and did not return to the surface.

A short time ago his mother died. His father, Edward Bracken, and five sisters live at 75 Page street.

His uncle, one of the victims of the Toronto mystery, was a native of St. Catharines, but went to Toronto some years ago and was there married.

Assassins Sent After Sun.

TOKIO, Aug. 13.—(Can. Press.)—One hundred assassins are reported by the Japanese newspapers to have been sent to Japan to kill Dr. Sun Yat Sen, Huang Sing and other Chinese revolutionary fugitives, by provisional President Yuan Shi Kai of China.

The Japanese government in consequence of these reports has arranged to give police protection to the leaders of the Chinese revolution who have sought asylum in Japan. It declares, however, that it will not permit Japan to be used as headquarters for Chinese plotters.

CIVIC HOLIDAY DRAWS BIG CROWD TO CITY

For a civic holiday, Belleville was fairly alive with people yesterday, the crowd being augmented by visiting Odd Fellows, whose trim uniforms and badges attracted attention wherever seen. The Rebekahs, as on the day previous, were in evidence at very turn, and apparently enjoying their sojourn in our pretty city. Quite a number were in from the country, and all told the addition to our population was increased by several thousand.

The morning, in a general sense, was spent in the freedom of the city, which was extended to all, the Grand Encampment conducting their individual sessions. About one o'clock, however, things began to materialize, and at two, the procession, previously planned by the officials of the day, formed into line and started on its route from Bridge street to Front, making a reasonably short circuit, and finally heading for the Driving Park, in the following order:

I. O. O. F. Band.

Staff Officers, mounted, led by Brigadier-General G. M. Hermiston, Deputy Commander, and Major Foster, A. A. G.

Cantons of London, Windsor, Brantford, Hamilton, St. Thomas, Kingston, Toronto, Belleville, Ottawa, Queen City, Toronto, Picton, Gananoque and Stratford.

A number of autos containing His Worship Mayor Wills, Grand Master Evanson, Deputy Grand Master Coupland, Grand Secretary Brooks, and Grand Marshal John Dawson.

Then came the smiling Rebekahs in foats and carriages.

Kilties Pipe Band

Encampment and Odd Fellows from Belleville, Trenton, Picton, Tweed, Stirling, Thomasburg, and other places.

Trenton Band.

Marching in a body into the grounds, the line broke up into informal sections, and took in the sports arranged for the afternoon, which proved to be of a most interesting nature, a single acident in the form of an upsetting buggy, with no body injured, alone distracting the attention of the crowd, which numbered from seven to eight thousand.

SPORTS

Motor cyle rase, 7 miles. The four competitors were all from Trenton. Herrington 1st, Lamore 2nd, and Russell 3rd. Time 12 minutes.

An auto exhibition between two cars, a Ford and McLaughlin, was engaged by the spectators. Owing to the sharp turn on the track the machines could not be driven at their full speed, but on the stretches they certainly flew.

100 yard dash—George Ketcheson, 1st; D. Sutherland, Stirling, 2nd, and H. Ketcheson, 3rd. Time 12 seconds.

100 yard dash for Oddfellows—P. Peckard, Orillia, 1st; R. Pearce, London, 3rd; J. Payne, 3rd.

50 yard dash for boys under 15 years—Ross, 1st; McIntosh, 2nd; Andrews, 3rd.

Half mile race—Five started but only three finished—James Alexander of this city, won easily; D. Sutherland, Stirling, 2nd; Stanley Minns, city, 3r. Time 3 minutes 18 3 5 sec.

Hop step and jump—J. Alexander, 1st; 36 feet; George Ketcheson, 2nd.

Five mile motor cycle race—Lamore, 1st; Herington, 2nd; Russell, 3rd. Time 8 min. 4 sec.

Half mile race for Oddfellows—Jas. Alexander, 1st; H. Ketcheson, 2nd, and M. Pickard, 3rd. Time 2.23.

Broad jump running—George Ketcheson, 1st; H. Ketcheson, 2nd; A. C. Sells, 3rd.

A DISAPPOINTMENT

A disappointing feature of the celebration was an unexpected accident, which befell the balloon ascension, which was to have been made by Dorothy Devonda. The wind during the early part of the afternoon was considered too strong to inflate the large balloon. At about 6 o'clock, when the greater number of spectators had left the ground, fire was started under the balloon for the purpose of inflating it and the huge canvas was about filled, when a gust of wind caused the balloon to sway. The interior went too close to the flame with the result that it caught fire. Those who were holding it beat a hasty retreat and the balloon ablaze went up in the air without the balloonist. It fell in the grounds but was badly burned. In fact one side was virtually destroyed. No one regretted the accident more than Dorothy Devona and those in charge of it. The loss was about $200, and there is no insurance.

The "Y's" at the House of Refuge

While moonlight swept the Bay of Quinte, making a scene of beauty from the balcony of the House of Refuge, inside the building was that sunshine which sheds gladness and light amid the dull sombreness of life's austerities.

Tuesday evening the place was invaded by the "Y's" in fulfillment of their purpose—"scattering seeds of kindness" and doing good.

Mr. Wilson and his staff heartily welcomed the visitors, and led them into the assembly room, where 70 or 80 of the inmates of the institution were seated. Under the presidency of the President of the "Y's," Mrs. Ray, with Miss Sheffield as organist, a well arranged programme of sacred song was rendered. Several hymns were sung, in which the people present, old and young, joined. Rev. A. M. Hubly read the 71st Psalm and offered prayer. During the exercise of an hour and a half, there were solos by Mrs. Hunter, Dr. Dormer and Mr. Wrightmyer. There were duets by Mrs. Ray and Mr. Wrightmyer, by Mrs. Ray and Miss Price, and by Mrs. Ray and Miss Flint. There was a quartetto by Mrs. Ray, Miss Flint, Mr. Wrightmyer and Dr. Dormer. The Glory Song was rendered by the company. A quantity of confectionery was given to the matron for distribution to the inmates in the morning. Mr. Hubly presented the greetings and good wishes of the president, officers and members of the "Y's" to the staff and inmates of the place.

A pleasant evening was brought to a close with the doxology and benediction.

FIRE ON A SCHOONER

KINGSTON, Aug. 13.—A small fire which broke out on the schooner Acacia, at the foot of Queen Street, at 12.30 o'clock (noon) Tuesday, gave the firemen the first run they have had since July 22nd.

The blaze was of a small nature. It started near the smokestack, and was extinguished in short order. The damage will amount to a couple of dollars.

Now that the "hoodoo" has been broken, the firemen are looking for a rush of calls. This is the longest spell the fire fighters have had without a run in some time.

SAYS WIFE SKIPPED OUT

A Kingston Greek is looking for his wife, whom he claims has skipped out. He stated that when she left his home there also disappeared $75 of his money and he is very anxious to locate her. He says that his wife was at home when he went to his work on Monday morning but that when he returned at noon she was missing, also her trunk and the $75.

CIVIC HOLIDAY DRAWS BIG CROWD TO CITY

For a civic holiday, Belleville was fairly alive with people yesterday, the crowd being augmented by visiting Odd Fellows, whose trim uniforms and badges attracted attention wherever seen. The Rebekahs, as on the day previous, were in evidence at very turn, and apparently enjoying their sojourn in our pretty city. Belleville Lady Honored in Toronto

The following is clipped from Saturday's edition of the Toronto News:

"The resignation of Miss R. L. Stewart, for several years Superintendent of Nurses at the Toronto General Hospital, has been accepted by the Board of Trustees.

FIRE ON A SCHOONER

KINGSTON, Aug. 13.—A small fire which broke out on the schooner Acacia, at the foot of Queen Street, at 12.30 o'clock (noon) Tuesday, gave the firemen the first run they have had since July 22nd.

The blaze was of a small nature. It started near the smokestack, and was extinguished in short order. The damage will amount to a couple of dollars.

Now that the "hoodoo" has been broken, the firemen are looking for a rush of calls. This is the longest spell the fire fighters have had without a run in some time.

The Slot Machines To be Taken Ou

The Ogdensburg Store Keepers Will Heed Orders of County Officials.

ODGENSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 13.—The authorities are again active in the abolishment of the penny machines and other gambling devices of this city.

Detectives sent out by a state society for the purpose of investigating into the use of these machines recently visited Ogdensburg and obtained a list of places where the machines were being run. This list was sent to the sheriff of the county, Thaddeus Day, with the request that the law against this kind of gambling be rigidly enforced.

The county authorities acted at once and the sheriff paid a visit to this city last week and went to the different places where machines were alleged to have been in use. The proprietors were notified that henceforth the law against these would be rigidly enforced and anyone convicted of having the machines in use would be subject to fine and imprisonment, or both.

The machines have been removed from the various stores and it is probable they will not appear again.

Soldiers Fired Through Coffin of Dead Ruler

Body of Tancred Auguste, Slain President of Hayti, is Filled with Bullets.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Arriving today on board the steamship Alvingia, of the Atlas line service from Port au Prime, Hayti, Mr. Marfield Kent, who is connected in an important capacity with the National Railways of Hayti, gave new sensational facts concerning the riots which attended the death and funeral service of Tancred Auguste, the president of Hayti who was killed by the explosion in the palace on May 2.

According to Mr. Kent, the rioting, which followed the tragedy in the palace, did not compare with the riots on the day of the funeral, May 4, which started in the Cathedral, at Port au Prince, when twelve soldiers, of the guard of honor, fired their guns through the coffin of the president as it stood before the altar. Instantly the entire Cathedral was in an uproar and twenty Americans who had gone to the services had difficulty in escaping from the Cathedral without injury.

The entire republic of Hayti was in a state bordering on anarchy after the death of the president, and rioting in streets of the capital were frequent on May 2. The following day the trouble died down to some extent and a State funeral was arranged.

At the Cathedral lives of soldiers, some in uniform, some in silk hats and nearly all barefoot and ragged, were drawn up as a guard of honor. Six of these soldiers stood on each side of the coffin and when the "General" ordered them to present arms, they either misunderstood, or wilfully disobeyed, and raising their guns to their shoulders fired twelve bullets into the coffin of the President.

A square deal is all a man wants—but he wants to be the judge of its squareness.

SAMSON HASKELL OF BENTLEY

CHAPTER V.

Samsonian Strength

The bad feeling between the young men of the village and the boys of the upper hills originated in a school house at Williard's Corner, where a neighborhood prayer meeting was being held under the auspices of the Bentley church, the pastor of which had been holding religious services in different sections of the district since the great revival, with most encouraging results. A delegation of young people had come up to assist in the singing, which with a large turnout of people from the hills, resulted in a full house.

The service of song had been most inspiring, the prayers convincing, and the preacher was in the center of an interesting discourse, when a burly fellow, one of a gang from the upper hills that had come down to the meeting for the purpose of amusing themselves at the expense of the worshippers, created a disturbance at the rear of the room. Twice had he been requested to exhibit a more respectful demeanor, but continued to use insulting language, until, feeling that the disturbance had been carried too far, William Feltus, of the village delegation, ordered him from the building. Without warning the mountaineer delivered a blow that nearly sent Feltus to the floor, resulting in a pitch battle in which half a dozen of Bentley's husky sons were pitted against double the number of "bushwackers", as they had been nicknamed. For a few moments the minority side held its own, but being outnumbered, soon began to give way, and when Henry Rollins was finally knocked down, and a ruffian from the hills had kicked him in the face, a cry of protest arose from the women, and Delilah Gaylord, rushing to where Samson Haskell sat near the platform, exclaimed excitedly: "Sam Haskell, are you agoing to let them mountain brutes kill our boys for want of a strong arm?"

"I reckon them Philistines have had their way long enough," and quietly walking to where the fight was in progress, picking his man as he went, he grasped the largest of the mountaineers, and an instant later a form sailed through a window, taking the glass and entire sash with him. Before the worshippers knew what had happened a dozen lay on the ground without, bruised and battered by the fall, and retiring to his seat, where he had been drinking in every word uttered by the minister, Samson said, a smile playing about his mouth the while: "I reckon we won't have any more boy's play, Elder, so if you'd jest as soon, I'd like to hear the rest of your sermon."

So quickly was the act performed, and so easy the effort, that a murmur of admiration for his herculean strength was heard through the room.

But while no further disturbance was attempted that night, and the intruders quietly wended their way home, it was not thought that Samson's sudden ending of the fight was the end of the incident, and as he lifted Theresa Harding into his carriage, for they had come up together, many warnings for his safety were offered, and even Delilah Gaylord, who had Henry Rollins for an escort, publicly thanked young Haskell for his timely interference.

"I notice Delilah knew who to go to for help when she saw Henry being kicked by that great brute," suggested Theresa, in a satisfied voice, as they drove toward home. "She knew you were the only one in the house who could stop the fight, and it meant a good deal for her to ask you, after the way she has always treated you. If Delilah Gaylord don't turn your way yet, it will be because you haven't the spunk to take what belongs to you."

"There hain't no use trying to force matters as far as Delilah is concerned," said Samson. "The Lord hain't inclined her heart in my direction yet. And it hain't possible to turn her agin any idee she has set her mind on, lest there is more'n ordinary good reason for it. Delilah Gaylord will make me an awful good wife when she gets round to it. But she won't be hurried into any sech relations with nobody; she hain't made up on that plan. She'll wait 'till she's good and ready, and won't stand fer interference from nobody. Howsomever, when she gets ready to put on the double harness for a trip through life, she'll find Samson Haskell on hand to hitch on to his end of the whiffletree."

"I think she took the first step toward putting on her half of the harness to-night," said Theresa, in a half joyous voice.

"How's that?" asked Samson, vainly trying to hide his interest.

"Well, I heard her tell Henry Rollins that 'Samson Haskell was the only real man in the house,' and she didn't make any bones of telling him straight to his face. As you've found out by this time, Delilah Gaylord always says what she thinks of a person in plain English, and there's no back fence talk about it. When she begins to like you, Samson, you'll find it out; but, as you say, she'll take her own time about it."

"Did she tell Henry that after the fight to-night?"

"It was after you tossed them big fellows through the window, and you were telling the elder to go on with his sermon."

"Oh, that wa'n't nothing," he replied carelessly. Yet there was an unusual ring to his voice which Theresa was quick to detect. "I allus was powerful strong, and them fellers seemed jest like sticks of cordwood in my hands. I jest took 'em by the neck of their coats and their pants, and they had to go. That's all there was to it."

"But strength in a man is what Delilah admires. And you done it so handsomely, too, without even striking a blow."

"If Delilah has that feelin', I reckon she will see more of it about cattleshow time. If them fellers hain't on hand to revenge themselves on us Bentley boys, then I'm mistaken in my kalkilations."

"She'll say something to me about it when I see her, and I'll tell you what she thinks. Of course, we're both interested, as you know."

"Yes, I know, Theresa. If she decides to favor me for better or worse, you'll be sure of Henry, for next to Delilah, he likes you best. And I want to say right here, Theresa, I appreciate the way you've stood by me all these years. If it wa'n't that me and you hain't gaited to hitch up together, I wouldn't go a step further for a wife. But the good Lord has His plans and them plans are, Delilah for me, and Henry for you. I'm jest as sure of that as that me and you are setting side by each in this waggon. Delilah may twist, an' jump, an' pull on the rope, but she'll have to drink out of the same trough with Samson Haskell when the Lord says the word, an' there hain't no gettin' away from it. So if we can exercise enough patience to wait until she tires of pulling at her end of the rope, it will be the more satisfactory to us."

"Delilah told me she was getting about tired of teaching school. She's been at Crow's Corner three years, and while the committee has raised her pay three times because she has done so well with the children, she begins to see that there is work to be done at home, which needs her more than the school."

"That's one sign that she's getting ready for a change," laughed Samson. "Any more indications, Theresa?"

"She told Henry that she liked to ride behind your chestnuts; and it didn't take you forever to drive her over to the school Monday mornings. And she told me she almost dreaded the ride home Friday evenings, for Henry wanted to talk too much about himself, while you were willing she should do most of the talking, if she wanted to; Delilah always did like a good listener. And she said you never talked about anybody behind their backs, as Henry does. He said something about you last Friday night when he was driving her home, and she stopped him quick. She just told him she didn't allow her friends to be rediculed, and if he did it again she should ask you to drive her both ways, 'stead of just bringing her to the school Monday mornings. She said you had always been a friend to her in spite of her meanness to you, and she wouldn't stand for anything being said about you."

"I hope she hain't getting tired of Henry", said Samson, meditatively.

"You don't hope anything of the kind," exclaimed Theresa, indignantly. "It would please you better than anything in the world. And I'm sure it would please me. There's got to be a change somewhere or none of us will come into our own."

"Be that as it may, Theresa; but it will never do for me or you, or both of us to take a hand in separating them. It would make me feel like a horse thief every time I met Henry. Much as I think of Delilah Gaylord, and much as I would do for her, I would lose her forever before I'd do a mean caper to get her. When I got religion, I promised the Lord that I'd treat others as I'd be treated, and I shall take the practice into love affairs as well as business affairs. And I believe Delilah would uphold me in it."

"You are right, Samson, and Delilah has been watching you close since the Evangelist had such a time landing you. She said at the time that you were the biggest catch of the whole revival, and she meant it in more ways than one."

"And I want Delilah should always find me faithful. If she thinks I'm walking consistently in the straight and narrer way, it means that I'm doing it, whatever anybody else may say." There was a tenderness in the young man's voice that bespoke the sincerity of his words; and his companion could but acknowledge the conviction that come what might, Samson would never waver in his determination to spread to the farthest extent possible the influence of the Gospel of Chirst. The change in his life had meant much to him and to those with whom he associated, and it would never do to lower the standard as he understood it.

"As Henry claimed the privilege of going for Delilah on Friday, I was satisfied to take her over Monday mornings; and I notice them chestnuts allus got her to the school on time, if they did have to step lively some times,' said' Samson; "and as Henry objected to my driving her more'n one way, I was satisfied with the half loaf, seeing her father had asked me to make the Monday morning trips. Henry wanted both ends of the week when Delilah first took the school, but I stuck to by knitting, and now I'm glad that she was pleased with my chestnuts, if she didn't care so much for my company."

"There is more to Delilah than appears on the service, and some of her ways are past finding out, lest she sees fit to confide them to some girl friend, which ain't very often," said Theresa. "But she did tell me that she had purposely been late several times when the sleighing was good, just to see how fast them chestnuts could go, and she found out by being pelted most blind by snowballs from their feet. If you ever get Delilah, Samson, she'll claim them chestnuts as her very own."

"And she can have them and welcome," was the hearty reply.

RHEUMATISM KEPT HIM IN BED

Suffered Tortures Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

McMillan's Corner, Ont.,
Sept. 30th. 1910

"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything—it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw spots. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. If this letter would be of value to you, publish it" JOHN B. McDONALD.

Indeed, this letter is of value to us and to the thousands of sufferers from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago and Neuralgia. It points the way to a certain cure. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CLOSING SESSION OF GRAND LODGE I. O. O. F.

Splendid Progress Made by Order Throughout Ontario--Final Reports, and Financial Disbursements

The Finance Committee endorsed action of Executive in sending $1,000 to Ohio flood sufferers, voted $500 to Patriarchs Militant, $100 to Grand Secretary to attend Sovereign Grand Lodge at Minneapolis, $1,000 to Grand Master for coming year, $150 to D.G.M. and $100 to Grand Warden, $100 to maintain a tent at Toronto Fair, recommended that General Purpose Committee invest funds in good bonds that can be sold quickly if needed, instructed General Purpose Committee to lease office rooms in New I.O.O.F. Temple on College street, Toronto, for term of five years at $1,200 a year, fixed salary of Grand Secretary at $3,000, Grand Treasurer at $400, Assistant Grand Secretary at $800, and voted Chairman on Laws of Subordinates an extra $100 for this year.

Report of Rebekah Degree Committee showed increase for year of 1,760, present membership 10,294, of which 6,386 are sisters. Eleven new lodges instituted and two resuscitated.

The committee on legislation referred reference to special act of incorporation by the Ontario Legislature to a special committee for report on same at next session. Same committee recommended change in constitution of subordinates, clause 127, in conformity with Sovereign Grand Lodge Legislation allowing lodges to set aside a sum not exceeding ten per cent. of general funds for a contingent fund, from which payments can be made for Past Grand Jewels, etc.

Committee on Election Returns recommended in favor of returning to former system of electing Grand Lodge officers, i.e., each Past Grand in lodge vote for one candidate and in case no choice is made the officer shall be elected by representatives at Grand Lodge. Report was adopted.

Committee on State of the Order recommended that G. M. appoint a committee of four to co-operate with other branches of the Order in regard to establishing of a First Aid Association in connection with the Order, and $300 was appropriated to meet expenses of said committee; same committee recommended that system of having the Odd Fellows' Relief Association co-operate in institution of new lodges be continued. Re using of emblem of the Order for the furthering interests of insurance societies or companies, a resolution was adopted that secretaries be prohibited from giving a list of names of members to persons not in the order when it is known that such lists are to be used for private business purposes. The Grand Master is to issue a circular re same.

A clause was added to constitution that Financial Secretary embody in his semi-annual returns a list of members who are six months or more in arrears.

The Grand Lodge was addressed by Grand Master Turner and Grand Secretary Deering of Manitoba; Grand Master F. J. Greifenstein and Grand Marshal E. A. Allan, of New York, and Past Grand Master Burrows, of Connecticut.

The special committee on the Home submitted report in which the Trustees of the Home transferred the property over to the Grand Lodge. Grand Lodge bylaws were amended permitting lodges to elect alternative representatives to Grand Lodge. A new clause was inserted that candidates for Grand Lodge offices who shall send circular letters or countenance sending of same in their behalf for election shall be subject to expulsion or suspension. Clause re District Committee was inserted fixing the allowance at $3 per diem and 5 cents per mile and expenses of District Committee shall be paid by assessment on lodges pro rata.

The bylaws governing the Home were adopted by Grand Lodge. The bylaws provide for election of eleven trustees who shall have the government of the Home, six trustees to be elected by Grand Lodge, two by Grand Encampment, two by Rebekah Assembly and the Grand Master. The six elected by Grand Lodge were P.G.M.'s Hornibrook and Turner for three years, P.G.M.'s Johnston and Donogh for two years, and P.G.M.'s Evanson and Brett for one year.

The per capita tax of 20 cents per member per year was continued. Grand Secretary was instructed to procure 3,000 copies of bylaws. Home Trustees are to refer annually to Grand Lodge. A motion by P.G.M. Hornibrook to amend the constitution to provide that representation in Grand Lodge should be based on the membership on December 31st previous was not adopted.

Representative Carscadden gave notice of motion to reduce the membership in Grand Lodge to one for the first 150 members and two delegates if membership is over 150.

The Special Committee on Per Capita reported against any reduction in the per capita assessment.

Past Grand Master Hoyle presented the report of the Committee on Laws of Subordinates, and concisely pointed out the necessity of the lodges adhering more closely to the laws and regulations of the Grand Lodge in connection therewith, more particularly in reference to the payment of sick benefits.

Past Grand Master Hornibrook submitted the report of the Judiciary Committee, which confirmed most of the decisions of the Grand Master.

The Committee on Election Returns announced the election of the following officers: Grand Master, P. F. Coupland, St. Mary's; Deputy Grand Master, D. M. McIntyre, Toronto; Grand Warden, L. B. Cooper, on the 90th ballot, Belleville; Grand Secretary, William Brooks, Toronto; Grand Treasurer, W. J. McCormack, Toronto; Grand Representative, S. A. Paplestone, Blyth.

W. H. Hoyle submitted a report in the matter of inter-provincial relations with the other Canadian jurisdictions, which report will be referred to the next session.

The session of the I.O.O.F. Grand Lodge was concluded at noon today by the installation of officers for the ensuing year, the installation being conducted by the retiring Grand Master, F. S. Evanson, of Prescott.

The Advisory Committee on the Relief Association reported that the membership of the latter was over 28,000 and the condition of the association satisfactory.

The Grand Lodge Executive was empowered to select a design for the Past Grand jewels, and provide for the manufacture and sale of them through the Grand Lodge.

The Committee on Districts recommended changes, which were adopted. The lodges at Pioneer and Manitou were transferred to Sudbury district; lodges at Russell, Maxwell and Vankleek Hill were placed in Kemptville District, No. 39; Connaught Lodge placed in Eastern District, No. 38; Home Lodge in No. 25; Lincoln Lodge in Welland District; Keppel Lodge in No. 25; Bothwell District was obliterated, and lodges placed as follows: Bothwell, Thamesville and Florence, in No. 2 District; Alviston in District No. 14; Newbury and Glencoe in London District; Lucknow Lodge was transferred to Wingham District No. 22; Lanark and Renfrew Districts were amalgamated, to be known as Renfrew No. 43.

Toronto was selected as the place of meeting next year.

Harvey Clarke of Elora was elected Grand Lodge Auditor.

Many were nominated for the position of Grand Warden, the same being secured by L. B. Cooper of this city.

The officers for 1913-14 were then installed.

Retiring Grand Master Evanson was presented with a P.G.M. jewel. Grand Master Coupland made appointments and Grand Lodge adjourned.

Belleville Baseballists After Kingston Team

KINGSTON, Aug. 14.—President Trotter of the City League baseball executive received a letter this morning from the manager of the Grand Trunk baseball team of Belleville wanting to come here and play one of the city, league teams next Saturday. As Gouverneur will be playing here then it is impossible to have them on that date but arrangements will likely be made to have them come here on either the 23rd or 30th of this month. This team won the Belleville city league trophy last year and are playing fine ball this year.

EDUCATIONAL BELLEVILLE A SPLENDID SHOWING

By the kind permission of the Editor of this paper, the writer will review the educational standing of Belleville for the past year. The results from the Kindergarten to the Honour Matriculation Form of the High School have been simply wonderful, in nearly every class or form from 90 to 100% being successful. Never before has Belleville had such a glorious experience, and it is safe to say that few, if any towns or cities in Ontario, can boast a similar record.

The results are as follows:

Entrance to High School, city pupils, all passed except about half a dozen.

Lower School, Primary Examination for Normal Entrance, 23 out of 28.

Final Examination for Normal Entrance, 18 out of 25.

Entrance to the Faculty of Education, 11 out of 11.

Junior Matriculation, 10 complete passes, and 4 partial passes out of 15.

Honour Matriculation, 3 out of 3.

Seventy two High School students wrote, and of these 11 failed completely and 4 partially (8 subjects or more). Eight students made a double score, as they passed on both Junior Matriculation and Normal Entrance. Not counting the doubles, this would give a total showing for the High of 85%, or all considered it would be approximately 90%.

Thus it will be seen at a glance that results may be considered as fully satisfactory, but it must be admitted that as a general rule, too much stress is laid on mere examination results. The true worth of educational work cannot be measured by figures, for it is not so much of the head as of the heart, and we have no measures or tests of these results. The proper question is not "How many passed, and how many secured honors"? but rather, "How many of our boys and girls are more truly manly and womanly than they were a year ago?" The few who failed are entitled to honours in this respect for they may have worked bravely and well, under very discouraging and distracting circumstances, as is often the case, and was this year in at least some well known instances. The writer firmly believes that our boys and girls will stand the test of higher manhood and womanhood when the test of practical affair has tried them.

How Did it Happen?

As a rule the teachers receive all the credit for good years and all the blame for bad ones. This is entirely wrong like some other popular conceptions. Teachers in past years toiled just as hard and just as conscientiously. Success or failure in school work is always the result of more than one influence. It is true that the teachers worked hard and splendidly together, and that the Principal proved himself to be a success at organization and management, but beyond that it would not be wise to go. This applies not only to our High School but to each of the Public Schools. Our prominent citizens have stated in private and in public, during the past year, that this city has excellent teachers and that it was fortunate to secure them.

Other Influences at Work

The great interest taken in education in this city by our School Board and by the parents, has had much to do with the results of this year. The boys and girls were inspired in their studies as never before, for who could be present at the dedication of the new schools last fall and ever forget it?

Our students have shown a remarkable spirit this year, and such as could only mean a desire to show their gratitude and appreciation for what had been done for them with the certain hope that what still remained crude would in due time be made at least respectable. Children and teachers can only show results under proper conditions.

It has been hinted by a few of our citizens that the Education Department found it necessary to be more merciful than usual this year in view of the great scarcity of teachers and an impending election at no very distant date. Granted that this may have been a factor in the results, would anyone for that reason, deprive our students of all the glory and nobility of their year's work. Those who know the situation best, believe that such a construction would be unjust and fatal to future good work. Children must receive the praise that they deserve or they become discouraged.

In concusion let all enjoy their reward to the fullest extent, for all have had a share in the great success that has come to our city: School Board, parents, students, teachers, and, if you wish, the Education Department.

Can this be done every year? Are we always likely to have so favourable a combination of circumstances?
